guns and roses!

(SYNOPSIS !)

Having your best friend leave out of the blue and won't even let you come with, easily le Arden in a never ending heartbreak for centuries. It was understandable really.

If your best friend suddenly didn't want you around that is kind of odd is it not?

Perhaps he just. . .grew tired of constantly spending time with her. Yet, he could've just asked for a little space and Arden would give it to him in a heartbeat. Space was always good and needed sometimes.

Or perhaps, it was the fact that they began to get a little too close. That fact could easily want him to distance from her, which could possibly be acceptable.

But over time, Arden didnt care about the 'perhaps' and the 'facts' because that was so hopelessly stupid. She kept coming up with different excuses because surely there were some sort of explanation.

Who wouldnt want to be with someone you love?

They were meant to be friends till the end. . . but someone didn't want to keep their side of the promise.

So as time went on (as it continuously did), she came to the conclusion that if he didn't want to be around her anymore, that's how it was going to be. She began to stop coming up with the small excuses when he could just tell her if he really wanted to.

However, it never really seemed as if he wanted to at all.

That being said, Arden made a promise to herself that she was never going to see Druig again.

And hopefully, unlike him, she'd keep that promise.

I love her as she is,
doing her thing;
I would never want
to control her fire;
All I need
is to be near it.
WE AINT EVER
