

An Endless Night With Him

An Endless Night With Him 211 Chapter 211: Introduce Him As Her Boyfriend

Katrina sits in front of the gravestone and talks to her dead father. After a long time, she glances at her watch and stands up. "Dad, take care. I'll visit again soon."

After leaving her father's grave, Katrina goes to the old caretaker to say goodbye. The caretaker will soon retire and go back to his hometown. Today could be the last day that they see each other.

For the first time, Katrina sees the old caretaker talking to another man by the cabin. The man has his back to her, obscuring his face from Katrina.

People seldom go to the cemetery. She wonders who the man is.

Family members usually visit their deceased relatives during commemorative holidays. Whenever Katrina visits the cemetery, she rarely meets someone else. Most times, she only sees the old man sitting silently on his own.

It's very strange to see another person besides her and the caretaker. Katrina doesn't think much of it and thinks that the stranger is another person visiting a deceased relative.

Before Katrina reaches the cabin, the caretaker sees her coming and waves enthusiastically at her. "Your boyfriend is here for you!"

Boyfriend? She had no idea who it was.

Katrina is surprised. Although she promised the old man that she would introduce her boyfriend to him the next time she visits, she just broke up with Marcellus yesterday. She doesn't have a boyfriend anymore.

Just then, the stranger turns around. Shock and disbelief flashes across Katrina's face when she sees the familiar face. Aaron? The devil suddenly comes to the cemetery. What is he doing here?

In contrast to Katrina's surprise, Aaron looks at her with fondness in his eyes. He approaches her and wraps his arm around her affectionately and says gently, "Sorry I'm late, honey. I wrapped things up at the company, and I'm all yours now." A devilish smile drew in Aaron's handsome face.

Katrina doesn't know what Aaron said to the caretaker, but she doesn't have the heart to contradict Aaron in front of the elder's happy wrinkled face.

For now, she will play along with it and pretend that Aaron is her boyfriend. Katrina smiles. "It's okay. I'm glad you're here."

Then she brings Aaron up to the caretaker. "This is my boyfriend," she introduces with great reluctance. To reassure the old man before he retires, she tries her best to look happy with Aaron.

Although Aaron knows that Katrina is only pretending for some reason, he feels inexplicable happiness. This is the first time that she introduces him as her boyfriend to someone else. Though he doesn't know her reason for playing along with him, he remains silent.

Elated, he holds Katrina closer. Right now, they are a couple in love.

Seeing the lovely match they make, the caretaker brightens up. "It's great to meet you! You look like a very capable young man. A person's face reveals the person's character, and you must be a good man, boy!"

Overjoyed, the elder keeps praising Aaron. The old man thought that is good for her. Besides a person's appearance, one's behavior can reflect a person's character.

To an outsider, Aaron is a graceful and well-spoken man. He comes to Katrina as soon as he finishes work. Besides being career-minded and responsible, he is also kind to Katrina.

Such a man is for keeps. The caretaker feels particularly optimistic about him.

"Oh, I was a bit disappointed when I didn't see your boyfriend earlier. But now, I can retire in peace." Turning to Aaron, he says, "Young man, your girlfriend is a good woman. For so many years, I watched her grow up. You better be good to her! Don't bully her, you hear me?"

For the first time, Katrina doesn't push Aaron away. Listening to the old man makes Katrina feel emotional.

The caretaker cares for her like a grandfather, asking her boyfriend to treat her well. Since her father's death, few people have shown their concern for her like this. In the face of a stranger's kindness, how could she not feel moved?

Aaron nods and promises, "I'll be good to her. Don't worry, and I'll take care of her. I love this woman so much, and I am willing to give her everything she wants,"

It will be harder to say goodbye if they stay. Katrina smiles and says, "Thank you for taking care of my father and me for all these years. I hope you enjoy your retirement."

"It's lonely facing the rows of tombstones every day in the cemetery. For so many years, you're the only one who visits regularly. You also accompany me and chat with me every time. I'm the one who should thank you."

The caretaker's job is considered unlucky by many people. People who visit the cemetery are reluctant to speak to him and usually avoid him. Only Katrina greets him with a smile.

Katrina's kindness makes it easy for him to care for her.

"Oh, I thought I'd wait a few more days for you to bring your boyfriend before I retire. But I guess that time has come. I'll call my grandson and ask him to pick me up and take me home!"

The elder's wrinkled face is full of indescribable happiness.

The lonely girl he worries about finally finds a good man. And he can finally go back to his hometown to enjoy the rest of his life.

He has no regrets. He can go home at last.

Katrina and Aaron sit on a stone bench outside.

After a while, an ordinary car comes up to pick the caretaker up. A man in his thirties gets out of the car and goes to the cabin.

While Aaron helps the newcomer to carry the caretaker's belongings to the trunk of the car, Katrina helps the old man into the car.

"Goodbye! I hope you two will always be happy together and get married soon!" "I wish you happiness and health in your old age!" Katrina waves goodbye as the car leaves.

An Endless Night With Him 212 Chapter 212: She is Grateful To Aaron

When the car disappears from sight, Katrina struggles out of Aaron's grasp. The previous sweet atmosphere vanishes in an instant. Keeping him at arm's length, she demands, "Aaron, why are you here?" She has never brought anyone to the cemetery before. How did Aaron know where she is? Katrina's sudden change makes Aaron feel upset.

Women can be so fickle. Earlier, she introduced him as her boyfriend. Now, she can't wait to get off of him, keeping away from his touch.

Instead of answering her question, Aaron strides in the direction of his car. After his morning meeting earlier, Aaron called Randy to ask if Katrina was awake.

But Randy told him that she had already left and that Katrina got off at a flower shop on J Road to buy a bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

From this, Aaron immediately figured out her whereabouts. Last night, Katrina kept holding his hand and crying out, "Dad, don't leave me." She must have come to visit her late father in the cemetery. Cemeteries are usually located in remote, sparsely populated suburbs far from the city.

Katrina just broke up with her boyfriend yesterday. She drank alone in the middle of the night. He can't trust her to go to such a remote place alone. What if something happens to her?

Without a second thought, Aaron left the office and drove all the way to the cemetery.

As he approached, he saw an elderly man drinking tea on a stone bench outside the cabin. Aaron went up to him and asked, "Did you see a young, beautiful girl around here?"

The elder looked up and saw a handsome young man in a suit.

At Aaron's words, the elder immediately thought of Katrina, who had just entered the cemetery. "She arrived a while ago. She's over there," he points to a direction, "You're..."

"I..." Before Aaron could speak, the elder suddenly said in delight, "Oh! You must be her boyfriend!"

Katrina has never brought anyone during her visits, but she had promised him that she would bring her boyfriend on her next visit. At Aaron's appearance, the old man naturally assumes him to be Katrina's boyfriend.

Aaron didn't deny it and nodded his head instead. "Yes, I'm her boyfriend." After finding out that Aaron was Katrina's boyfriend, the elder's face was full of joy.

The caretaker was happy that she found a tall and handsome guy to be her boyfriend. Such a sweet girl deserved a good-looking boyfriend.

Overjoyed, the elder asked curiously, "She said that you went on a business trip and couldn't come with her. Why are you back all of a sudden?"

Aaron smoothly went along with Katrina's lie. "I didn't think I could come back in time. But things were handled ahead of schedule, so I changed my flight to come back."

The caretaker smiled more brightly and nodded his head in approval. What a nice guy! he thought happily.

To get back as soon as possible, he even changed his flight. He must've gone straight to the cemetery after getting off the plane. He was willing to change his schedule for her. He must value her a lot.

Katrina will be surprised to see him, the elder thought. Aaron didn't venture to look for Katrina because he knew how much her father meant to her. Her father was a hero to her. She wouldn't take a stranger to see him. Aaron sat on the bench in front of the cabin, chatting with the old man and answering all his questions.

Aaron was such a busy man that he only took appointments with a handful of big business owners in Abbe City. No one would expect that such a businessman would someday sit on a stone bench and chat with a grave keeper.

Twenty minutes later, Katrina walked away from her father's grave to the cabin.

She didn't know how Aaron knew where she was, or why he followed her, but his arrival solved a problem weighing on her mind.

Aaron's cooperation made the old man believe that she had a good boyfriend. It reassured him enough to go back to his hometown without regrets.

For that alone, Katrina was grateful to Aaron.

Aaron gets into his car. Katrina just follows him quietly, pulling the door of the passenger seat open and getting in. They haven't had a quiet moment like this for a long time.

For once, Katrina doesn't pick a fight with Aaron. Usually, she would be glaring daggers at him by now. She would leave eagerly, slamming the car door in a huff.

Today, Katrina doesn't lose her temper on Aaron. There is no reason to be angry with him. In the closed space, no-one utters a word. It's so quiet, and they can almost hear each other's breaths. Katrina is the first to speak, "Aaron, thank you for that."

She is grateful to him for his willingness to play along with her lie. She is grateful that he acted like a good boyfriend in front of the old man, even promising him that he would take good care of her.

Because of this, the old caretaker can finally set his mind at ease and retire smoothly. Katrina feels very grateful.

This is the first time that Katrina speaks kindly to Aaron since he arrived in Abbe City. Although it's just a simple sentence, he feels like he is in cloud nine.

He grunts coldly in response. "You owe me for more than that."

For her, he investigated the truth behind Marcellus's accident. Last night, he accompanied her while she drank all night and brought her home safely afterward. Despite being overcome with an intense desire for her, he ignored his urges and took a cold shower to restrain himself.

He has done so much for her than she knows. A simple "thank you" is not enough to repay him. Katrina is rendered speechless by Aaron's words. Aaron is right.

He had done so much for her. When he gave her evidence of Claire conspiring against her, she lost her temper and misunderstood his actions instead of believing him. She had thought the worst of him.

An Endless Night With Him 213 Chapter 213: Never Contact Each Other Again

For everything he had done for her, Katrina can let the past go. She can forget the fact that he imprisoned and maltreated her.

She only hopes that he won't trouble her again in the future." Katrina doesn't say a word to refute Aaron. She looks out of the window, deep in thought.

Aaron figures that Katrina is thinking about all his kindness to her. After a while, he asks, "Where are you going? I'll drive you. I still have enough time to accompany you," He smiled after saying those words.

After the break-up yesterday and the long trip to the cemetery today, Katrina is physically and mentally exhausted. She doesn't have the strength to do anything. All she wants to do is go home and sleep in her bed.

Since Katrina has already gotten into the car, she doesn't need to be difficult. She doesn't refuse Aaron's offer and lets him take her back. "I'm going home," she replies.

Aaron is taken aback by Katrina's passiveness. In the past, she would have never let him take her home so easily. Intent on keeping her distance from him, she always avoids him like the plague.

This time, it seems Katrina is taking off her prickly armor. She transforms from a defensive hedgehog into a docile rabbit. The change makes Aaron happy. A little hope from Aaron's perspective makes his heart move.

Has she realized that he isn't her enemy? Is she finally willing to accept him? Would she give him a chance to love her? He wanted to ask her, but he chooses to keep it for himself,

He already told her that he is the only one who can be her man. He is the perfect choice for her. Now, she has finally broken up with her boyfriend, and her attitude towards him has mellowed down. He is very pleased with the way Katrina treated him.

The frustrating events of the past few days seem to be making a turn for the better. It feels like he is a step closer to getting back her trust and love. Though Aaron wanted to say something again, he prevented himself from forcing her.

Half an hour later, the car stops at Katrina's apartment. Katrina unbuckles her seatbelt, turns to Aaron, and says earnestly, "Aaron, thank you for bringing me home, and thank you for all you've done for me in the past few days."

Hearing Katrina's sincere gratitude makes Aaron feel strange.

This is the first time that he cared so much about a woman, the first time that he went through so much trouble to do all kinds of things for a woman.

Aaron believes that Katrina should appreciate his kindness to her, but when she finally expresses her gratitude, he feels a little embarrassed.

It's not a big deal.

Katrina is his woman. Everything he did for her is only a matter, of course. It should be gratifying to hear her sincere gratitude and get her recognition.

Before Aaron can reply, Katrina continues, "Aaron, we're even now. I'll forget what you did to me in the past, and I'll try to persuade myself not to hate you anymore. Let's go our separate ways and never contact each other again."

As soon as she finishes talking, she turns to leave the car.

Aaron is stunned into silence. His previous good mood suddenly turns into a thunderstorm. Are we even? Never contact each other again? What the hell?

Is she cutting him off completely? Does she want them to be strangers from now on? Will she pretend that he was never a part of her life?

What's the point of everything he did for her? Why did he go through all the trouble to move from Hadley to Abbe? What's the point of all the sleepless nights he had agonizing over her going on dates with another man?

To gain her forgiveness? To get her to stop hating him so they could become strangers? Absolutely not!

Aaron loves Katrina. Everything he did was to be with her, to make her choose him willingly. How did it suddenly turn out like this?

Katrina's words make Aaron's mood drop from cloud nine to the bottom of a valley. His previously relaxed and pleasant face suddenly darkens. The atmosphere in the car becomes tense in an instant.

Aaron grabs Katrina's arm as she gets out of the car. Gripping her wrist tightly, he gnashed his teeth and growls, "Like hell! Katrina, you can't get rid of me so easily! It's impossible!"

Katrina always has a way of upsetting Aaron. One blow from her and his good mood vanish in an instant. If she wants to express her gratitude only to even things out between them, he won't let her.

Now Aaron is angrier than he has ever been, even more upset than when he saw Katrina with Marcellus. Caught up in his emotions, Aaron grips Katrina's wrist tightly. He is afraid that she will disappear from his life and that he will never have the opportunity to express his intentions again.

Aaron's strong grip is like a clamp around Katrina's delicate wrist. Katrina frowns at the pain. "Aaron, let me go. You're hurting me."

Katrina's whimpering snaps Aaron back to his senses. Even if he is furious with her, he doesn't want to hurt her.

He loosens his grip and moves over her to close the half-open door, locking her in the car as he speaks his mind. "We're even? Katrina, you'll never be able to cut me off from your life!"

Katrina rubs her sore wrist. There are red marks on her skin.

She doesn't expect that Aaron would be so determined on this issue that he would persistently refuse to give in. They are worlds apart. It would be better to separate peacefully, return to their respective circles, and live their own lives.

She already told him that she's going to put all his transgressions against her in the past. She already said that she would stop hating him.

Why won't he let her go?

An Endless Night With Him 214 Chapter 214: You Can't Marry Me

Katrina becomes anxious. She turns around and snaps, "Why not? Aaron, you should find someone else. Nothing can happen between us, and you can't marry me! Your family will never accept me! Stop wasting your time on me!"

Even if Katrina wants to believe that Aaron keeps badgering her because he loves her, also if she believes that he doesn't want to hurt her...

From her experience with Marcellus, she now knows that people who belong in different classes are not meant to be. It's difficult for a poor orphan to be with someone from the upper class.

Katrina knows herself well, and she doesn't want to face this situation again. She doesn't want to be abandoned like a toy after investing herself in a relationship.

Besides, she doesn't need to have a rich or capable boyfriend. He may be just an ordinary employee, with a steady monthly salary. Even if he didn't give her a luxurious life, as long as he treats her well, as long as they love each other, it would be enough.

They can motivate each other to work hard and support each other through everything. They will save money to buy a house and pay the mortgage. They will create their own family and strive for a better life. They can even get pets and have a garden in their backyard.

And they will do all of these together. They can be happy together every day, without any worries or anxieties.

Their love will not be opposed by anyone. No one will secretly question their compatibility. This is the kind of love Katrina wants.

A superior man like Aaron is definitely not her choice. She already learned her lesson from her relationship with Marcellus. She doesn't want to get hurt again.

Aaron's identity and background are both more prominent than Marcellus's. She doesn't want to cause any unnecessary trouble.

Aaron knows what Katrina means. She doesn't think she fits with a person of his background because Marcellus's mother doesn't accept her. She belittles herself and thinks that she doesn't deserve to be with him. She firmly believes that nothing can happen between them.

Does she think all his devotion to her is only superficial? If all he wants is a casual fling, he could have forced her to sleep with him through other means.

He wants to grow old with Katrina. He wants her to like him, depend on him, and stand by him willingly. That's why he went through so much effort and changed so much.

But after everything, she doesn't believe his seriousness at all. Aaron doesn't say anything as he releases her. He steps on the gas and turns the car around before Katrina can leave.

Katrina watches Aaron helplessly while he drives without telling her where they are going. Right now, he looks particularly gloomy. She is afraid that he will do something bad to her in his anger. She asks warily, "Aaron, where are we going?"

Aaron keeps his eyes on the road ahead. "Civil Affairs Bureau." Taken aback by the answer, Katrina exclaims, "Aaron, you're crazy!"

Aaron slams on the brakes and whirls around to stare into her eyes seriously. "I'm not crazy! Stop telling me over and over again what kind of woman I deserve, I can see clearly my own heart! You are the woman I want!"

"I'm serious about being with you. I want to marry you and grow old with you. This is not a casual fling for me. If you don't believe I'll marry you, we can get our marriage certificate right now!"

"You can rest assured that after we are registered, I will have a lawyer convert all my property into joint ownership between us. A divorce will cost a lot, and I will never divorce you!"

"Besides, my mother has already passed away. As long as I'm here, no one will dare to oppose our marriage, and no one will dare to speak ill of you. I will take care of you. I will not let anyone hurt you!"

Marcellus may not have the ability to protect her, but it doesn't mean that Aaron doesn't. He doesn't need anyone to approve of Katrina. As long as he loves her, that's enough. Everyone else's opinion is just garbage.

Aaron's words silence Katrina. In any case, she never expects him to promise to marry her and share half of his property with her. Hearing about his mother's death is also a surprise. The knowledge makes her feel a little bad for him.

Aaron looks very serious. It doesn't seem like he is lying. Given his character, Katrina knows that he doesn't need to deceive her by buttering her up with false promises.

Even though she has a deep prejudice against Aaron because of their history, Katrina is shocked to hear a man make such a commitment to her. Aaron must be crazy...

After a long silence, Katrina finally manages to respond. She rubs her temple and says, "Aaron, I'm really tired. I want to go home and rest. Can you let me out of the car?"

Katrina doesn't know how to deal with him sensibly. In any case, she absolutely does not want to marry him right now.

She just ended a relationship and broke up with Marcellus yesterday. Now Aaron wants to take her to the Civil Affairs Bureau to get a marriage certificate to prove his sincerity. What kind of woman does he take her for?

She is not the kind of woman who can jump from one relationship to another. She needs time to calm down and recover from the hurt and stress of breaking up with Marcellus.

Aaron is really impulsive for wanting to take her to the Civil Affairs Bureau to get a marriage certificate and make her his legal wife.

But Katrina would never do something so abruptly. She doesn't even like Aaron. Her current feelings for him are neutral at best.

Aaron doesn't say a word and unlocks the door, letting Katrina get off the car.

Katrina looks really tired right now, and her voice is hoarse. Seeing her so weak is unbearable to Aaron. He also realizes that he inadvertently insulted her in his determination to prove his sincerity to her. He has no choice but to let her go home to have a good rest.

Besides, the coming days will be far.

Now that Katrina has broken up with Marcellus, he doesn't have to worry about her dating other men constantly. He can give her time to move on and get over her last relationship. He has time to pursue her later.

Katrina can only become his woman. Aaron will not give her another chance to be with other men.

An Endless Night With Him 215 Chapter 215: Marcellus Call Her

It's been two weeks since Katrina broke up with Marcellus.

Katrina is sitting at her desk and writing a report when her partner Colin suddenly asks, "Katrina, why haven't you visited Marcellus recently?"

The question makes Katrina falter, and her hands stop moving.

They haven't been in touch with the breakup. She had deleted Marcellus's contact information in an attempt to get rid of him.

After two weeks, Marcellus must have gotten discharged already.

Back when she was with Marcellus, they used to talk on the phone every day. But now, it's as if he doesn't exist anymore. Her colleagues would definitely notice that something is different. No wonder her partner is curious. They used to see Katrina and Marcellus being together.

Noticing Katrina stiffens, Colin realizes that he was tactless. Katrina and Marcellus might have fought. No wonder she looks so sad and not in the mood recently.

Even if it's possible, Katrina's private life is her business, and no one has any right to ask intruding questions. Besides, Katrina might be sad for a different reason, and his question would only make her unhappier.

Colin smiles awkwardly. "Oh, the captain seems to be calling me, I'll go ahead." He stands up, ready to leave. Katrina knows Colin doesn't want to continue the conversation for fear of saying something that would hurt her.

But she and Marcellus have been separated for half a month already. They are never getting back together. She has to face the fact sooner or later. In the end, everyone will find out anyway.

Katrina purses her lips and says in calmly, "Marcellus and I broke up." "What?" Colin whips around and looks at Katrina incredulously. "What do you mean you've broken up?"

Katrina's announcement is a shock to everyone at the police station. They all stop what they are doing to listen to the news. Everyone originally thought that Katrina and Marcellus are only having a fight. Even if a couple gets along well, they are still bound to disagree sometimes.

But unexpectedly, they have skipped the cold war and have already broken up.

Katrina's colleagues witnessed Katrina and Marcellus's relationship develop from the beginning. They're a sweet couple who gets along well. They seemed perfect for each other. And everyone expected that the two of them would get married.

"Katrina, why did you suddenly break up? Don't get me wrong. We want to know the reason behind,"

It is completely unprecedented. They seemed to be getting along well, and there wasn't even a sign that there was a conflict in their relationship. But now they have apparently broken up.

Katrina smiles and says lightly, "No particular reason. Marcellus is perfect, but it seems we are not meant to be. Our life status doesn't seem to be matched with each other,"

Her explanation is simple. Although everyone feels very bad about the breakup, they stop asking questions.

Even if Katrina and Marcellus seem perfect for each other, only the couple would know if they are compatible or not. No one has the right to ask for more details or to persuade them to get back together again. They have to respect their decision.

Even though they have broken up, Katrina still speaks highly of Marcellus. She doesn't seem bitter about the breakup at all.

An amicable breakup is the best way to end a relationship if a couple discovers that they don't suit each other well. It's better than a bad breakup where the couple is bitter about each other.

But in any case, breaking up is still a shame. She couldn't prevent getting hurt slightly.

Colin pats Katrina on the shoulder in comfort. "Don't worry, Katrina. You're a natural beauty with a kind heart. You will meet a man who is perfect for you. And at the right time, he will be your husband,"

Katrina smiles at the kind words. "Thank you." Colin scratches his head with some embarrassment. "It's true."

Katrina is not only beautiful in appearance, but also in her personality. All her colleagues like her very much. Her sweet attitude makes everyone around her feel happy.

Everyone else goes back to work, and Katrina turns to her report and resumes typing on the computer. After a while, the landline phone on Katrina's desk rings. Thinking it's her captain calling to assign work, Katrina answers the phone without a second thought. "Hello."

A familiar voice responds, "Katrina, are you free tonight? Let's meet after work. About breaking up. It's better to talk about it in person because I wanted to know your reason,"

Katrina hasn't been in touch with Marcellus for a long time. Hearing his voice, all of a sudden is strange, and it seems to have a hint of sadness. He must have had a hard time coping with the breakup.

Hearing Marcellus's voice makes Katrina feel horrible. She is the reason he is depressed and hurting. He has always been an elegant gentleman with a sunny disposition. This is the first time for Katrina to hear him sound so hopeless.

This time, Katrina doesn't have the heart to refuse him again.

She thought that Marcellus had finally moved on, but she doesn't expect him to call her at work, hoping to meet up and talk things over. He hasn't given up on her.

Katrina doesn't know how he spent the past two weeks, but she thinks that talking to him in person might help him move on completely.

After a few seconds of silence, she finally responds, "Okay, where are you? I'll come to meet you after work."

Hearing Katrina's response makes Marcellus feel optimistic. Even his voice is suddenly full of life, and it doesn't sound as depressed as before. If she can agree to meet him, there's still a chance to get back together.

"Katrina, please wait for me at the station. I'll pick you up after work!" Katrina immediately refuses, "No, let's meet somewhere else."

She has already broken up with Marcellus. It's not appropriate to ask him to come over and pick her up. It would send the wrong message.

An Endless Night With Him 216 Chapter 216: Why Can't She Be Kind To Him?

Katrina's brutal rejection instantly kills all of Marcellus's hopes, making him understand her position on the break-up.

He is no longer her boyfriend, which means he can't pick her up at the entrance of the police station as he used to. Katrina is deliberately drawing a line with him. She is trying to make him understand their present relationship.

Marcellus was elated when Katrina agreed to meet with him, thinking that he still has a chance to win her back. Now he is filled with frustration and defeat once again.

But he should be happy that she agreed to meet him at all. Marcellus smiles and replies, "Okay, I'll wait for you at the coffee shop where we used to go. See you there."

"Okay, I'll come after work," Katrina replies. "I have to go, I'm a little busy right now."

After hanging up, Katrina palms her face wearily. Although she decided to break up with Marcellus, every time she talks to him, she always feels bad and gets a sense of loss.

She reminds herself that she was the one who decided to break up. She was the one who hurt him first.

But she decided to do it because of Claire. Despite Claire's objections, Marcellus kept protecting and defending her. She loves Katrina so much, even her mother, against their relationship.

Marcellus probably doesn't even know why she broke up with him.

The night of the break-up, Marcellus left the hospital and waited for her all night in front of her apartment. She discovered this from the old woman who lives next door when she returned home the next day.

Despite everything, Marcellus never complained about her and never harassed her with calls. His calm and gentle attitude, even in his depression, makes her feel even worse.

After work, Katrina immediately hails a taxi on the road and goes to the cafe to meet Marcellus. Every time they meet, he always arrives half an hour ahead of schedule. She doesn't want him to wait long.

When the taxi arrives at the entrance of the cafe, Katrina pays for the fare and pushes the door open. Through the windows, Katrina sees Marcellus sitting at their usual table. Although he looks very handsome in his suit, he doesn't seem as happy as he used to be.

He stares silently at the coffee in front of him with a distracted look in his eyes. The melancholy on his face is unmistakable.

Katrina watches him for a few seconds in silence. She takes a deep breath and is about to walk in when someone suddenly pulls her arm from behind.

When Katrina turns around, she finds Aaron looking down at her. "Katrina, what are you doing here?" She doesn't expect to meet Aaron right now. "Aaron, what are you doing here?"

In contrast to having no contact with Marcellus for the past two weeks, Aaron pops out of the blue to harass Katrina, reminding her of his existence. Bumping into him when she is meeting Marcellus instantly puts her on guard. "Aaron, are you following me?"

Aaron had done it before, even sending someone to follow her in secret. It's only natural that she would come to this conclusion.

Aaron's eyebrows raise slightly at the accusation. He taps her on the head in askance. "I'm not that idle! I have an appointment with a client today, but I didn't expect to see you standing here like an idiot when I got out of the car!"

Although Aaron doesn't hit her hard, Katrina still rubs her head on reflex. "You can go now!"

Aaron tilts his head to the side and looks inquiringly at her. "Katrina, what are you doing here? Are you sneaking around?"

His implication makes Katrina step back with an incredulous look on her face. "Sneaking around? I'm meeting a friend here!"

Which friend would make her so hesitant to enter the café? The thought makes Aaron curious. It doesn't seem that simple.

When he turns his head and looks in the direction Katrina was staring at earlier, he sees a familiar face. Katrina is meeting with Marcellus. At that moment, Aaron's mood instantly darkens.

He had waited a long time for Katrina and Marcellus to break up. In consideration of her recent break-up, he gives her time and space and doesn't pressure her despite wanting to see her.

Now she immediately starts meeting Marcellus again. What does she mean by this? Does she want to get back together with him?

Aaron feels as if his heart is bubbling with acid. He looks down at Katrina with anger and snaps, "Didn't you break up with him? Why are you meeting him now?"

Aaron's words directly poke at Katrina's weakness. She has also been wondering if she should meet Marcellus or not. She also has her doubts about meeting him.

In the face of Aaron's questions, she doesn't dare look him in the eye. She feels as if she is making excuses for herself when she replies, "I... I think it's better to break up and make it clear in person. Only this way can Marcellus move on and accept it."

"You didn't say that before," Aaron accuses.

Aaron's questioning leaves Katrina, no choice but to tell the truth. "Marcellus has done so much for me! I don't have the heart to refuse him when he said he wanted to meet up. It's our last meeting. What's wrong with getting some closure?"

Aaron growls, "What, you don't have the heart to refuse him on the phone, so you promise to meet him? If he keeps persuading you to stay, will you get back together with him again? Even if you have made up your mind if he says he will harm himself if you don't get back together with him, will you agree without a second thought?"

Katrina is kind to everyone, and he thinks it's ridiculous sometimes. No wonder she can be easily deceived and used by other people.

Aaron's heart clenches at the thought. Why can't she be kind to him?

An Endless Night With Him 217 Chapter 217: Be Easily Misunderstood

Katrina is aghast by Aaron's words. "No, I won't! I won't!"

In all honesty, Katrina doesn't know if she will get back together with Marcellus if he threatens to hurt himself. But she knows that he is not that kind of person, he won't force her that way. She trusts that he wouldn't manipulate her like that.

Katrina has no intention of getting back together with Marcellus. It won't happen just because they meet in person. Aaron is thinking too much.

All of a sudden, Katrina realizes that something is wrong with Aaron's questioning. She looks up defiantly at him and says, "I'll meet whoever I want! What I do is none of your business! I hope this will make you realize that I have my own life,"

After living under Aaron's oppressiveness for so long, Katrina immediately felt guilty for her actions and listened to him when he started interrogating for no reason. She felt bad the way Aaron treated her right now. She still didn't forget what he had done to her back in his villa.

This is between her and Marcellus. Even if she promised to meet him, there's nothing wrong with it. She shouldn't let Aaron affect her decisions and let herself fall under his control.

Katrina glares at Aaron and walks into the café in a bad mood. He has no right to scare her into changing her mind.

As Katrina steps away, she suddenly feels a heavy arm on her shoulder. She turns her head and sees Aaron standing next to her. Then he wraps his arm around her and walks inside without the slightest hint of uneasiness.

The action horrifies Katrina. She struggles out of his reach and hisses, "What the hell are you doing? Let me go! Please don't touch me! Are you out of your mind, Aaron?"

Katrina has nothing to do with Aaron, but the way he is holding her can be easily misunderstood. He is not only bullying her but also taking advantage of her. This damn bastard! This damn devil keeps bothering her!

Aaron keeps holding Katrina tightly, making it impossible for her to escape from his embrace. He snaps back, "Shut up! For the sake of your stupidity, I will go with you to prevent you from getting deceived by other men!"

Katrina is speechless. You're stupid! Your whole family is stupid! She thinks childishly.

Amidst her anger, she realizes that Aaron does have a point. She came here to have a closer relationship with Marcellus.

To tell the truth, Katrina is nervous. If Marcellus tries to persuade her, she doesn't know if she can deal with it. Although she won't impulsively get back together with him, she knows she will feel bad when she rejects him again.

If Aaron goes with her, it might be easier for Marcellus to give up if he sees that she has a new boyfriend, even if it isn't true. She doesn't even have to say anything. All she needs is for Aaron to cooperate with her.

Besides, Aaron has pretended to be her boyfriend before, and his acting was very convincing. With that in mind, Katrina stops struggling. She let Aaron wrap his arm around her waist.

Then she remembers why Aaron is here. While he leads her inside, she turns to look at him. "Hey, don't you have an appointment? How can a busy person like you have spare time to chase a woman?"

Aaron narrows his eyes and replies, "Let him wait!" Compared to work, Katrina is more important.

He can't stand to let her meet her ex-boyfriend and do nothing about it. It's an easy choice to make. To make Marcellus give up on Katrina, he will accompany her.

Katrina is rendered speechless by Aaron's answer.

This arrogant man always acts like he is the king of the world. How could she shamelessly stand someone up during their appointment?

While Katrina is a little resentful, she half-heartedly agrees with Aaron's idea. Sometimes, it is unavoidable to be crude to achieve one's goal.

In a blink of an eye, Aaron reaches Marcellus's table with Katrina in his arms. Katrina whispers, "Marcellus."

Marcellus turns to Katrina in a daze, not expecting her to arrive so soon. His face is immediately lit up with joy as he exclaims, "Katrina, you're here!"

Seeing the tall, handsome man who has his arm wrapped around Katrina's shoulder in an intimate and familiar gesture makes Marcellus stare in disbelief. "Katrina, he is..."

In all his time with Katrina, he never dared to put his arm around her in public. Even when they occasionally held hands, it was furtive and very discreet. But this stranger is hugging Katrina without any scruples.

Before Katrina could respond, Aaron introduced himself, "I'm Katrina's boyfriend. My name is Aaron."

Upon hearing the name, Marcellus's eyes widened in shock. The news of Aaron Wilson moving from Hadley City to Abbe City caused quite a stir. Everyone in the upper class has all heard of him.

He never expects to see him here today. More surprisingly, he doesn't expect him to be Katrina's new boyfriend. Marcellus feels a pang in his heart at the sight of them together. Does Katrina really like someone else? Does he have no hope of getting her back? Marcellus refuses to believe this. He turns to Katrina and asks, "Katrina, is this true?"

Katrina nods. She follows Aaron's lead and says with a bit of shame, "Yes, he's my boyfriend."

Aaron turns his head and kisses Katrina's hair, saying affectionately, "Honey, didn't you say you were tired? Sit down and rest your feet." Holding Katrina tenderly in his arms, he guides her to sit down, then sits next to her.

Marcellus's eyes glint with hurt at the sight of their intimacy.

It's only been two weeks since they broke up, and he thought he still had a chance of saving their relationship. He wanted to take advantage of this meeting to persuade Katrina to get back together, but he never expected this to happen.

How could he beg Katrina to take him back in front of her current boyfriend?

An Endless Night With Him 218 Chapter 218: Katrina Is My Woman

After sitting down, Aaron gently helps Katrina order a cup of coffee.

Then, he smiles and speaks to Marcellus, who is sitting across the table. "Mr. Brook, I've heard about you, you are Katrina's ex-boyfriend. Thank you for taking care of Katrina while you were together.

"It was love at first sight when I met Katrina in Hadley City. After she returned to Abbe City, I followed her here. Unfortunately, Mr. Brook beat me into asking her out before I had a chance. But when I heard that you two broke up the other day, I got the courage to go after Katrina again. Luckily, she didn't turn me down and gave me a chance.

"Mr. Brook, we both like the same girl, and in a way, it all seems like destiny. But..." Aaron takes Katrina back in his arms with a smile. "Since Katrina is my girlfriend now, please let go of your past. I beg your pardon, but I don't like it when other men covet my woman."

Although Aaron's tone is light, Marcellus can read between the lines.

Katrina is my woman. I don't care what kind of past you have, but she belongs to me now. I don't like other men thinking about my woman.

The threat is unmistakable in Aaron's words. From Aaron's appearance, Marcellus can easily judge that he is a rich man back in Hadley City.

If you dare think about pursuing my woman again, I'm afraid I won't sit down and have a chat with you next time. I'm not the kind of person you can mess up with.

On the surface, they seem to be having a friendly conversation without any tension. But as a lawyer, Marcellus can clearly understand what Aaron is actually saying. Compared to Marcellus's gentle personality, Aaron is domineering and arrogant. He realizes the man possesses a strong power.

After hearing Aaron's warning and seeing Katrina silently drinking coffee without denying what his words, Marcellus is deeply hurt.

It seems that he has no chance at all. He has lost Katrina completely. After loving her for so many years, in the end, she ends up with another man.

Katrina gave him a chance and dated him, but it seems he wasn't good enough. In the course of their relationship, she probably realized that she could not fall in love with him.

Love is something that happens naturally.

No matter how much Marcellus likes her, she doesn't like him back. He doesn't want to force her or keep her against her will. Most of all, she doesn't want her to stay with him and be unhappy even though she doesn't like him.

If she really likes Aaron and he can make her happy, Marcellus has no choice but to let her go and give his blessing. Despite all the pain and reluctance he feels, he cannot blame her.

True love is wishing happiness for your loved ones. And Marcellus is willing to give way for Katrina's joy.

There is a flicker of pain in Marcellus's eyes as he stares at Katrina silently. With a lot of effort, he says, "Katrina, if this is your choice, I want you to be happy."

Moving forward, Marcellus will not disturb Katrina again. He will no longer fantasize about being with her, or naively think that he can win her back.

If Aaron will be true to Katrina and love her with all his heart, he will let her go. But if he hurts her in any way, he will teach him a good lesson and get justice for her.

- After all, Katrina is the girl he loves deeply. The pain of losing someone you love before you can even realize it is heart-wrenching.

Katrina doesn't feel good to hear Marcellus's blessing. Seeing him hold his cup of coffee with trembling fingers, she can feel how sad and terrible he feels.

But he is still willing to bless her new relationship generously and does not question her decision. How could Marcellus accept defeat so gracefully?

Katrina looks down, not daring to look him in the eye. She is afraid to see the pain in his eyes. It would be too unbearable, and she would be consumed by guilt. Katrina says earnestly, "Marcellus, thank you for understanding."

Marcellus smiles, but his face is extremely pale. "In that case... Katrina, I won't bother you any longer. I have some work to do at home. I'll go ahead," he says, rising from his seat.

He can't bear to stay and watch his beloved woman to be intimate with another man. After experiencing such a painful rejection, he needs to leave.

It already took him a great deal of strength for him to keep his composure and look less miserable than he feels. If he stays any longer, he is afraid that he will break down.

Katrina knows that the scene she and Aaron orchestrated must have affected Marcellus a great deal. Perhaps Aaron was right, and this is the only way Marcellus can let her go completely. There is no other way for them to break up.

Katrina looks up and smiles at Marcellus. "Okay, Marcellus. Goodbye."

Watching Marcellus's back disappear little by little, Katrina feels all the strength drain out of her. The smile on her face vanishes instantly.

Marcellus is the best man she knows, the person who loves her and takes care of her the most. But today, she crushes him mercilessly. After everything he did for her, she let him down.

Though she knows that Marcellus will give up on her after today, seeing his lonely figure doesn't make her happy at all. Instead, she feels hugely depressed. It feels as if something is squeezing her chest painfully.

Marcellus is gone. There is no need to pretend anymore. Pushing Aaron away from her, Katrina covers her face with her hands in dejection.

Aaron looks at her with a sigh. "He's just a man without any ambition! But if you really can't give him up, I can get him back for you."

An Endless Night With Him 219 Chapter 219: Aaron Immediately Relen

"No." Katrina quickly grabs Aaron by the clothes when he stands up to leave.

She has finally ended things with Marcellus. Running after him in regret would be meaningless. Even if they get back together, Claire would never accept her. She still doesn't deserve Marcellus.

Aaron immediately relents.

He's not stupid, and he is only putting on a show. He's not generous enough to let them try again after Marcellus finally gives up.

Katrina is his. He needs to find a way to make her want to be with him willingly.

Aaron doesn't dare lose his temper on Katrina for grieving over another man. He doesn't want her to start hating him again.

But he doesn't want to see her like this either. There's no way he will sit quietly and accompany her like this. He grabs Katrina's arm and pulls her out.

Katrina asks frantically, "Aaron, where are you taking me?" Aaron doesn't even look back. "You'll find out later." "Don't you have an appointment?" He already made somebody wait so long, what is he doing now? Aaron says flatly, "I'm not going." Katrina is speechless. What a capricious and arrogant man! Won't his business partner mind?

In the end, Katrina is too upset and doesn't have the strength to refuse him. She is literally pushed into the car, and moments later, they are in the biggest arcade center in Abbe City.

Katrina looks at the lively arcade, where many young people are playing games. She rarely visits such places and turns to Aaron with a puzzled look on her face. "Why did you bring me here?"

A company CEO like Aaron seems even less likely to go to these kinds of places. He would probably go to a high-end club or something similar instead. A noisy arcade seems unsuitable for someone of his identity.

"Stupid woman, it's an arcade, of course, we're here to play games!" Aaron ignores the noise and pulls Katrina's arm, heading to the front desk.

He takes out a wad of money from his wallet, exchanges it for hundreds of game coins, and goes inside to check which game to play.

There are many different kinds of games in the arcade, and the closest game is a dance machine. Aaron inserts the game coins into the machine and pushes Katrina onto the platform.

“Aaron, I don’t know how to play this,” Katrina starts to freak out. She seldom goes to arcades, and she doesn’t know how to dance. Being put on the spot makes her feel anxious.

In the blink of an eye, the screen flashes GAME OVER.

Aaron adds more coins and raises the bag of game coins in his hand. “Just try it. We have many coins, and we can play all night.”

A few high-school teenagers watch next to the machine. Hearing Aaron’s understated but domineering words, they can’t help but exclaim in admiration.

“Wow, this girl is so lucky!” “Your boyfriend is so handsome!”

To the high schoolers, Aaron is not only a very tall and handsome man but also someone who bought so many game coins to let his girlfriend have fun. His love for her doesn’t seem to have any limit.

Hearing the envious exclamations of the girls around them, Katrina can’t help blushing. She wants to tell them that Aaron isn’t her boyfriend, but she doesn’t think they will believe her.

Since they are already here, she might as well do it. Besides, she isn’t in a very good mood. She wants a distraction, so she decides to play the game.

Katrina summons up the courage and follows the actions on the screen clumsily.

When Katrina finally starts to dance, Aaron looks at her indulgently. He turns around and hisses at the chattering girls to quiet down and not to disturb her.

Since Katrina is playing the game for the first time, she doesn’t match the tempo on the screen. Ten seconds later, GAME OVER flashes on the screen again.

Aaron watches patiently and continues to insert coins into the machine. “You still look a bit silly, but at least you’re getting better.”

Katrina can’t help glaring at Aaron when she hears his comments. After forcing her to play the game, he dares to criticize her. What an asshole!

Feeling her murderous eyes, Aaron says with a faint smile, “Actually... you don’t look silly at all, it’s cute.” Katrina does look adorable in her attempts to play the game.

Katrina starts dancing again.

While Katrina dances on the platform, Aaron inserts coins to keep the game running. He continuously feeds coins into the machine without care, despite the numerous attempts.

At first, Katrina is a little reserved. Influenced by the lively atmosphere and not wanting the coins she used up to go to waste, Katrina starts to relax and play better. Her movements become more and more skilled than her previous attempts. After a while, Katrina gets tired of the game, and they move on to the next one. Shooting games, basketball games, ishing games... Aaron drags Katrina around the arcade with him to play all sorts of games. By the end, Katrina is deeply enjoying herself. She forgets the unpleasant break-up with Marcellus and finally lights up with a beautiful smile.

Seeing the smile on her face also makes Aaron feel good. He thinks that she looks most beautiful when she smiles. Her beauty is pure and innocent.

Whenever Katrina sees him, she always looks defensive or resentful. It's not a pleasant look. He prefers it when she is happy.

This is also Aaron's first time in an arcade. He once took Katrina to the amusement park in Hadley City, and he remembers how much she enjoyed it. Seeing her so upset after her meeting with Marcellus made him want to cheer her up.

Since it's already evening, Aaron can't take her to an amusement park. The only place he could think of is an arcade. Remembering the television advertisement, he saw a few days ago, and he took her there.

Fortunately, it seems his plan worked.

An Endless Night With Him 220 Chapter 220: His Stolen Kiss

As Aaron basks in happiness on Katrina's smiling face, Katrina suddenly grabs Aaron's arm and exclaims, "Aaron, the racing game is free. Let's go!"

She clutches his arm and pulls him in the direction of the game. The small action inadvertently makes Aaron feel warm. His face softens with a smile.

It seems all his efforts are worth it. Katrina doesn't notice what she is doing.

She has been thinking about playing the racing game for a long time. After seeing a lot of people playing it, she wants to try the game, but there are always many people waiting for their turn. Finally, seeing that the machine is free, her eyes light up, and she pulls Aaron without realizing the intimacy of her actions.

After inserting coins into the machine, Katrina starts to concentrate on driving. But she is such a terrible driver that she ends up dying in the game after playing for a few seconds. Either she rear-ends the car in front of her, or she drives into the lawn and turns the car over.

Aaron watches attentively and constantly directs her from the side. "Turn left... Turn right, turn sharply!"

Aaron's directions don't help at all because Katrina can't distinguish left and right when she is in a hurry. After several cars are destroyed, he cannot bear to watch anymore.

"Stupid woman, let me do it!" He pulls Katrina out of the seat and replaces her. After putting coins in, he begins to drive.

Aaron drives steadily, deftly avoiding obstacles in an orderly fashion without any effort. Whether a car appears in front of him, or he needs to make an emergency turn, he can handle it with ease. As the speed becomes quicker and quicker, the game becomes more and more exciting.

Katrina is a little flabbergasted to see Aaron play the game so well. Every time Aaron is about to crash into a car in front of him, he is able to avoid it immediately.

She can't believe this is his first time in an arcade. Compared to her, he is an excellent driver. The knowledge frustrates Katrina a lot.

Aaron doesn't die despite the obstacles appearing in the game. After watching for a while, Katrina starts to get bored. She is still eager to try again, but Aaron seems to be having so much fun that he doesn't give her a chance.

Katrina pokes Aaron with her finger. "Hey, you've been playing for so long, your arms must be tired. Let me try!" Aaron sits still and keeps his eyes on the road conditions on the screen. "Road killers don't have the right to speak."

Given Katrina's driving skills, he is very worried about letting her drive alone. He wonders how on earth she was able to drive out of his villa back in Hadley City. Should he be secretly glad that she didn't turn his car over?

Katrina is struck dumb by Aaron's words. How dare he look down upon her driving skills! She mumbles unhappily, "You said you brought me here to play, but you're playing alone."

When Aaron said that she could casually play because he has money, she was still a little moved. But in the end, he takes over the game and refuses to let her play. Aaron is really a shameless man.

At Katrina's complaints, Aaron suddenly turns his head and kisses her on the face.

Katrina's face suddenly turns red after feeling the soft touch on her cheek. She gapes at Aaron in disbelief. "You..." "As soon as she's distracted, he retakes advantage of her! They are in public. Katrina is so ashamed that she wants to dig herself a hole to hide in.

Suddenly, the screen flashes with the words GAME OVER. As the game progresses and the car speeds up, the road conditions become more complicated, leaving no room for distraction. When Aaron turns around to kiss Katrina, he puts himself in danger.

Aaron smiles lightly. "Sorry, I got distracted by the beauty on the roadside. I lost control and turned over," he says, surrendering the car to Katrina. "Your turn."

Katrina's face is red with shame. She is no longer in the mood to play the game. "I got dizzy from watching you. I don't want to play anymore," she says and stomps away.

Knowing she is embarrassed, Aaron quickly follows her.

But they still have a lot of game coins left. While Aaron wonders what to do with the coins, they pass a row of clip doll machines.

A few young couples are playing. The men try to navigate the claw to pick up a doll. A girl's arms full of plush toys, while other girls next to her look at her with envy and admiring eyes.

What other women have, his woman must also have. Inspired, Aaron wraps his arm around Katrina's shoulder and leads her to the clip doll machines.

Aaron takes a look at the various plush toys inside the machine and asks confidently, "Which one do you want? I'll get it for you."

Katrina knows that Aaron is playing the game for the first time and that winning a doll is very difficult. If everyone could easily win a doll, the arcade would lose money.

Although she doesn't believe Aaron can do it, she doesn't want to be obvious about it. She points at a white toy inside the machine. "The Baymax one."

The Baymax plush toy is located at the top of the pile. It should be relatively easy to catch. She doesn't want to choose a difficult doll that would hurt Aaron's enthusiasm and confidence if he doesn't win it.

Aaron takes a look at her choice, inserts the game coins into the machine, and starts to control the button and adjust the angle of the claw.

When the claw reaches the desired position, Aaron presses the button with confidence, as if the doll already belongs to him.

But in the next second, the toy falls out of the claw, and he catches nothing. Aaron's expression is indescribable.

Seeing the deflated look on Aaron's face, Katrina can't help feeling amused. Not daring to laugh out loud, she keeps her amusement to herself.

Meanwhile, Aaron seems to be getting into a fight with the machine. He continues to insert game coins into the machine and controls the button to win the Baymax toy.

But he fails several times.

When he first started playing the game, Aaron foolishly thought that it would be easy to win a toy for Katrina. His previous confident face suddenly turns a lot darker.
