

Leaving The Country After Divorce

Leaving The Country After Divorce Chapter 1002

. . .

Chapter 1002 A Gaze Full With Respect

After what seemed forever, Jack's voice finally rang out. "Why didn't you choose to go with Dr.

Galloway?" Truth was, he was taken aback by Roxanne's reaction earlier.

Hearing that, Roxanne hesitated for a moment before answering calmly, "Dr. Galloway and I interact a lot at work, so I'm trying to avoid any private interaction with him to ensure our collaboration isn't affected."

Jack still did not understand her intentions. "Are you saying we're not working together enough?"

Roxanne was caught off guard by his question.

Several seconds later, she finally explained, "It's different. Our collaboration with Damaris Group is only temporary. Besides, we never interacted much during work."

Strictly speaking, Roxanne and Jack met only when there were business-related matters. In that project, Damaris Group was more like an investor than a business partner. After listening to her, Jack nodded, finally what he meant to Roxanne. Once again, silence filled the entire car. Several moments later, Jack seemed to remember something, and he suddenly glanced at her. Sensing his gaze, Roxanne turned to give him a bemused look. "By the way, my family is organizing a medical consultation in two days. Would you be interested to join us?" A medical consultation... Roxanne immediately recalled the children she saw at the orphanage. If she could help the children, she would naturally be more than happy to join. However, she was a little hesitant the moment she remembered there was a project she still had to deal with. At the same time, she felt a sense of guilt creep into her heart for feeling hesitant.

As if reading her mind, Jack added, "The target groups of this medical consultation are those from orphanages and nursing homes. We'll be sending the medical staff to them. And after your amazing performance last time, Grandpa has told me to share some of the Damaris family's medical knowledge with you."

With that, he shot her a meaningful look, saying, "I believe this was your original purpose for joining the medical consultation, right?"

In terms of traditional medicine, no one was more knowledgeable than the Damaris family. Jack's words was right on point.

Now that her thoughts were shifted in his favor, she met his gaze and admitted, "You're right, so please let me know the time and location once it's decided."

Jack knew she would never reject the invitation. Hence, he merely nodded with a smile when he heard that.

As for the remainder of the journey, the two spent the time discussing the medical consultation.

Jack casually pointed out Roxanne's weaknesses and gave her some advice.

At the same time, Roxanne listened to every word intently.

Her eyes were sparkling and filled with respect even when the car had come to a stop.

Before that, she had always thought they were each more proficient in certain medical knowledge and that they were on the same level.

It was not until that day that she realized the heir of the Damaris family was more incredible than her.

This man has mastered all of the Damaris family's medical knowledge.

"We're here," Jack reminded amusedly when he saw her in a daze.

Only then did Roxanne snap back to her senses. She flashed him a grateful smile and said, "Thank you for your guidance, Mr. Damaris."

Jack returned the smile. "I'm just speaking based on the Damaris family's medical knowledge. Your mentor is Professor Lambert.

Naturally, you've taken different paths from our family. We're the same in terms of medical attainments. It's just that my family's medical knowledge can make up for your shortcomings."

Looking as serious as ever, Roxanne said, "Still, I have to thank you."

• • •