Chapter 1031 At the Capital Airport...

Aman and a woman walked out.

"James, let's part ways here. I'll get back to the Cadens' mansion as quickly as I can and tell Grandpa what happened at Mount Littleroot." Maxine paused and looked at James. She continued after a moment, "Don't you worry. I won't say a word about the strength you have right now."

"Okay."

James nodded, gave it some thought, then added, "After I'm done with the tasks at hand, I'll pay a visit to the Cadens' Mansion as well."

James' visit to the Cadens' mansion this time was to investigate Tobias. He was curious about his personality and the details of the incident that occurred thirty years ago.

Even though he had heard some of the inside stories from Thea, all he knew was what she had said.

To find out if they were true, he needed to confirm with Tobias.

"Bye."

Maxine waved her hand, turned, and walked away. She casually flagged down a taxi on the side of the road, got in, and drove off.

James watched as she left.

Soon after, he took out his phone and dialed a number.

"Look into Tiara Youngblood for me. I need all of her information as soon as possible."

Tiara looked at him with tears in her eyes and asked, "Is...Is that true?"

"Yes."

With pride written across his face, the man nodded and said, "With the power and influence of the Henderson family in the Capital, it's quite simple to hire a few experts from another country. Don't worry, your grandmother will be alright. It's only minor surgery. It will be over in a few minutes once the experts show up."

"Th-Thank you."

As if she were clinging to her last shred of hope, Tiara kept expressing her gratitude.

"Many thanks, Mr. Henderson. We wouldn't know what to do if it weren't for you. Not only did you make the necessary arrangements with the Healthstone Hospital, the best hospital in the Capital, but you also got in touch with foreign experts."

"Tiara sure is lucky."

"After she marries into the Henderson family, she'll be able to experience unimaginable wealth and high honor."

"Matthew and Tiara are truly a match made in heaven."

The Youngblood family members present were all gushing over them.

"Indeed."

Matthew grinned widely.

"You can be at ease. I'll definitely treat Tiara well. We'll get engaged after Grandma has recovered from her operation."

"What are you looking at?" Matthew scoffed.

"Who do you think you are to pursue Tiara when you look like that?"

"James, you... please don't take this to heart," Tiara said softly, her head hung low.

The marriage arrangement was made solely by her mother.

Before, her mother had tried to get her to return and get engaged to Matthew, but she was always in Cansington. She had only recently returned when her grandmother was critically ill.

Only she and her father were aware of what had occurred in Cansington.

The rest of the Youngblood family was completely unaware.

James gave a small wave of his hand and said, "I'm simply here to see the patient.

She's in the ward, right? I'll go take a look."

"Yes. She's inside."

Tiara had a smile on her face.

"I'll show you in."

James' identity was unknown to the others, but Tiara was aware of it. He was not just a skilled ancient martial artist; he was also a brilliant doctor.

Dr.Wallace was the chief physician of Healthstone Hospital and an authoritative expert.

Even on a global scale, he had a modest amount of reputation, but right now a brat was looking down on him.

"I'm not qualified to know that yet? What audacity.Brat, which foreign medical school did you graduate from? Who was the medical professor you studied under?"

Dr.Wallace frequently participated in academic exchanges, and he was somewhat familiar with all of the medical professors who had some standing internationally.

He looked at James with disdain and said, "Can't say it, can you? You must have graduated from some lousy medical school, huh?"

James slightly furrowed his brows.

Zigmund was also concerned that James would erupt in rage.

"Dr.Wallace, just let him take a look," he said.

"Take a look? If something goes wrong, who will bear the consequences? You?" Dr.Wallace scolded loudly.

"I'll take care of it," said James.

"Who do you think you are? You'll take care of it? How would you be able to handle it?" Dr.Wallace snapped at James.

James sat on a chair in the corridor, ignoring everyone else's taunts and sarcastic remarks.He had no idea how Gloom would notify the director.

Still, he knew that Gloom would definitely find a way.

As long as the director was at the hospital, he would undoubtedly arrive in five minutes.

Tiara stood in front of him with her head bowed.

"I'm sorry, James, for causing you trouble," she apologized in a soft voice.

James gave a small wave.

"It's not a problem," he said.

Matthew was irritated by Tiara's attitude toward James.She would have been engaged to him already if it were not for her grandmother's critical condition, but she was now flirting with another man.

He was immediately enraged and approached them.

"You asked to speak with the director, huh? I'm eager to see if you can actually summon the director today," he snapped.

Matthew was unaware of James' background and identity. He had not, however, encountered this individual within the Capital's nobility.

Nevertheless, he was worried that James could actually summon the director with special connections.

That would be humiliating for him. So he took out his phone and called his older brother in the Henderson family.

"Tan, it's me, Matthew. You're familiar with the director of Healthstone Hospital, right? Give him a call and tell him to meet me after ten minutes. That's right. I'm on the third floor of the inpatient department..."

After a few seconds, he regained his composure and walked over quickly.

"Director, I'm sorry.I've made a mistake.I was oblivious and overlooked an important figure, but I was only acting in the patient's best interests.Please...Please don't fire me."

"You good-for-nothing.You're only causing me problems."

Carl raised his hand and was about to give him a slap.

"It's alright.Forget about it," James said nonchalantly.

Carl stopped right then.James asked, "Can I now go inside and see the patient?"

"Yes, you can.You certainly can."

Dr.Wallace kept nodding his head.

"I'll arrange for someone to be your assistant right away," Carl said promptly.

James waved his hand slightly and said, "There's no need.I can handle it on my own."

He walked straight into the ward as he said that.Outside the ward, the Youngblood family members were staring at each other, perplexed.

"Who exactly is that brat?"

"He seemed to be quite capable.Even the director of Healthstone Hospital treats him with such respect."

"I wonder what his background is."

Everyone was stunned.

Especially Dr. Wallace. He was the attending physician, so he was aware of how the elderly woman's body

A written notice of her critical condition had already been issued. She could have passed away at any

However, that person was only in the ward for about ten minutes before the elderly woman regained consciousness. She could even get out of bed and walk.

Furthermore, based on her complexion, she appeared to be energetic.

"Grandma."

A surge of powerful force jolted Gloom, forcing his body seven to eight meters backward. His arms were tingling and numb.

On them, blue veins were bulging. He had a shocked expression on his face.

"You...Your strength?"

James took in his True Energy and glanced at Gloom.

"What are you doing? Are you trying to sneak up on me or is this just a test?" he said casually.

Gloom circulated his energy, and the pain in his arms started to fade gradually. He then put his hands behind his back, stared at James, and slowly approached him. He only smiled and spoke when he finally stood in front of James.

"I was curious as to what rank your cultivation base had advanced to. As far as I can tell, you must have had some exciting adventures recently. Could it be that you've got Moonlit Flowers on Cliffside's Edge all figured out now?"

Even though Gloom was grinning, the shock and astonishment he felt had not subsided. His cultivation base was at the fifth rank.

Although his strength would not be regarded as invincible or unmatched, he was undoubtedly very powerful in situations where the older generation did not intervene.

However, he was forced back when his palm struck James' just now. He felt a tingling and numbness in his jolted arms.

The energy and blood in his body were erratic.

James, on the other hand, stood perfectly still and did not even flinch. It proved that James' strength had already surpassed his.

Chapter 1039

James asked about Mr. Gabriel, and the King's expression turned solemn. He took a cigarette from the table, lit it, and inhaled deeply.

Smoke filled the air in front of him.

After some time, he began to speak slowly.

"When discussing this, one should begin a century ago."

James was intrigued upon hearing these words. He always had a limited understanding of what had happened a century prior. He only knew that one hundred years ago, the first King of Sol had teamed up with the ancient martial artists of Sol to encircle and destroy the Gu Sect.

It was said that countless lives were lost in the battle.

"A hundred years ago, aggressors started an invasion. Sol was in terrible distress. In every region, resistance forces were formed. Among the numerous resistance forces, the brigade led by the Gu Sect was the most powerful. However, the Gu Sect did not have pure intentions. Not only did they want to drive out the aggressors, but they also wanted to retaliate by occupying the hostile nation and attempting to unite the whole world.

"Furthermore, the Gu Sect's strategies were sinister. They made use of Gu venom to confuse and poison people's minds.

"James, I think you can make your move now," the King said while looking at James.

After regaining his composure, James said while nodding, "I intend to do so. What rank is Mr. Gabriel's strength at?"

"I'm not sure. Mr. Gabriel has always been shrouded in mystery. He rarely shows his face and has never fought an outsider before. According to our intel, his strength is at least at the sixth rank, but it's unclear what kind of martial arts he's learned." The King said while shaking his head.

"Your intelligence network spans the entire globe. Did you find any information regarding my grandfather's whereabouts over the years?" inquired James.

His grandfather was still alive. He was certain of it. He was also certain that the incident at Mount Arclens was entirely orchestrated by his grandfather.

The goal was to confuse Tobias or to confuse outsiders.
