The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 1111

Braxton Micah was not in the military region at the moment.

After receiving notice, he immediately made his way there.

In just half an hour, he appeared before James.

“Sir...” He was sweating profusely on the forehead.

James looked at the man before him.

He was a three-star general and second-in-command of the Red Flame Army.

After the previous Emperor’s death, he was temporarily made in charge of the Red Flame Army.

“General Micah...” James looked at him.

“Your orders, sir?” Though sweat beaded on Braxton’s forehead, he did not dare wipe them off.

James asked, “General Micah, which city do you think is the safest in Sol?” Without the slightest bit of hesitation, Braxton said, “The Capital.” “Yes, the Capital, the city which the Red Flame Army is in charge of.

But why do I hear that there have been many incidents ever since the demise of the previous Emperor?” James’ nonchalant attitude sent a shiver down Braxton’s spine.

He asked, “S-Sir, what are you referring to, may I ask?” James said, “There’s a company called Blue Tech Corporation in the Capital which went bankrupt all of a sudden recently.

The owner disappeared without a trace.

Meanwhile, his daughter, a popular actress working for an entertainment company, was fired after debt collectors went knocking on the company’s doors.

Why would any decent and upright individual not pursue the legal route but instead resort to such underhanded tactics?” “What? Preposterous!” Enraged, Braxton cried out, “How could such a thing happen in the Capital? Don’t worry, sir! I’ll investigate the matter immediately.

I promise that the whole truth will be revealed tomorrow morning.

If we find out that the suspects have violated the law, they will be punished severely!" "I want the results by tomorrow morning." Leaving this remark, James stood up and left.

Although he had ordered his subordinates to investigate the matter, he was still worried, so he specially came to the military region.

After he left, Braxton breathed a sigh of relief.

Every leader would love to make an impressive start upon assuming a position.

This was inevitable.

Braxton was concerned.

He swiftly returned to his office.

"We'll have a meeting in ten minutes!" After James gave his order to Braxton, he simply returned to the Emperor's Mansion.

Something unexpected happened before he could meet Madelyn.

He was a little disappointed.

After returning, he contacted Madelyn once more, wishing to set up a meeting tonight to resolve the matter once and for all.

Madelyn had returned to the courtyard Yaroslav was in.

Having heard that Madelyn failed to meet James, he was worried sick.

At that moment, Madelyn's phone vibrated.

Looking at her phone, she said, "James has set up another rendezvous.

This time, we'll be meeting in the underground parking lot of Freedom Plaza at 11 p.m." "I'll go with you." Yaroslav could not wait any longer.

He was worried that something would happen if they dragged this out.

He had to meet with James as soon as possible and work out the details of their cooperation.

That was the only way he could survive.

After brief contemplation, Madelyn said, "Got it." After setting up the time, James disguised himself as a security guard and silently left the Emperor's Mansion.

After he left, he changed into different cars every now and then and got changed into multiple clothing.

At long last, he arrived in the underground parking lot of Freedom Plaza.

There were ten minutes left until it turned 11 p.m.

He waited patiently.

Meanwhile, Yaroslav and Madelyn were waiting in a black sedan.

"I think we're clear." "Got it." Yaroslav nodded.

"Contact James." Madelyn sent James a message.

(We've arrived.

Our car plate number is...] James got off his car and scanned his surroundings.

Upon noticing the car plate number he was searching for, he walked over to the black sedan and gently knocked on the car door.

The door opened.

James got into the backseat.

Beside him was a fifty-year-old-looking man in a big black jacket.

He was wearing a cap and a pair of sunglasses.

As he lowered his head, James could not discern his appearance.

Madelyn was in the driver's seat.

She turned around, removed her sunglasses, and looked at James with a smile.

"We meet again, James.

" James glanced at her.

This was the woman who lured him into a trap.

Then, he looked at the man beside him and said, "Reveal your identity.

" Yaroslav removed his sunglasses, and James could finally see what he looked like.

He was an ordinary-looking man—so ordinary, in fact, one could never imagine him being a figure at the top of the power pyramid.

"James," wearing a smile on his face, Yaroslav said, "your reputation precedes you.

I'm honored to have finally met you.

" "Are you Yaroslav Gabriel, the one behind the previous Emperor?" James asked.

"Yes," Yaroslav said.

James asked, "You're someone affiliated with the Gu Sect.

What business do you have with me? As you may know, we're from different worlds.

If you have nothing important to say, I'll be leaving.

" Though James knew that Yaroslav was seeking to cooperate with him, he feigned ignorance.

Yaroslav said smilingly, "No one has permanent enemies.

I came here today to make known my wish to cooperate with you.

" He cut to the chase.

"Oh? Cooperation?" James smiled.

"But how?" "James, let's just cut to the chase.

" Madelyn said, "The King made you the Emperor to get rid of Mr. Gabriel.

Now that you have acquired such strength, killing him would be an easy feat.

Mr. Gabriel understands this.

He knows that he has to cooperate with you in order to survive.

However, he has a condition.

You have to let him go.

” James asked, “Putting the question of cooperation aside, allow me to ask you this.

Was it my grandfather who told you about my strength?” “Yes.

” Yaroslav did not deny it.

He said, “However, it was also thanks to his reminder that I thought about cooperating with you.

” “oh?” Puzzled, James asked, “What do you mean?” Yaroslav said, “Thomas told me that I'd surely die.

Once I'm dead, the Capital will return to peace.

He told me that I'll surely die in your hands.

However, he also reminded me that I can survive once I think of a way.

The only way for me to survive is to cooperate with you.

” Upon hearing this, James was puzzled.

What kind of person was his grandfather? Why would he create trouble for him while assisting him in the dark? Now, he even hinted at Yaroslav to cooperate with him.

James could not figure anything out.

After brief contemplation, he asked, “How do we cooperate?” Before coming, Yaroslav had already discussed matters with Madelyn.

“James.

No, wait.

Emperor, I wish to put on a show.

” “What do you mean?” “T’ll order a subordinate of mine to impersonate me.
After executing him, I’ll go into hiding and spend the rest of my lifetime in seclusion.
You, on the other hand, will promise not to pursue me.
As a reward, I’ll give you whatever information you need.

” Asmile crept up on James’ face.

He had planned to cooperate with Yaroslav anyway.

Now that Yaroslav was the one who proposed things, he could take a backseat.

After thinking for some time, James said, “It’s certainly possible.

My condition is simple.

I want all information about every one of the Gu Sect.

” Yaroslav nodded.

“Sure thing, I’ll tell you everything I know.

” James asked, “Who is your master? Is it Callan Maverick?” “T don’t know.

” Yaroslav said, “I only know that my master was called the Gu Devil.

He never removed his mask, so no one has ever seen his true appearance.

I also know that wielded great authority inside the Gu Sect.

He’s probably only beneath the Leader.

” “Who’s the Leader?” “T don’t know either.

He’s a very mysterious person.

Every time we met, I could only see his back figure.

He’s currently the one who calls the shots in the Gu Sect.

Even my master answers to him.

” “What relationship does my grandfather have with the Gu Sect?” “They are in a cooperative relationship.

” Yaroslav continued, “I don’t know what agreement they made, but Thomas is the one who strategizes for the Leader.

” “Since when?” After thinking for a moment, Yaroslav said, “About ten years ago, I’d say.

After the Cadens’ residence was burned to the ground.”

As Yaroslav was one of the main persons in charge of the Gu Sect, he had much insider information.

In order to live through the ordeal, he chose to cooperate with James and tell him everything he knew.

This included the ancient tomb of the Prince of Orchid.

The ancient tomb had been broken into long ago, and the box unearthed from within had long been in Thomas’ hands.

It was also a part of his plan to bring the box to Cansington and give it to James.

Meanwhile, the previous Emperor had been a pawn all this while— a pawn manipulated into doing Thomas’ bidding ever since ten years ago.

He was a mere disposable character.

Hearing this, James took a deep breath.

Based on Yaroslav’s words, his grandfather possessed great strength ten years ago.

So why would he watch as his family burned to death? Could it be that his family was still alive? Was everything an illusion? This possibility existed.

After all, he was saved by Thea.

Though he believed his family to be dead, he had never actually seen their corpses.

With the strength his grandfather possessed, he could easily save them all without breaking a sweat.

However, he could only know more when he met Thomas once more.

“What were you trying to accomplish by researching Gu venom and using them to create biological viruses? And why did you establish Centennial Corporation?” James asked.

Yaroslav said, “This has something to do with the Leader’s martial art.

He cultivates the Decimation of Immortality—an extremely vile martial art skill.

Although it’s powerful, it is flawed in its methods.

By researching Gu venom, the Leader wishes to perfect the Decimation of Immortality while at the same time creating biological viruses to create a powerful army independent of the state.

Meanwhile, setting up the company was to prepare for what comes next.

“By establishing a medical corporation in an age where the country is getting richer and its people wealthier, we can effectively create a monopoly.

One day, when Sol and even the wider world only have a single medical corporation that dictates what medicine humans take, it would be easier for the organization to control people’s every thought and action.” Hearing this, James took a deep breath.

This was sheer madness.

After taking a deep breath, he asked, “What is the Decimation of Immortality? How is it related to the Gu Sect?” Yaroslav shook his head and said, “I don’t know about this.

Although I’m a disciple of the Gu Devil who’s someone with great authority inside the Gu Sect, I really don’t know much about the Leader.” “Mhm.” James nodded slightly.

He believed that Yaroslav was telling the truth.

After revealing so much insider information, there was no need for him to hide things from him anymore.

“Give me a copy of all the individuals affiliated with the Gu Sect.

I’ll formulate a plan once [return.

I’ll act once I execute you,” he said and got out of the car.

After James got out of the car, Madelyn asked, "Do you think James is reliable?" Yaroslav's face darkened, and he said, "I don't know, but I don't have any other options.

I can only hope that Thomas will save me at critical moments considering that I've helped James so much." From Yaroslav's perspective, Thomas was the threatening one, not James.

Even now, he had no idea what agreement Thomas and the Leader came into.

"Let's return for now." "Understood." Madelyn drove off.

James, on the other hand, lit a cigarette upon returning to his car.

Only after Yaroslav and Madelyn left did he ignite the engine and return.

At the Emperor's Mansion...

Thea and Maxine were awake waiting for James' return.

James returned.

Entering the living room, he removed his cap.

"How did it go?" they stood up and asked in unison.

Wearing a grim expression, James said, "From what Yaroslav told me, I can now be sure that it was Grandpa who leaked the information.

Not only that, my Grandpa even instructed Yaroslav to cooperate with me in order to survive." "Oh, is that so?" Maxine asked, "What did Thomas say to Yaroslav?" James narrated Yaroslav's words.

Hearing this, Maxine stroked her chin, pensive.

"How strange..."

What is Thomas up to? What kind of person is he?" Thea was confused.

She thought that Thomas would never harm James.

Now that Maxine's speculation was proven to be true, she could no longer figure Thomas out.

James looked at Maxine and asked, "Maxine, what do you think Grandpa is up to?" Maxine rolled her eyes and said, "I'm not God.

How would I know? Forget it, you shouldn't overthink things.

It's getting late.

We should sleep." She turned to leave.

Meanwhile, Thea grabbed James' hand and consoled him, "Darling, I don't think Grandpa's a bad person.

Although he has a close relationship with the Gu Sect, everything he did seemed to be paving the way for you." "Paving my way?" "T mean, think about it.

Grandpa asked Yaroslav to cooperate with you.

It's obvious he's paving the way for you.

Now that you're the Emperor, you get to accomplish more things with Yaroslav's assistance.

Maybe Grandpa wants you to become the King." 2 Thea analyzed.

"How smart of you, Darling.

Unfortunately, I don't think this is possible." James shook his head slightly.

"Don't overthink things.

We should sleep." Thea stood up and dragged James into the room.

After returning to the room, James lay on the bed.

Resting his head on his arm, he simply stared at the ceiling and daydreamed.

Thea, on the other hand, showered.

"Darling..." James was in deep contemplation when a voice came.

Returned his head and saw Thea, who was draped in a towel.

Her slender figure was bewitching.

She walked out of the bathroom and said to James, "Go shower already.

By the way, I think we should have a child soon.

Darling, do you prefer a boy or a girl?" ° The first half of Thea's sentence made James' heart skip a beat.

However, the latter half of the sentence filled James with anxiety.

A child? He had yet to deal with Tiara's pregnancy.

"What are you thinking about, Darling? Go shower." Thea's cheeks reddened.

"Thea..." James sat on the bed with a surly expression on his face.

Thea asked, "What's wrong?" "There's something I think you should know..." James' expression turned grim.

He knew that Thea would be enraged upon hearing this.

However, he could not keep this information from her forever.

"What is it?" "Tiara, she..." James stammered.

"What's wrong with her?" "She's pregnant." "What?" Thea was rooted to the spot.

Back then, Maxine had casually brought the issue up.

However, she thought she was just messing with her.

Now that James had uttered those words, she was stunned.

Her eyes brimmed with tears that flowed down her cheeks.

Why? How? Thea immediately burst into tears.

"Thea..." Looking at the tearful Thea, James felt awful deep inside.

He tried defending himself.

“You can’t blame me for this, can you? It was a setup.

Who would have known?” James had been thinking about this for the past few days.

However, he was unsure of what to do.

He was in a bind.

“Haha...

I thought it’d be something more serious.” Wiping her tears, Thea said with a smile,

“This isn’t too difficult to deal with.

You’re rich, after all.

Just give her a sum of money for child-rearing costs.” James was dumbfounded.

He did not expect Thea to say such a thing.

“G-Go shower already.” She gently pushed James.

James entered the bathroom in a daze.

Meanwhile, Thea lay on the bed helplessly.

What else could she do now? If Tiara really did give birth to a child, she could volunteer to raise the child.

As long as James would remain by her side, she could turn a blind eye to this.

Soon, James was done showering.

The moment he stepped out of the bathroom, Thea immediately pushed him onto the bed and kissed him.

“T-I want to bear your child too.” | The night passed silently.

When James woke up the next day, there was no one beside him.

Puzzled, he got up, got dressed, and headed to the courtyard.

Thea was already there practicing the martial art.

Though Thea noticed his presence, she did not stop.

Instead, she continued cultivating Heavenly Breath.

The strength she currently possessed was incapable of helping James.

She wanted to become stronger so that she could catch up to him.

Soon, James' phone rang.

It was from the military region.

James answered the call.

"Sir, we have completed our investigation.

All related personnel has been arrested.

Please give us your orders," Braxton said.

After being briefed by James the night before, he worked non-stop to investigate the matter.

"mMhm.

» James said, "I'll head over to the military region at once." He got up and greeted Thea, "Darling, I'm heading over to the military region." "Got it." James left.

Just as he was about to get on a convoy outside, he noticed a glamorous woman walking over to him with a jacket in her hands.

She was stopped by the security guards.

He immediately walked over to her.

Seeing that James was walking toward her, she greeted, "James!" James waved at the security guards, "You're dismissed." "Understood." Wearing a bright smile, Delilah handed the jacket over to James and said, "I've washed your clothes." James took it and said, "I've ordered my men to investigate the matter regarding your family.

I'm about to head over to the military region to learn about the specifics.

Why don't you come along with me?" "So soon?" Delilah was stunned.

James had only learned of this incident last night.

How did he manage to finish investigating the matter in such a short amount of time? Delilah momentarily froze before saying, "Sure." "Let's get going then." James turned and waved toward the convoy.

The driver drove toward them and stopped right in front of James.

The two got on.

Soon, they arrived at the Red Flame Army's headquarters.

In the Emperor's office...

James was sitting on an office chair, whereas Delilah sat by his side.

Braxton had been waiting.

He was awake the whole night in the military region.

He handed James the documents and said, "Sir, here are all the documents you need.

The bankruptcy of Blue Tech Corporation was caused by the struggle between a few tech conglomerates.

Since Blue Tech Corporation mastered a brand-new technology, a family wanted to make a low-cost acquisition.

After being rejected, they resorted to underhanded tactics." James scrutinized the documents which contain all information he needed to know.

Blue Tech Corporation was not a frontrunner among technology companies.

All these years, they had been researching new technologies.

Finally, they made a substantive breakthrough.

Just as Blue Tech Corporation was about to build a successful career, the Tuckson family had their eyes on the new technology.

The Tucksons were a big family in the Capital that specialized in technological products.

Even its subsidiaries were some of the finest and most sophisticated technology companies in Sol.

After hearing that Blue Tech Corporation had made a substantive breakthrough, they offered to acquire it for a few million dollars, which Blue Tech Corporation rejected.

Since then, the Tucksons began plotting Blue Tech Corporation's bankruptcy.

However, before they could get their hands on the technology, the owner of the company fled with all the information in his hand.

The Tucksons refused to give up.

They began applying pressure on Delilah and her mother in an effort to force the owner of Blue Tech Corporation to show himself.

Thus, Delilah was fired from her company.

Cornered, she had no choice but to sing in a bar.

After scrutinizing the document, James tossed it to Delilah and said, "Have a look at this." Delilah began reading through it.

Braxton continued, "Sir, the one who plotted all this was a manager in Blue Tech Corporation by the name of Yahya Tuckson, the son of the Tucksons' head.

He has been arrested." James glanced at Braxton and said, "You're dismissed." "Understood." Braxton turned to leave.

The moment he left the office, sweat beaded on his forehead.

After wiping them off, he hurriedly left.

Soon, Delilah finished reading through the document.

James asked, "What do you think?" After thinking for a moment, Delilah said, "How can a single person be capable of plotting such a thing? The core members of the Tucksons must have been involved.

Yahya Tuckson is merely a scapegoat." "T see." James nodded.

It was not an easy feat to bankrupt a company worth billions of dollars.

There must have been a ton of connections involved.

Then, he pulled out his phone and called Nathaniel, "Come to my office." Soon, Nathaniel arrived.

“Your orders, sir?” James tossed the documents to Nathaniel and said, “Have a look at this.” After glancing briefly at the document, Nathaniel said, “Something fishy is definitely going on behind the scenes.

How can a mere manager be capable of accomplishing such a feat? This must be the idea of the Tucksons’ core members.

They must have used their connections and bankrupted Blue Tech Corporation.” James ordered, “Establish a special task force and investigate the matter immediately.

While you’re at it, I want you to investigate General Micah and see if he has any connections with the Tucksons.

If it’s revealed that he received bribes from the Tuckson family, he’ll be severely punished.” Upon hearing this, Nathaniel shivered.

He hurriedly said, “Sir, General Micah is a three-star general.

I don’t have the authority to investigate him.

Even if something fishy is going on, the army can only launch an investigation after the King has provided the required documentation.” “You have my authorization,” James said.

As the wielder of the Blade of Justice, he could execute a commander -in-chief of an army as he wished, let alone a mere three-star general.

“After the investigation, I’ll obtain the authorization seal from the higher-ups.”
“Understood.” Nathaniel nodded.

He was relieved upon hearing James’ words.

After receiving James’ order, Nathaniel swiftly left.

James looked at Delilah and gave his assurance, “Don’t worry, I’ll thoroughly investigate the matter.

No matter who was the one behind this, they will not escape justice.” Delilah thanked James gratefully, “Thank you so very much, James.

If not for you, I really don't know what I should do.

Yesterday, I would have been..." James waved his hand slightly and interrupted her, "You're General Kimberly's daughter.

Your affairs are my affairs.

Besides, I've told you to call me if you have any difficulties." "Got it, I will." Delilah smiled.

"What do you plan to do today? Let me send you back for now." Since James had nothing to do in the military region, he offered to send her back.

After a brief contemplation, Delilah said, "Nothing much, I plan to return and await your good news.

All this while, my mom has been worried sick about my dad.

She's worried that he's..." Yesterday's investigation did not reveal her stepfather's whereabouts.

James said, "I'll investigate via other channels and find his whereabouts.

I'll notify you once I find him." "Thank you." "I'll send you back." James stood up.

Then, the two left the office.

After leaving the building, James personally drove Delilah back.

Delilah's family was rich.

And since she was also a popular actress, she had a steady stream of income.

Now, however, everything that was worth something had been sold off.

Even her savings were gone.

Now, she was staying with her mother in the suburbs.

The place was called Bruton District.

The neighborhood, which was constructed a few decades ago, was considered an old area.

Even so, in a place like the Capital, rental prices were exorbitant.

“Right over there.” After arriving in Bruton District, Delilah pointed at an apartment building and said, “My mom and I are staying here.

You can send me off here, James.

I can head upstairs myself.” “I’ll go have a look,” James said.

He did know Travis’ family members, but he only knew he had a daughter.

It was only when he met Delilah in the Southern Plains last time that he learned bits and pieces about Travis.

James learned that Travis had a falling out with his wife.

His wife believed he was a good-for-nothing who would only drink and gamble.

In the end, she thought that he disappeared without a trace after being pursued by loan sharks.

After that, she remarried another man.

Although the state has made known Travis’ contributions to Sol, James still felt the need to explain in person.

Travis was a national hero, not a good-for-nothing alcoholic.

Since James insisted, Delilah gently nodded.

She showed the way while James followed close behind.

On the seventh floor...

A few men in black shirts were walking along the corridor.

“Boss, is this the place?” “Our information is reliable.

Once we capture the mother and daughter, we’ll be rich!” “This should be safe, right?” “Totally! I investigated their background.

They are ordinary people.

Besides, the Tucksons are the ones ordering the capture.

Even if they have someone behind them, do they stand a chance against the Tucksons?” Soon, they stopped in front of a door.

A forty-year-old-looking man in the lead glanced at the house number and said, "This is the place." "Boss, let me do the knocking." A honcho stepped forward and knocked on the door forcefully.

"Who's there?" A voice came from inside.

"Open the door.

We're here to deliver the gas you ordered." This was the room Delilah and her mother rented.

Though her mother was approaching fifty years of age, she looked very young.

Wearing an apron, she was sweeping the floor when she heard a knock on the door.

She frowned.

"But I didn't buy anything." Knock! Knock! Knock! "Open the door." The knock grew louder, and the people outside began kicking the door.

At that moment, Jeanne Lynch realized that something was wrong.

She thought that the debt collectors were there.

Holding a broom in her hand, she was nervous.

"What should I do?" Just as she was at a loss, the men outside kicked down the door and rushed in.

One of them compared Jeanne with a photo and yelled, "She's Xavion Zachary's wife! Get her!" A few honchos rushed in and forcibly dragged Jeanne outside.

"what are you doing? Let me go!" Jeanne struggled with all her might.

However, she could not break free.

Slap! One of the honchos slapped across the face and yelled, "Shut up, b *tch!" Jeanne could feel a searing pain on her cheek.

She pleaded, " Please let me go.

I really have no money.” “Shut the f*ck up.

Take her away.” “Got it.” Jeanne was forcibly dragged away.

This was an ancient building with no elevators, so they could only use the stairs.

James followed close behind Delilah.

“This is the place, James.” The moment they reached the seventh floor, Delilah pointed at the unit where she was currently staying at.

However, all she could see was her mother being forcibly dragged away.

Upon seeing Delilah, Jeanne screamed, “Run, Delilah!” Delilah momentarily froze before grabbing James’ hand and pleading, “James, please save my mother.” James waved his hand.

“Leave it all to me.” He swiftly walked over to the group of men.

Seeing this, one of the honchos pulled out a knife and threatened James, “F*ck off...” Before he could finish his sentence, he had a clear look at James’ face.

At that moment, his face paled and he began shivering in fear.

“E-Emperor...” the group of men exclaimed.

The man in the lead knelt before James and the others immediately followed suit.

“Mom.” Delilah hurriedly walked over to Jeanne and asked, “Are you alright?” “T-1’m fine...” Jeanne shook her head.

Then, she looked at James puzzledly and asked, “What’s going on, Delilah? Y-You know the Emperor?” Delilah explained, “Mom, he’s a comrade of dad.

I met him in the Southern Plains.” a Oh.

n Meanwhile, James looked at the men kneeling on the ground and asked coldly, “Who ordered you to capture them?” “T-It’s the Tucksons...

They spread the word that we would receive 10 million dollars if we could capture them,” the man in the lead stammered, his teeth chattering.

“Very well.” James’ expression darkened.

Then, he turned to look at Delilah and Jeanne and said, “In that case, follow them to the Tucksons.

I'll be there shortly.

I'm curious to see what the Tucksons are planning to do in the Capital." "Huh?" Jeanne was hesitant.

Delilah said, "Mom, the Emperor knew what was going on with our family.

He has investigated the reason behind the bankruptcy of Xavion's company.

Let's just do as he says.

Everything will be alright."

Jeanne believed that the Emperor is capable of pulling this off.

After all, he was the most powerful man in Sol.

However, she was puzzled.

Why would the Emperor help an ordinary woman like her out? Wearing a surly expression, James looked at the men kneeling on the ground and asked, "What's your name?" "M-My name's Forrest Long.

The Tucksons put the word out that we'll be rewarded if we find these two women.

My subordinates happened to bump into them nearby, so I brought them here." "I didn't do anything, Emperor.

Please spare me!" Wearing a grim expression, James said, "Bring them to the Tucksons and ask them for the reward." "I wouldn't dare! Please, let us go!" "Shut up, this is an order!" James kicked him, "Weren't you pretty bold just now? What happened? I'm ordering you to bring them to the Tucksons.

I'm interested to see what they plan to do to them." After recollecting himself, Forrest asked, "A-Are you saying that we're only putting on an act?" "What else?" James asked, "Do you really intend to sell them off?" "N-No...

I understand." As if pardoned, Forrest hurriedly said, "Emperor, can I redeem myself?" James ignored him.

Looking at Delilah and her mother, he said, "Please follow them to the Tucksons.

I'll be there shortly." "Mihm." Delilah nodded.

James looked at the men kneeling on the ground and said, "You may rise." Forrest and his subordinates stood up.

Under James' orders, they took Delilah and her mother away.

James got downstairs and looked at the leaving van.

Then, he got in his car and headed to the military region.

Along the way, he contemplated the current dynamics in the Capital.

The relationships between various families, military men, and politicians were intricate and convoluted.

If he made a move on a single one of them, the Capital could descend into chaos.

Besides, there could be spies inside the Red Flame Army.

He pulled out his phone and called Henry, who was at the Southern Plains.

"Congratulations, James." Henry's voice came, "I apologize for being absent at your coronation ceremony." "Alright now, save the formalities for later.

How's it going in the Southern Plains?" "Not bad, I'd say.

Things are peaceful here and developing fast." "How did the investigation go?" "Yes, I've found a few clues.

However, General Levi has his reasons.

I haven't yet had time to report to you." "Bring a thousand of our most loyal men to the Capital and join the Red Flame Army." "Should I come personally, James?" "Yes," "Got it." "Depart at once.

I want you at the Red Flame Army's Capital in three hours." "Understood." After receiving James' order, Henry immediately made preparations.

James, on the other hand, immediately headed toward the Red Flame Army's headquarters after hanging up the phone.

After arriving at headquarters, he remained inside the office.

He was not in a hurry to visit the Tucksons and waited patiently for Henry's arrival.

James was not worried about Delilah and her mother's safety.

The Tucksons' objective was to force Xavion, who was currently in hiding, to show himself and obtain the technology in his hand.

Based on their recent actions, James believed that Xavion was still alive.

The Tucksons had yet to obtain the technology in his hands.

After a moment of thought, James pulled out his phone and called Maxine.

Soon, the call went through.

Maxine's voice came, "Is something the matter, James?"

James said, "The Cadens should have an intelligence network in the Capital.

I'd like you to give me information about the Tuckson family in the Capital." Hearing this, Maxine froze and asked, "Why do you need information on the Tucksons in the Capital?" "I need it as soon as possible.

Please send it to me at once." "Alright, I'll send someone to investigate the matter.

I'll hand them over to you later." Maxine hung up the phone.

As one of the Ancient Four, the Cadens possessed a powerful intelligence network.

As the Tucksons were a family in the Capital, it was easy for Maxine to get her hands on information regarding the Tucksons.

She called a number.

In less than ten minutes, all of the Tucksons' information was already in her inbox, and she sent it to James, who scrutinized each of them.

At that same time, in Hope Villa District...

As the Capital was the capital of Sol, every piece of land was worth a fortune.

As such, skyscrapers filled the skyline, and there were few villa districts.

Only the insanely rich could afford to reside in a villa.

In the Tucksons' villa in Hope Villa District...

A sixty-year-old-looking man was sitting on a sofa in the foyer of the first floor.

Although he was old, he looked to be in good spirits.

He was Halvor Tuckson, the current head of the household.

Beside him was a fifty-year-old-looking man.

It was Braxton Micah.

He was wearing casual attire.

Meanwhile, a middle-aged woman and a glamorous young lady were tied up on the floor.

Forrest and his henchmen were standing by the side.

Looking at Jeanne and Delilah, who were on the floor, Braxton's face darkened, and he said, "Halvor, how persistent of you." "I have you here, General Micah.

Didn't you resolve everything just like that? Now that Yahya's the scapegoat, the Emperor wouldn't pursue matters further.

Even if he does, I still have you." Wearing a bright smile on his face, Halvor continued, "There's no way James wouldn't know how deep the water is in the Capital.

He wouldn't pursue matters further." "Even so..." Braxton looked at Delilah who was lying on the floor.

Though he did not know how she was related to James, he saw her walking alongside James with his own eyes.

Thus, upon hearing that the Tucksons have abducted Delilah, he hurriedly made his way over.

"Halvor, why don't you let this slide? If James really pursues matters further, the Tucksons will be ruined.

Even I will be involved." Halvor smiled.

"You're overthinking things, General Micah.

There's no need for you to be this fearful even if James is now the commander-in-chief of the Red Flame Army.

Rest at ease, everything will be fine.

I will hold up my end of the bargain.

Besides, we have been acquainted for more than twenty years, old friend.

If he dares make a move on the Tucksons, countless families and corporations will be implicated.

It'll have dire consequences for the foundation of Sol." Hearing this, Braxton breathed a sigh of relief.

"A-And my money?" Forrest looked at the two.

Braxton's face darkened.

Since he had come this far, he might as well follow through till the end.

He stood up and said, "Don't worry, not a single cent less." Then he gestured at the two guards by the door.

The two guards immediately walked over to Forrest and pulled out their guns.

Bang! Bang! Forrest and his henchmen were now lying in a pool of blood.

Meanwhile, Jeanne and Delilah's faces turned pale, and their bodies shivered in fear.

They struggled with all their might but to no avail.

Braxton stood up and glanced at the corpses lying on the ground and said, "Halvor, remember to clean up the mess.

Also, do not let both of them go, especially the younger one.

She seems to be related to James.

If she leaves here alive..." Halvor stood up and gave his assurance, "Don't worry, I'll deal with it."
