

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 1931

Chapter 1931

The Black Eagle King revealed a lot of information.

First, James became aware of a few things about the Overworld.

The Overworld was vast, with a surface area a hundred times that of the present Earth.

Aside from that, there were a lot of worlds in the Sealed Realms that were similar to the Overworld.

Second, he discovered that martial artists of great power existed on Earth in ancient times.

Among them, ten powerhouses emerged. These ten powerhouses were called the Ten Emperors.

The Ten Emperors existed for a very long time.

According to James' knowledge of Sol's history, only a few thousand years of it had been preserved in writing. There appeared to be many secrets he was still unaware of in history.

"Mister James, where are we going next?"

The Black Eagle King looked at James expectantly. He came to Earth from the Overworld to seek growth. Now that he was following James, he was curious as to what exactly James wanted to do next.

James gave it some thought and said, "I'd like to see my daughter first, then return to Dragonville in the Southern Plains, and raise my cultivation base while the world is still relatively peaceful so that I can deal with the impending apocalypse.

"I see." The Black Eagle King started to ponder. After a brief moment of thought, he said, "If that's the case, may I travel to Dragonville first and wait for you there?"

James looked at the Black Eagle King.

He looked at the wings behind him, looked at his eagle nose, and frowned. 'You... Your appearance?'

"Ah. This..."

The Black Eagle King immediately understood what James meant. At this moment, the wings on his back slowly disappeared.

His eagle nose returned to normal as well and transformed into a human nose.

James looked at him with a solemn expression.

‘This is too terrifying. He can actually turn into a real human. If he were to blend in with the humans, who would know that he’s a monster?’

“Don’t give me that suspicious look in your eyes.” The Black Eagle King laughed and said, “When I was in the Overworld, I took the Polymorph Pill. I’m able to assume a human form because of that.”

James made no further inquiries. They turned around and descended the mountain.

At the foot of the mountain, many people had gathered. All of them were disciples of the Heaven and Earth Sect.

The other martial artists who had come to watch had already left Mount Haven.

Many Heaven and Earth Sect disciples were surprised to see James descend from the mountain so early today.

“James.” Delainey walked over immediately and asked, “What happened? Why did you come down the mountain so quickly today?”

She then saw the man following behind James.

The man was tall and lanky. He had dark skin and his face was pointy. He looked somewhat peculiar.

“This... This is?”

She looked at the Black Eagle King with confusion. She had an idea, but she was not entirely certain of it.

James provided no explanation, as a typical person would find it impossible to accept him having a monster around.

“It’s been resolved,” he said, looking at Delainey.

Then, he moved to the side of Heaven and Earth Sect’s Spirit Master and said, “Spirit Master, I killed the monster. The Heaven and Earth Sect is now at peace.”

With a look of gratitude, Spirit Master said, “Thank you so much, Mister Caden.”

James gave a small wave of his hand and said, "It's not a big deal. Don't mention it. I have other things to attend to, so I won't stay any longer."

"Goodbye, Mister Caden."

The Heaven and Earth Sect disciples watched as James left.

After leaving the Heaven and Earth Sect area, James came to a halt and said to Delainey, who was following him, "Delainey, this is Black Eagle, my new subordinate. Bring him back with you to the Southern Plains."

Black Eagle had already noticed Delainey. He was also captivated by Delainey's beauty. He took a step forward and began to court her favor, saying, "Ms. Delainey, right? Hi, I'm Black Eagle, the great Black Eagle King. I'm from the Overworld."

Delainey had already surmised that when she first saw the Black Eagle King. She just did not say anything.

James noticed his leering eyes and reminded him promptly, "Don't get any ideas about her, or I'll never spare you."

"Okay, okay, okay," the Dark King responded.

James continued, "Delainey, take him back to the Southern Plains with you."

Delainey cast a glance at the Black Eagle King and nodded softly. Then she looked at James and asked, "James, how about you? Are you not going back?"

James said, "I'm going back to Cansington to take a look."

He promised Thea that he would go see Winnie frequently.

However, it had been more than six months since he had last seen her. Winnie was already a year old. If there was nothing out of the ordinary, she should be able to walk by now.

'I wonder if Winnie knows how to say "dad".'

A blissful expression spread across James' face as soon as he thought of Winnie.

At the same time, he missed Thea. Over six months had passed, and he had no idea how she was doing.

“Alright. You should go back to Cansington, then. I’ll return to the Southern Plains,” Delaine said, nodding.

Following that, James and Delaine part ways. He left for Cansington, while Delaine brought the Black Eagle King back with her to the Southern Plains.

After half a day, James appeared at the Callahans’ villa in Cansington.

Over the last six months, the Callahan family had grown increasingly powerful in Sol, in terms of both financial prowess and overall strength.

It was a result of the Callahan family’s skill in leveraging James’ influence to expand their businesses. James was the Emperor of Dragonville, the ruler of a country. Furthermore, he was so closely connected to Sol.

Using James’ connections, the Callahan family quickly rose to prominence, becoming the top family in Sol right now. Even on a global scale, the family had some influence.

In the living room of the Callahans’ villa, a one-year-old toddler was crawling on the floor.

She got to her feet, but only took a few steps before falling to the ground again, wailing in pain. Gladys immediately walked over and picked her up.

James walked in just in time to see this happen.

“Mother,” he called her.

Gladys turned around to see James approaching with a joyful expression on his face. She hurried over, smiling.

“My good son-in-law, you’re back.”

“Winnie.” As James looked at the child in Gladys’ arms, he reached out, wanting to hold her.

Gladys handed over Winnie.

“Wanhhh…” Winnie immediately burst out crying. Tears streamed down her cheeks.

Gladys immediately took Winnie back, and she stopped crying in an instant, staring at James with her small, innocent eyes.

“She’s shy around strangers now,” said Gladys with a laugh.

“Mhm.” James nodded and sat on the sofa. He was blaming himself for not being a competent father.

“By the way, where’s Thea?” Gladys asked, “Why didn’t she come back with you?”

“Thea’s busy and can’t get away for the time being. She won’t be back for several years,” said James.

Gladys did not suspect anything.

After that, James stayed in Cansington temporarily. He spent every day with his child. After a few days, the child stopped being wary of him and would approach James for hugs. She could talk now, albeit not very clearly.

With James’ guidance, she was somewhat able to call him dad.

This time, James stayed in Cansington for half a month.

Half a month passed...

“Father, mother, grandfather. There’re still some issues to deal with in Dragonville. I’ll be going back now.”

James looked around the room at the Callahan family.

Lex stepped forward promptly and said, “Go. National affairs are important.”

James stared at Winnie. He was a little hesitant to leave her. He wished he could take Winnie with him, but he was going back to meditate in seclusion and cultivate. He would not have time to care for the child.

“I’ll have to trouble you to take care of Winnie, then.”

“Don’t say that. It’s fine. We’re family,” Timothy began to speak. “Don’t worry. Your child is absolutely safe with the Callahan family. Who in Sol would dare to come looking for trouble at the Callahans’ villa?”

Lex was not exaggerating. The Callahan family was indeed that powerful. Right now, the Callahans were the most prominent family in Sol.

Add to that the existence of James and Thea, and no one in the whole of Sol dared to do anything to the Callahan family.

James was not especially concerned about Winnie's safety.

Given that almost all martial artists around the world had learned of the impending apocalypse, they were all currently putting their efforts into practicing martial arts in order to deal with the approaching apocalypse. No one was out to make trouble.

He just thought that he was not a competent father.

After saying goodbye to the Callahan family, he did not stay any longer and quickly left Cansington for Dragonville in the Southern Plains

Meanwhile, in Tacriyrus...

Tacriyrus was a country established by Sky.

Sky wished to establish a capital as well as a prosperous dynasty that would last for thousands of years.

Maxine had been assisting him for over a year. During this period of over a year, Tacriyrus developed rapidly. With Maxine's help, it conquered many neighboring countries using tactics, sly maneuvers, or brute force.

Right now, Tacriyrus covered a sizable area.

In the palace's backyard in Tacriyrus, Maxine was sitting on a stone bench. She was in a white dress and holding a sword in her hands. The sword bore a resemblance to the Primordial Dragon Blade. The only difference was the color of the blade.

The Primordial Dragon Blade was golden, whereas this sword was black.

It was the Doomsday Sword, which was made in the Divine Sword Villa using dragon bones as well as other unique materials. She touched the Doomsday Sword with a calm expression. Her face was devoid of any emotion.

Then, a man in armor walked over. He knelt down on one knee and addressed her with respect, "Chancellor."

Maxine did not turn around. "Speak," she said indifferently.

"James has already departed Cansington for Southern Plains' Dragonville," said the armor-clad man.

Maxine was currently the Chancellor of Tacriyrus. After a year of development, Tacriyrus had also established an intelligence network. The intelligence network now spanned the entire globe.

Maxine also issued an order to closely monitor James' every move.

Previously, when James was meditating in seclusion at Mt. Thunder Pass in the Southern Plains, Maxine did not come out and cause any trouble.

She did not send anyone to keep an eye on James until he showed up at the Heaven and Earth Sect.

"Mhm. Got it. You may leave," Maxine spoke softly.

"Yes." The man in armor stood up quickly and left in a hurry.

Only then did Maxine slowly rise to her feet from the stone bench.

Right then, Sky walked over.

Maxine glanced at Sky and said, "Why are you out and about when you could be practicing martial arts and meditating in seclusion?"

Sky looked at Maxine, a smile spreading across his face. "I miss you, so I came out to see you."

Maxine appeared distant and cold. She did not respond to Sky.

Sky walked over and sat down. "Is there anything significant that has happened recently?" he asked. Sky had been in closed-door meditation since half a year ago, after receiving a mysterious purple fruit from Mount Bane, so he had no idea what was going on in the outside world right now.

All of Tacriyrus' affairs were currently managed by Maxine.

Maxine said nonchalantly, "Nothing of note, really. A month ago, a very powerful monster appeared on Mount Haven. James came out of seclusion and fought the monster for half a month before killing it eventually."

"Monster?" Sky furrowed his brow.

Maxine did not want to say anything more about this matter. She looked at Sky and asked, "What rank is your cultivation base now?"

"Well," Sky let out a sigh of resignation and said, "I absorbed the purple fruit, but I only managed to break the first shackle."

Besides, I had previously forced my way up to the ninth rank using the Dragon Essence. I was unable to grasp the true essence of cultivation. I can't sense the presence of the Empyrean Spiritual Energy either. This is definitely a major obstacle on my path of cultivation."

Sky was visibly frustrated. He had used the Dragon Essence to break through the ninth rank by force, but as of yet he still could not sense the presence of the Empyrean Spiritual Energy.

Maxine said nonchalantly, "Don't rush. Take your time. There's still a long time until the apocalypse anyway. Continue on with your cultivation. I have to go out for something."

Maxine was about to walk away with the Doomsday Sword in her hand.

In a flash, Sky appeared in front of Maxine, blocking her path.

"I've heard that during this time, you've been keeping an eye on James. What are you up to?"

Maxine cast a glance at him and said, "You don't have to worry about that."

Sky looked at her with deep affection. "Where do I fall short of James?"

"In every respect." Maxine finished her sentence, walked around Sky, and then left, soon disappearing from Sky's view.

Sky's face gradually turned solemn.

At this point, James had already returned to Dragonville in the Southern Plains.

Dragonville was rapidly developing.

Quincy had brought a large amount of money to Dragonville. With her assistance, Dragonville was rapidly growing. In less than ten years, a country truly for humanity would be established.

As for other things, they were managed by other people. There was Henry, the Elite Eight at the Dragon Palace's upper management, Blake Davis, and others.

James did not have to worry about Dragonville for the time being, so he arrived at Mt. Thunder Pass once again. This time, he brought the Black Eagle King as well.

He had an idea to cultivate with the Black Eagle King's help.

James expressed his intention, and the Black Eagle King was instantly displeased.

"Mr. James, I didn't follow you to become your training partner. I chose to follow you because I wanted to grow stronger and have more opportunities. If you want me to be your training partner, that's fine. You should at the very least teach me the cultivation method you've learned, don't you think?"

James' cultivation method caught the Black Eagle King's attention.

"I can't do that." James refused, saying, "I don't trust you yet, since you're from another world. You're an enemy of the human race on Earth. After you've followed me for a while and I completely trust you, only then will I teach you."

James' cultivation method was obtained from the Earth's Chamber of Scriptures. It was an unrivaled secret body refinement technique. How could he just pass it on so easily?

"For how long?" With a darkened face, the Black Eagle King said. "You're not planning on having me follow you for thousands of years before passing it on to me, are you?"

James gave a small wave of his hand and said, "It won't take that long. About three to five years. That's probably enough."

Given that he was only in his thirties, thousands of years seemed far too long for James. Three to five years, from his perspective, was a sufficient amount of time.

When he heard that, the Black Eagle King breathed a sigh of relief.

"Well, fine then. I'll just be there to help you with your practice, right? I'm terrible at everything, but I make a good training partner," the Black Eagle King agreed with a smile.

After hearing this from the Black Eagle King, James was also relieved.

With a monster who was almost at the Supernatural rank as a training partner, he believed his physical strength would soon reach a level that could compete with Supernaturals.

At that point, not even a Supernatural could do anything to him, even if he relied solely on his physical strength.

James was once again cultivating at Mt. Thunder Pass.

Maxine, on the other hand, had arrived at Cansington in Sol in a hurry. When she appeared in Cansington, it was already nighttime.

She stood at the top of a fifty-story building, looking out over the entire Cansington.

The breeze was blowing through her hair, tossing it about. On her beautiful and alluring face, there was a hint of melancholy.

“James, you forced me to do this. I’ve arrived at this point all because of you.”

Then, she leaped into the air and flew toward the Callahans’ villa in the distance. Not long after, she arrived outside the Callahans’ villa.

Right now, the Callahans were a truly prominent family. Guards were stationed around the villa’s perimeter.

As soon as Maxine appeared, she drew the attention of several guards. Some guards immediately approached with their weapons and blocked Maxine’s path.

‘Who’s there?’

Looking at the guards that were standing in her way, Maxine said casually, “Maxine Caden, from the Floret Palace.”

Maxine stated her name.

As the guards of the Callahan family, it was impossible for them not to know about Floret Palace’s Maxine. She was not only the Master of Floret Palace but also Tacriyrus’ Chancellor. She was also very powerful in her own right.

Aside from that, all the guards of the Callahan family were aware that Maxine was once a Caden family member and was quite close to James.

“So it’s the Master of Floret Palace. Are you visiting the Callahans’ villa for a specific reason?” The guards treated Maxine with great respect once they learned who she was.

“Here’s the thing. James is worried about Winnie staying at the Callahans’ villa, so he came to me specifically and requested that I pick her up,” Maxine spoke softly. Her tone was very calm.

“I see. Come in, then.”

The guard did not stop her and motioned for her to proceed, allowing Maxine into the Callahans’ villa.

It was nighttime. Almost everyone in the Callahan family was awake. When Maxine appeared in the Callahans’ villa, the family members all stood up.

As members of the Callahan family, how could they possibly not recognize Maxine?

“If it isn’t Maxine, the Master of Floret Palace. What brought you to the Callahan’s villa?” asked Lex.

“Master, take a seat.” Others were inviting Maxine to sit.

Maxine sat down. She looked at Lex, who was the head of the family, then at Winnie, who was drinking milk.

“Here’s the thing. James is still concerned about Winnie staying at the Callahans’ villa. He specifically requested that I come and take Winnie away.”

“Really?” Lex looked doubtful.

Even the rest of the Callahans were puzzled.

James just left yesterday. He did not say anything as he was leaving. Why would he ask Maxine to come and take Winnie away now?

“Maxine, did James really ask you to come?” Gladys looked unconvinced.

“We could find out if it’s true with a simple phone call, couldn’t we?” said David.

“Right.” Lex immediately took out his phone and called James.

James was at Mt. Thunder Pass, sitting on the ground in a lotus position while cultivating. Right then, his phone started to ring.

He paused his cultivation, pulled out his phone, and took a glance. When he noticed the call was from Lex in Cansington, he promptly accepted the call and asked, “Grandfather, what’s the matter? Did something happen?”

Lex said, “Maxine showed up at the Callahan’s villa, claiming that you asked her to pick up Winnie, so I’m calling to ask you about that.”

As Lex made the call, Maxine sat on the sofa and watched in silence.

James, on the other hand, stood up abruptly and exclaimed after he heard those words, "What?"

He breathed in deeply, forcing himself to calm down. "Grandfather, I never told Maxine to pick up Winnie. Don't give her to Maxine."

In Cansington, at the Callahans' villa, Maxine snatched the phone from Lex's grasp with a casual wave of her hand. Holding the phone, she said, "James, it's been a while."

James roared, "Maxine, what are you trying to do?"

With a faint smile, Maxine said, "Nothing, really. The world hasn't been all that peaceful lately. I'm worried about Winnie, so I specifically came to Cansington to take her away and protect her."

"You... If you dare to hurt Winnie, I'll never forgive you," James yelled angrily.

Over a year ago, he was already aware that Maxine had changed.

A lot of things that happened were connected to her. It was just that Maxine did not do anything after that, so James ignored her for the time being. Maxine going to the Callahans' villa at this time was not something he had anticipated.

Maxine's laughter came over the phone. "Don't worry. I'll never hurt her. She's you and Thea's child. I want Thea herself to kneel before me and beg."

Beep, beep, beep...

James wanted to say more, yet Maxine had already hung up the phone.

His face darkened. With a murderous expression, he clenched his fist and said coldly, "If Winnie is harmed in any way, I won't ever let you get away."

He left Mt. Thunder Pass immediately.

"Mr. Caden, what's the matter?" When the Black Eagle King noticed James hurrying off, he could not help but shout at him, but James did not respond.

Meanwhile, at the Callahans' villa...

After the Callahan family heard Maxine's words, they all stood up and stared at Maxine, alarmed.

Maxine got to her feet slowly as well. She looked at Gladys, who was holding Winnie, and said with a cold, detached look on her face, "Give me the child?"

Gladys took a few steps back.

In a flash, Maxine appeared in front of Gladys. Before Gladys could even react, the child in her arms was already taken by Maxine.

"Wahhh." After being taken away, the child immediately burst out in tears.

With Winnie in her arms, Maxine quickly left the Callahans' villa.

The Callahan family members, on the other hand, were as pale as ghosts.

"What are we going to do?"

"What exactly is Maxine up to?"

All of the Callahan family members were in a state of panic. Only Lex managed to regain his composure and called James immediately.

"It's not good, James. Winnie was taken by Maxine."

James was hastily making his way to Southern Plains' Dragonville at this precise moment. When he heard that, his heart swelled with intense rage.

"I-I'm rushing over to Cansington."

He traveled quickly, and he soon reached the military region. He then boarded a private plane bound for Cansington. On the plane, he even pulled out his phone and made a call to Maxine.

Maxine's phone number remained the same. The call went through shortly. Over the phone, the sound of a child crying could be heard.

When he heard the cries, James was heartbroken. He suppressed his rage, adopted a humble demeanor, and said in a lowered voice, "Maxine, what are you trying to do?"

"Hehe." Maxine's laughter could be heard over the phone. "I've changed my mind. Thea and the child, you can only choose one of them. Don't say that I'm not giving you a chance. Within a week, bring me Thea's head. If I don't see her head within a week, I'll let you see Winnie's."

Maxine laughed in a grim and unsettling way. The sound of her laughter was chilling.

James took a deep breath, stifling his anger and forcing himself not to erupt in rage.

“Don’t mess around, Maxine. Where are you? I’ll come over to you. If there’s a problem, shouldn’t we just talk it out in person? Is it really necessary to go this far?”

“I’ll call you.”

Maxine ended the call after she said that.

Beep, beep, beep.

“Hey, hey!” James shouted, then called back right away.

“Sorry, the number you have dialed is unavailable. Please try again later.”

James kept trying to call, but the calls could not get through.

He was in a panic, and it took him some time to calm down. He then took out his phone and made a call to Henry.

“Mr. Caden.”

Over the phone, Henry’s voice could be heard.

James instructed him, “Make use of every available connection and every method at your disposal to track down Maxine’s whereabouts. If you have any updates, please inform me right away.”

“Yes.” Henry did not ask why since James’ tone was solemn. He could also tell that something significant had occurred.

After James called Henry, Henry began to pass down the order to use every available means to locate Maxine.

Meanwhile, James was en route to Cansington by air. Throughout the journey, he remained silent.

He knew what had happened to Maxine, how she had become this way, and why she had taken Winnie. He wanted to go to Thea.

However, Thea was currently purifying the Demonic Energy in the Chamber of Scriptures. Even if he went, he might not be able to see Thea.

James arrived in Cansington late at night, returning once again to the Callahans’ villa.

James hastily made his way to the Callahans' villa.

As soon as he entered the villa, he asked anxiously, "Winnie? Where's Winnie?"

He was aware that Winnie had been taken, but his mind was clouded by his worry for her.

The entire Callahan family remained silent.

James plopped himself down on the sofa. He pulled out his phone again and called Maxine.

Meanwhile, in Cansington, Maxine was standing on the top of a building. From here, she could see the Callahans' villa. Behind her stood a few men.

"Chancellor, they've been escorted out of Cansington," said the person behind her.

"Alright." Maxine nodded softly and said, "Pass down the order to take good care of the child. Don't let the child suffer any harm."

"Yes."

Right then, her phone started to ring. Remaining calm and collected, she answered it.

Over the phone, James' roar could be heard, "Maxine, what exactly are you trying to do?"

His voice was so loud that Maxine's eardrums went numb. She held the phone away slightly. Maxine did not start speaking until James stopped. With a soft voice, she said, "I told you, didn't I? Bring Thea's head to me, and the child will live. Otherwise, the child will die."

"Thea is missing." James inhaled deeply and said, "I haven't seen Thea in six months."

James chose to lie. He wanted to first appease Maxine and ensure his child's safety.

After hearing his words, Maxine furrowed her brow. During this period of time, she was watching James closely. She knew James was in closed-door meditation at Mt. Thunder Pass in the Southern Plains, but there was no sign of Thea.

"What happened?" she asked, her brows knitted. "Why is Thea missing?"

“How would I know?” James took a deep breath and said, “Maxine, where are you? I’ll come to you. Don’t hurt the child. She’s innocent. You can make any request, and I’ll accept.”

‘You’ll accept any request I make?’ Maxine muttered softly.

Soon after, she hung up the phone.

“Hey! Hey, hey…” James kept shouting.

However, Maxine had already ended the call.

Phew!

He took a deep breath, forcing himself to calm down. Now all he had to do was wait to hear from Henry.

Shortly after, Henry called.

“We have information, Mr. Caden. Maxine hasn’t left Cansington yet. She’s still there. However, she sent Winnie away. Winnie isn’t in Cansington right now. We’re doing everything we can to track her down.”

“Alright. Understood.” James instructed, “Use every available connection. You must find out where Winnie is. Make contact with Sol and conduct a search using Sol’s God-King system.”

“Alright.”

Henry did not say anything else.

As soon as he tracked down Maxine, he found out what she had done. He was aware that Maxine had taken James’ child. Henry continued on without pausing and got in touch with the King of Sol right away.

Meanwhile, James was still making calls nonstop.

After several attempts, Maxine eventually answered his call.

This time, James did not become enraged. He suppressed his emotions, calmed himself down, and asked calmly, “I know you’re still in Cansington. Where are you? I’ll come to see you.”

Maxine looked at the time. It was already after three o’clock in the morning. She said, “It’s late today. Tomorrow. I’ll contact you tomorrow.”

After saying that, she ended the call.

James leaned back against the sofa.

That night, he did not sleep.

James had been waiting to hear from Henry.

However, even after Henry made use of the God-King system in Sol, he could not track down Winnie. Maxine seemed to have anticipated all of this from the start. Winnie left Cansington, and they lost track of her after that.

Right now, James could only wait. He had to wait until he saw Maxine.

After eight o'clock in the morning, Maxine called.

“Go to Cynthia’s house.”

After saying that, she hung up. James, on the other hand, immediately went out and hurried over to Cynthia’s residence in Cansington.

Cynthia has spent most of the last few years in Cansington. She did not move around either.

A few years ago, James gifted her the dragon’s blood. She drank the dragon’s blood, and with her own Frost Physique, her cultivation advanced quickly. She also reached the Eighth Stair of the Skyward Stairway, only a step away from the peak of the eighth rank.

“Cynthia.”

Cynthia was sitting in the villa, contemplating something as she looked out the window. Someone called for her from behind.

A woman walked down from the second floor.

The woman was in thin pajamas. She was tall and slim, with long, dark hair. Her appearance was stunning, and she exuded an ethereal aura.

Cynthia regained her composure and turned to face Tiara, who was approaching, and asked, "What's the matter?"

Tiara walked over and sat down on the sofa. She pulled out her phone and said, "Take a look."

Cynthia glanced at the phone. When she realized it was a message from Maxine, she furrowed her brows unconsciously and said, "Isn't Maxine the Master of Floret Palace and the Chancellor of Tacriyrus right now? Why is she in Cansington, and why is she coming to our house?"

For the past few years, Tiara had been living at Cynthia's house. They spent all these years together and became the best of friends who would confide in one another about anything.

Back then, James gifted Tiara the Dragon Essence. She took the Dragon Essence as well. However, it was only a few years ago that she was first exposed to cultivation. Dragon Essence alone was not enough for her to become a top martial artist.

Her current rank was only at the peak of the seventh rank.

Tiara shook her head and said, "That I don't know. I just got Maxine's message out of the blue. She said she'll be here soon."

"Alright." Cynthia nodded and said, "We haven't seen each other in years. I wonder how she's doing, as well as James and Thea. There's news about James, though. I was looking at the Martial Arts Forum a few days ago and learned that James showed up at the Heaven and Earth Sect."

The two of them conversed softly. They talked about some of the things that happened several years ago.

At this moment, the doorbell rang.

Cynthia promptly pressed the remote control and the door opened.

Maxine walked in wearing a gorgeous dress. She was holding a black sword in her hand. As soon as she entered the house, she said with a smile, "Tiara, Cynthia. It's been years since I've seen you."

Both of them stood up as well.

"Maxine." Tiara's face was beaming with joy. She said, "You're really here. I thought you were joking."

“Little girl, I haven’t seen you in a few years. You’ve matured, haven’t you?”

Maxine glanced at Tiara and could not help but chuckle.

Tiara looked slightly bashful. She experienced yet another growth spurt because she absorbed the power of the Dragon Essence.

“By the way, James will be here later,” said Maxine.

When she heard that, Tiara was stunned.

‘James will be here?’

This man had been buried in her heart for years.

Cynthia, on the other hand, looked delighted. She asked, “Really? Is James really coming here? I’ve heard that a year ago, Thea gave birth to a girl and that the child is at the Callahans’ villa right now. I wanted to visit the Callahans to take a look, but I couldn’t find the time.”

“Mhm. He’ll be here.”

Maxine had a smile on her face.

She sat down on the sofa and crossed her legs. With a carefree expression, she said, “He had initially returned to the Southern Plains, but I took his child and forced him to come to Cansington.”

She was talking about it casually.

Cynthia and Tiara, however, were horrified as they listened to her.

“You kidnapped James’ child?”

Both of them were baffled.

After a few seconds of stunned silence, Cynthia laughed. “Maxine, you’re joking, right? Why would you kidnap James’ child?”

Maxine cast a glance at Cynthia. As she looked over, Cynthia simply felt chills all over her body, like she was in an abyss.

Maxine's stare was frightening. Cynthia had never seen her like this before. She backed up a little, taking a few steps.

Maxine said nonchalantly, "That's right. I kidnapped James' child. I did so much for him. I worked in the public eye and rose to become the head of the Cadens. I assisted him wholeheartedly. Regardless, he decided to live in seclusion with Thea."

She spoke softly as if she were talking about a trivial matter, but her words were laced with resentment and displeasure.

After hearing that, they were both stunned. For a while, neither of them said anything.

The atmosphere in the room was a little unusual.

Then, the doorbell began to ring.

"I'll go open the door." Cynthia gathered herself and quickly walked toward the entrance. She opened the door and saw that it was James. She looked at James and called out to him, "James."

James had rushed over here. As soon as he entered the house, he could not help but ask, "Has Maxine arrived?"

"S-She's here," said Cynthia.

She wanted to alert James that Maxine was being a little odd. However, James had already entered the house in a hurry after learning that Maxine had arrived.

When he was in the living room, he saw Maxine seated on the sofa. She was the same, just as gorgeous and charming as before. Nonetheless, the moment James saw Maxine, the anger in his heart swelled up.

However, he stifled it.

Winnie was currently not in Cansington. If he flew into a rage, Maxine would be angered. It would be a problem if she hurt the child.

He remained composed as he walked over and sat across Maxine.

"I'm here."

Maxine looked at him with a calm expression. Her face was devoid of any emotion. What she was thinking about was unclear.

James took a deep breath, glanced at Maxine, who had a serene expression on her face, and forced a smile. He said, "It's been a while, Maxine. Are you alright? I've heard that you built a Floret Palace. I wanted to pay you a visit and catch up, but I've been extremely busy lately. I couldn't find the time."

"Really?" Maxine countered calmly, "Did you really want to stop by and catch up with me?"

"Mhm. Really." James nodded solemnly.

If he could establish a cordial relationship with Maxine right now, he would do just that. He would use as many kind words as he could, even if they were against his conscience.

As long as his child could be safe, nothing else mattered.

"I've also heard that you're with Sky and have become the Tacriyrus' Chancellor, assisting Sky in managing Tacriyrus. Congratulations," James said with a smile.

However, when he said that, Maxine's expression changed immediately. Her face darkened and she asked coldly, "James, what do you mean by that?"

James was stunned. He did not know what he had said wrong.

After giving it some thought, he said, "Maxine, I didn't mean anything by that. Let's stop talking about this. Let's talk about the state of the future. You've always been smart. Right now, the apocalypse is approaching. I went back to live in the Southern Plains and established Dragonville to create a peaceful country for humanity. Previously, Thea even asked me to come over to you and ask for your assistance."

Maxine took a deep breath. She forced herself to calm down. Then she asked, "By the way, where is Thea exactly?"

James' expression became somber. He said, "I really don't know where Thea is. She's been missing for six months. During the last six months, I've sent people out to find her, but even after searching everywhere in the world, I couldn't find her."

James lied.

"Really?" Maxine looked skeptical.

"Mhm. Really." James nodded and said, "After the child was born, she came to meet me at Mt. Thunder Pass and we cultivated together for six months. We had a fight, then she left and never showed up again. I really don't know where she is right now."

Cynthia and Tiara were standing off to the side, listening to the two's simple conversation.

They both looked at each other, but neither of them spoke. They did not know what had happened either.

James had entered the house for quite some time.

However, he never mentioned his child. Instead, he talked about the relationship between him and Thea. He talked about fights and breakups and other things along those lines.

Sure enough, after he mentioned these, Maxine's expression softened considerably.

James began coaxing Maxine to speak. He started to ask about his child.

"Maxine, did Thea come to you? Did Thea suspect that there was something going on between us so you two got into a fight, and that's why you took the child?" James asked tentatively.

"No." Maxine shook her head.

"So why did you?" James inquired, perplexed. "We seemed to have a close relationship. We endured hardships together. We've become friends through adversity. Why did you kidnap my child?"

"What do you think?" Maxine looked at James with a smile.

James had been trying to figure out what Maxine was thinking. He had already guessed. However, he did not reveal it.

"Maxine, I really don't know. I've always thought of you as my little sister. Why are you doing this?"

"Little sister?" Maxine sneered. "Don't play dumb, James. You know what I'm thinking. I gave up so much to help you, but all I got in return was a thank you. I don't need your thanks."

"Then what do you want?" James asked sternly.

“The same as I said before. Kill Thea. If she lives, the child will not.”

Maxine was unyielding. Her current self was entirely different from before. She resembled a demon, eager to take the lives of others whenever she pleased.

“But I really have no idea where Thea is,” James said exasperatedly.

When Maxine heard that, she started to get lost in her thoughts.

‘Where is Thea? Where did she go?’ she pondered.

She also began to reflect on what James had said. She wondered if James and Thea really did have a falling out.

After a while, Maxine eventually said, “James, marry me, and I’ll let the child go. And…”

She pointed to Cynthia and Tiara, who were standing nearby.

“You should marry three people all at once.”

“Huh?”

“Maxine, you…”

Cynthia and Tiara were both nonplussed. They never expected Maxine to say something like that.

‘What? Is this not good?’ Maxine looked at the two of them, who were standing to the side, and said, “Don’t tell me you have a problem with this. The entire world is about to change right now. It’ll be the end of the world soon. Are the outdated notions of monogamy and loyalty between two people still relevant?”

They were both stunned and did not say anything for a while. Even James was taken aback.

Maxine was forcing him to marry her. This made sense. However, why did she involve Cynthia and Tiara in this?

James looked at Maxine. He did not speak.

Maxine turned to Cynthia and asked, “Cynthia, do you have any objections?”

“I…” Cynthia stole a glance at James and shook her head, saying, “I-I don’t. I’ll do whatever you say.”

“How about you, Tiara?”

Tiara finally sat down after that. She looked around at everyone present and said with a pout, "What the hell are you guys doing? I'm not in the mood to mess around with you."

"You must marry three people at the same time. Otherwise, the child will die." Maxine was very adamant. "After three years of marriage, I'll bring the child back. Consider this carefully."

She stood up holding the Doomsday Sword, then turned and walked away.

James was left flustered.
