The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2151—James was truly interested in the Burial Jade.

Since Zoe brought up the topic, James expressed his interest in the jade pendant.

As for the Targwyns' ancestral land, James knew the Targwyns were renowned in the family's predecessors once made up the greatest clan in a certain period of history.

Thus, the Targwyns' ancestral land was undoubtedly an extraordinary location.

This piqued his interest and James was intrigued to see it.

Zoe briefly hesitated after James stated his refusal to marry Laelia.

The jade pendant was their family heirloom, and they refused to hand it over even at the cost of their entire city, so it was impossible to simply hand it over to James.

Although James did indeed save their family, Zoe was unwilling to give it to James as a simple gift of gratitude.

He would only bequeath it to James in the form of a dowry.

“Mr. Caden, the jade pendant has been handed down by our family's ancestors and is a very sentimental item to our family. We can only offer it to you in the form of a dowry. Please forgive me.”

Zoe was upfront with his reservations.

James would have to marry Laelia if he wanted the jade pendant.

Disappointed, James said, “If that's the case, then forget it.”

There was also a look of disappointment on Laelia's face.

She was in favor of marrying James but did not want to force the issue since he already had a wife.

Sitting at the head of the table, Zoe called out, “Laelia.”

Laelia nodded and replied, “Yes, Father?”

Zoe ordered, “Since Mr. Caden is interested in our family's ancestral land, you should take him there tomorrow.”

“Understood.” Laelia nodded.

“Alright. Everyone’s dismissed.”

Zoe stood up and left the main hall first.

The other Targwyn family members also left one after another.

Laelia led James back to the palace’s backyard.

In the backyard, Laelia said with a soft smile, “You don’t have to take it seriously, James. Even though my father’s plan to marry us fell through, you don’t have to feel burdened or pressured.”

James smiled and replied, “I should be apologizing to you instead. I’m sorry I publicly rejected the marriage and embarrassed you.”

Laelia smiled bashfully in response.

Suddenly, James remembered something and asked, “By the way, what kind of place is the Targwyns’ ancestral land?”

Laelia explained, “It’s where our family used to live a long time ago. Our ancestors have lived there for generations. We only left the ancestral land a thousand years ago.

“Oh, is there anything special about your family’s ancestral land?” asked James.

Laelia shook her head and said, “I’m not very sure about that. However, there’s a rumor that’s been passed down about a super powerful ancestor that existed in our family. It’s said that he left his legacy behind in that land. Many years have passed, but no one has ever unearthed this inheritance. Every family member is granted permission to visit the ancestral land when they come of age to try their luck looking for this legacy.”

Laelia briefly explained her family’s ancestral land.

Although she did not know much about their family history, she knew they had a powerful ancestor.

James was intrigued by the Targwyns’ ancestral land after briefly learning about it.

Laelia took out the jade pendant and looked at it, saying, “I’d love to give it to you, but my father said it’s our family’s heirloom, so I can’t just give it away.”

James gently waved his hand and said, “I’m just curious about it. It’s not that I really want it. Plus, it may not even be useful to me.”

Laelia absentmindedly looked at the Burial Jade. With doubt on her pretty face, she said, "I've no idea what secret this jade pendant holds."

James looked at it, and then a thought flashed in his mind. He suggested, "Perhaps it has something to do with your family's ancestral land."

"Perhaps."

Laelia put away the jade pendant and did not think much of it anymore.

"You shout rest well for the night. I'll bring you to there tomorrow."

"Alright." James nodded.

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2152—Laelia turned around and left.

James cultivated in the courtyard all day long.

Before long, night had come.

James sat in the courtyard and stared at the starry night in a daze.

Looking at the star-lit sky, he felt extremely small.

He did not know what was on the other side of this starry sky or how many more secrets it held.

Was there even a limit to this starry sky?

As he thought about it, the night passed.

Laelia appeared the next day morning in the courtyard.

She wore a gorgeous dress and was beautiful as ever, radiating a noble allure.

"James."

Her airy and sweet voice called to him.

James nodded and answered, "Mhm."

"Let's go. I'll bring you to our ancestral land."

"Alright."

James was interested in the Targwyns' ancestral land and was curious to see whether a powerful Targwyn ancestor indeed left behind an inheritance.

The two walked out of the palace together.

The two sat in a beast carriage attached to a flying creature. After getting into the carriage, the creature began to move, taking them away from Tabalham.

Laelia explained while they travelled inside the carriage, "My family's ancestral land is located in a place called Endless Sea within the Land of Tabal. We'll have to travel through the Endless Sea to reach a region guarded by powerful formations. Only members of our family can pass through the formation. Even top-tier elite fighters cannot pass through the formation and will be locked out of the area."

"Mhm." James nodded.

He was not surprised.

The Celestial Abode's Spirit Tool did mention to him that the Targwyns' ancestor used to stand at the top of the world at a certain period of history.

What did standing at the top of the world even mean?

He must have had strength beyond James' imagination and reached an unfathomable realm. Such a powerful man left behind the ancestral land, so it would surely be a remarkable area protected by formations.

After leaving Tabal Empire, the beast carriage flew at full speed.

This route was the direction that Laelia had fled the last time.

While being hunted down, she planned to escape to the ancestral land. As long as she entered the ancestral land, she would be safe. Unfortunately, her enemies caught up before she could reach her intended destination.

After flying for a few days, the beast carriage entered the mountain range. Then, they traveled for another two days through mountains and finally arrived in an oceanic region.

Sitting inside the beast carriage, Laelia said, "We've arrived at the Endless Sea, James. We'll reach our family's ancestral land in one more day."

"Mhm." James nodded slightly.

The beast carriage flew over the sea.

After flying for a day, a storm whipped up in the stretch of ocean ahead of them.

A powerful gust of wind swept across the sky. Even James felt terrified and helpless at that moment. His body would have been torn into pieces if he got caught up in the storm.

“James, this is the first checkpoint to enter our family’s ancestral land. This storm has always protected our family. There’s a spoken rumor in our family that even a Sage won’t be capable of forcefully passing through this storm.”

Laelia explained.

Hearing this, James was shocked.

Even a Sage would not be able to pass through?

As far as he knew, only a few predecessors of the Sealed Realm had reached the Sage Rank.

However, it made a lot of sense since the invincible ancestor of the Targwyn most likely set up the formation.

Laelia smiled and said, “This storm does not affect those of our family. Our family’s blood allows us to pass through unharmed.”

She looked at James and said again, “You’re the first outsider to ever visit our ancestral land since the times of yore.”

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2153—James would be the first outsider to visit the Targwyn’s ancestral land since times of yore.

The Targwyn family only moved out of the ancestral land a thousand years ago. Before then, they had lived in ancestral land and were isolated from the outside world.

The beast carriage came close to the storm. Even though they were still quite far away, the storm’s force caused James’ heart to race.

Laelia stepped out of the beast carriage and looked at the cyclone over the sea. She bit her finger, and a drop of blood trickled out.

She moved the drop of blood toward the storm before them.

At that moment, a strange phenomenon happened.

The blood was absorbed into the storm and suddenly the turbulent gales ceased, giving way to a safe passage.

“Keep going,”

Laelia ordered the beast carriage to pass through the storm.

After passing through the storm, they entered another marine region surrounded by white mist. It was difficult to see anything beyond the few meters ahead of him.

Laelia asked, “Are you seeing the thick mist, James?”

James nodded and said, “Mhm. There’s a thick, white mist, and it’s hard to see clearly.”

Laelia explained, “This is the second checkpoint to enter the ancestral land of our family. The white mist will cause one to lose all sense of direction. If one isn’t from the Targwyn family, they will get trapped in the mist, even if they somehow got through the storm outside.

“However, the white mist is simply part of the atmosphere for members of my family.”

With a bright smile, Laelia directed the beast carriage through the white mist. After about ten minutes, they emerged on the other side of the mist.

Beyond the ocean ahead, an island appeared.

A mysterious circle of light surrounded the island. A number of symbols could be seen floating inside the light, making the island seem incredibly mysterious.

Standing in the beast carriage, Laelia looked at the island before them and explained, “That’s our family’s ancestral land. Thousands of years ago, our family lived on this island. There’s a formation guarding the island. According to our family’s legend, our ancestor left the island because he drew the ire of a formidable enemy. Thus, they left this place to protect future generations.”

The beast carriage kept moving forward.

Soon, it appeared near the island and was blocked by the mysterious light circle.

Laelia raised her hand and gently tapped on the mysterious light circle.

She was a member of the Targwyn family, so she could easily break through the mysterious formation. A hole formed in the formation, and the beast carriage easily passed through.

The beast carriage stopped in the open field.

Laelia and James got out of the carriage.

“This is my family’s ancestral land. The island has remained deserted after the family left. Only an elder stayed behind to guard it. He was unwilling to leave and remained there to protect the island.”

James scanned the surrounding.

The island looked relatively normal, and nothing looked out of the ordinary.

“Let’s go, James.”

Laelia reached out to hold James’ hand and pulled him forward.

Soon, they headed deep into the island.

Eventually they reached a small village.

There was a massive willow tree with a small bird resting on it at the village gate. The bird had a striking red plumage. Seeing visitors approach, it cawed.

“This is our family’s ancestral village.”

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2154—After reaching the village, Laelia explained, “Thousands of years ago, my family’s forbearers lived in this village.”

James nodded lightly and said, “Mhm. The island appears ordinary at first glance, but there were many unusual things along the way. It’s evidently a place left behind by a very powerful person. However, did he really leave behind his legacy here?”

Laelia shook her head and said, “I’m not sure about that. According to my family’s oral tradition, he left behind an inheritance for the younger generations of our family to attract them to the island. We’re allowed to search the island to see if we can find the boons he left us. as adults. However, none of our family members have found it even after all his time.”

“Is that so?”

James questioned her, “This is your family’s ancestral land. Your family’s forebearers have lived on this island and should know where to look for the boons, right?.”

Laelia nodded slightly and said, "My family's ancestral land is rather ordinary and looks just like every other island. The only thing special is the grotto behind the village."

"Oh? There's a grotto?"

Laelia's statement caught James' attention. He asked, "What kind of grotto is it?"

Laelia explained, "It's a bottomless grotto. Since ancient times, our family members would go to the grotto to try their luck in finding the inheritance when they come of age. However, they've always returned empty-handed."

James asked, "Then, what's so special about it?"

Laelia explained, "Our family has passed down by word of mouth that a magical power will appear in the grotto every once in a while. A light will appear along with the magical power. However, the phenomenon would disappear after my family members entered the grotto."

Laelia briefly talked about the grotto behind the village.

In short, it was a place full of magic, mysteries, and unknown secrets.

Many myths about this place were spread amongst the Targywn family. It was said that their ancestor had also left behind an unrivaled signature martial art skill. In a person's hands, it would allow their strength to improve by many fold.

It had been rumored that there was a great fortune hidden within the grotto.

Countless myths about the grotto had been passed through the generation.

"Let's go inside the village, James."

Laelia led James into the village.

There were many simple buildings inside the village. However, they were worn out, and it was evident no one had lived in them for a long time.

Soon, an old man approached them.

The old man had a slightly hunched back. He wore a gray robe and walked with a cane. Beside him was a girl about 17 to 18 years old.

"Sir Sylvester."

Laelia walked over to him and greeted him respectfully.

She looked in James' direction and explained, "This is our family's elder that has been guarding the ancestral land. His name is Sylvester Targwyn. Father told me that Sir Sylvester has been guarding this place for a thousand years."

Sylvester looked at Laelia, and a smile formed on his wrinkled face. "Laelia."

Laelia pulled James over and introduced, "Sir Sylvester, this is James. He's our family's savior. Recently, our family underwent a crisis and he rescued us from doom. Had he not come, our family would've been wiped out. To repay James for his life-saving grace, my father has asked me to bring him around our ancestral land to see if he's able to attain anything of value for himself."

Hearing this, Sylvester looked at James with a strange expression.

The strange look disappeared in the next second.

With a smile on his wrinkled face, he said, "I see."

Laelia suddenly recalled something and asked, "By the way, Sir Sylvester. With the recent appearance of the seal, our family's heirloom has projected some visions. Is our family's jade pendant connected to the seal?"

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2155—The person of the highest seniority in the Targwyn family was Sylvester.

He was the only person who could possibly answer whether the jade pendant had something to do with the seal.

Sylvester shook his head and said, "I'm not sure either. Our history has been fragmented. I only know that our family's jade pendant is one-of-a-kind and that a huge secret must be hidden within it."

Even Sylvester did not know about the jade pendant's secret.

"Alright."

Laelia was disappointed but did not press him for further answers. She changed the subject, saying, "Sir Sylvester, let's bring James to the grotto first."

"Yuliana, bring them there,"

Sylvester instructed the girl beside him.

She was relatively young, about 17 to 18 years old. She was dressed very simply and wore a blue dress. Although she seemed like a peasant, she was lovely.

“Yes, Grandpa.”

Yuliana looked at Laelia and James, saying, “This way, please.”

She led both of them toward the back of the village.

Behind the village stood a mountain range.

The ground was full of entangled roots on the mountain paths, and the trees blocked out the sun.

The ground was also littered with piles of fallen leaves.

Rustling sounds rang through the air as they stepped through the fallen leaves. White mist seeped out from the leaves.

They walked through the mountain roads for about ten minutes. Finally, a cliff appeared in James’ line of sight. At the bottom of the cliff, there was a natural cave. It was relatively small and about five meters high and three meters wide.

Soon, they reached the cave entrance.

Laelia explained, “This is the grotto, James.”

James looked at the grotto’s entrance.

It was pitch black inside, and he could not see anything. Even though he was a cultivator with excellent eyesight, he could not see what was within the grotto.

Standing aside, Yuliana explained, “We’ve arrived at the grotto. Laelia, and James, you two can go in. I won’t go with you guys, but remember to be careful while inside. The grotto is very deep, and the paths are winding. Thus, it’s easy to get lost inside there.”

James replied, “Thanks for the reminder.”

He was intrigued by the grotto in Targwyns’ ancestral land and its hidden secret.

Without hesitation, he stepped into the grotto.

Laelia followed behind him.

After entering the grotto, it was relatively empty and only surrounded by some bizarre stalactites. The ground was full of potholes and moisture.

When they stepped into the grotto, a chilly breeze swept toward them.

Despite being a powerful martial artist, he still felt a chill, as if he was inside a frigid abyss.

James could not help but shudder.

Laelia immediately explained, “It’s because there’s a frigid abyss within the grotto, which is full of cold energy.”

“I see. No wonder.”

James nodded lightly and did not think too much about it.

Looking at the winding paths, he asked, “Which way should we go?”

Laelia shook her head slightly and said, “I don’t know. This grotto is very magical, and the paths constantly change. What you see now will change by the time we pass through to leave the grotto.”

Shocked, James asked, “Is it that miraculous?”

Laelia nodded and said, “Yeah, it’s very magical. Because of this, our family members will come upon becoming adults to look for the great treasure. Although it’s miraculous, no one has ever found the inheritance even after such a long time. After some time, none bothered coming back despite its being so magical.”

The extraordinary grotto tempted James’ curiosity.

He had the Celestial Abode, and two powerful people existed within it-Nova and Sophie.

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2156–With guidance from the two women, he might be able to obtain some kind of boon in the grotto.

He looked at Laelia and asked, “How about we split up?”

Since they were in the Targwyns' ancestral land, he did not want to stick with Laelia. If he were to find the legacy within the grotto, it would inevitably arouse the resentment of her family. Although he was not afraid of conflict, he wanted to avoid it as much as possible.

"Sure." Laelia nodded gently.

Afterward, James walked toward one of the passages.

Laelia walked in the opposite direction.

James found many passages as he walked deeper into the grotto. He was unsure of where he should go.

"Nova. Nova...!"

After separating from Laelia, he called out the Celestial Abode's Spirit Tool.

Soon, a voice responded in his mind, "Yes, Master?"

James said, "I've arrived at the Targwyns' ancestral land. It's a very enchanting place. I learned that this place was left behind by a powerful ancestor of theirs. Do you know if there are any boons within this place?"

At that moment, Nova was standing at the gates of the City Lord's Mansion and could see the scene outside.

"Wait a minute. Let me scan the area."

Nova began to perceive the surrounding area.

After a while, his eyes widened in shock.

"Master, there's something amazing in this place. It's an extraordinary find!"

James was overjoyed and blurted out, "What kind of boon is it?"

Nova replied, "This place was indeed left behind by a powerful man. His strength was on par with Emperor Jabari's. I can sense that this place is a great formation with many hidden transcendental items."

James' delight grew and urged Nova to elaborate, "What kind of items?"

Nova said, "The formation is very intricate. Since I'm not proficient in crafting formations, I can't break through them. However, I can sense a strong vigor coming from deep within the grotto."

After a brief surprise, James asked, "You mean to say there is a powerful person within this grotto?"

"Not quite..."

Nove explained, "Although it has a strong vigor, it's in a state of deep slumber. If I'm not wrong, it might be a descendant of a certain ancient creature. It has been sealed within this grotto and has yet to hatch."

"An unhatched descendant of a certain ancient creature?"

James was stunned.

Nova replied, "Yes. Sophie is much more knowledgeable in formations. You should get her to help you."

After answering James, Nova fell silent.

A few seconds later, a white light burst out from the ring on James' finger. Then, a beautiful goddess-like woman in a white dress appeared before him.

"Ms. Sophie?"

Seeing Sophie appear in front of him, James was slightly taken aback. He asked, "Y-You can leave the Celestial Abode?"

Sophie rolled her eyes and said, "Is there a reason why I shouldn't be able to?"

James was unable to refute her words.

After a few seconds, James laughed. "That's great! This is the best! In the future, you can help me deal with difficult enemies! With you, I won't have to be afraid of anyone! Even if it's a Sage or the powerful foe from the Sealed Realm, you'll be able to take them on with ease, right?"

Sophie rolled her eyes again and said, "You can forget that idea. My actions are limited outside the abode due to certain restrictions. I can only help you indirectly by teaching you signature martial art skills. If I personally step in to help you, I'll have to face the Karma of those actions."

Confused, James asked, "What do you mean? What kind of Karma?"

"You don't have to understand for now. When you're strong enough, it'll come to you naturally."
