Chapter 816

Blake sighed, “I can’t think of anything. Let’s wait for a little longer, I guess. Maybe he’ll retreat after realizing he stands no chance against them.”

They had no choice but to wait.

In the research laboratory...

James faced an uphill battle.

This was the fiercest battle he had ever been in. The Undead Warrior would not die no matter what James did.

Though he was injured, he knew he had to hang in there. Once he lost consciousness, he would lose the chance to save Tiara.

The high-intensity battle had severely depleted James’ True Energy. He did not have much True Energy cultivated from the very beginning. Now, it was almost completely gone. If he continued fighting, he could possibly die.

A thin wire appeared in his hand.

With the wire in hand, he ran toward an Undead Warrior and adroitly moved behind it. Then, he aimed at its head and kicked it with great force.

The Undead Warrior's head was immediately sent flying. Then, it collapsed to the ground, but this time, it did not get back up again. Many bugs crawled out of its decapitated head. "They aren't invincible, after all."

James smiled.

Then, he turned the wire into Crucifier. The indestructible wire served as the perfect weapon at the moment.

Although Crucifier was meant to save lives, it had transformed into a lethal tool in James' hand.

After discovering the Undead Warriors' weaknesses, things became much easier for James.

Meanwhile, in the office of the research laboratory...

Seeing that James had killed another Undead Warrior, the Emperor's face turned pale. Professor C! Q-Quick, order the Undead

Warrior to continue fighting!"

Wearing a surly expression, Professor C took a deep breath, "I was able to control the Undead Warriors because the Gus control their neurons. The moment they are decapitated, the connection will be severed, and they will truly die..."

While Professor C was saying this, James had killed another Undead Warrior.

The Emperor was fearful now.

He thought of escaping and did not wish to remain here any longer.

If James made his way here, he would surely die a horrible death.

Just as he was thinking of a way to escape, his face brightened up upon remembering Tiara who was still in the dungeon. A wicked grin crept up on his face.

“No matter how powerful you are, you will surely die by my hands, James.” The Emperor immediately ordered, “Bring me Tiara Youngblood now.”

“Understood.”

His men immediately left the office and headed toward the dungeon.

After discovering the Undead Warriors' weakness, James began using the wire formed by Crucifier to slice off their heads.

Once they were decapitated, the Undead Warriors would collapse to the ground and lose all signs of life. In just a few short minutes, all the Undead Warriors were decapitated and now lying on the floor motionless. The Guts in their bodies were now consuming their flesh. It was truly a horrendous sight.

After dealing with the Undead Warriors, James headed deeper into the research laboratory.

Since he knew about the security measures inside, he dealt with them with ease. However, before he could reach the deepest parts of the laboratory, a group of men walked over to him. from afar.

In the lead was the Emperor, while Professor C, Scar, and Tristan followed close behind.

Behind them were a bunch of henchmen. They were dragging a bloodied woman whose life was hanging by a thread. The woman's hair was disheveled, and she had lost consciousness.

The Emperor pulled out a gun and pressed it against the back of Tiara's head and said coldly, " Take another step and I'll blow her brains out."
