

The Almighty Dragon General

Chapter 901

□ □ □

Chapter 901

James' identity was no longer a secret as it was exposed during the public trial.

However, most of the people gathered in the cafe were mere students focused on their studies.

They largely did not pay much attention to national news or political affairs, so they could not recognize James.

Even if some had heard about the trial, they did not watch it and had no impression of James' appearance. Hugo sat down, crossed his legs, and lit an imported cigar to smoke.

He was young but seemed incredibly used to smoking like he had been a smoker for many years.

Meanwhile...

After receiving James' call, Hardy, the general stationed in Sunleigh City, was furious.

"Quick, go inform Timothy!"

Immediately, a lieutenant entered his room and asked, "General Lane, what's the matter?"

Hardy shouted angrily, "The Dragon King called me, saying that Timothy's son has caused trouble at school. He wants Timothy to go there in person right now!"

"What? The Dragon King, James?"

"Stop asking so many questions. Hurry up and notify him! Also, prepare a car for me immediately! I have to go to Sunleigh High School right now!"

Hardy had just sent James to the school and returned to his office.

After learning that something had happened, he had to go there personally.

On the street opposite Sunleigh High School, inside a cafe...

Hugo experiencedly smoked his cigar with his legs crossed. He squinted his eyes at James and said coldly,

"I'm curious to see what tricks a b*stard like you can come up with." He turned his eyes to Maxine and swallowed his saliva.

"I'm warning you. I'm not going to let what happened today go so easily."

James remained calm.

Maxine was also indifferent to the situation.

If she were with someone else today, she would have been panicking since the brat in front of them was a spoiled kid from a wealthy family.

However, James was not just anybody either.

He was the Commander of the Black Dragon Army.

The Black Dragon himself accompanied her.

They sat down and waited.

Time passed by slowly.

About half an hour later, more than a dozen military vehicles appeared near the school and blocked off the street.

After some time, Hugo got impatient and stood up, saying disdainfully, "Didn't you call my dad to come over? So, why hasn't he arrived yet, b*stard?" James smiled faintly.

Suddenly, a few soldiers rushed inside the cafe.

The person in the lead was Hardy.

Hardy scanned the cafe and found that Timothy had yet to arrive.

"Why hasn't Timothy arrived?" he cursed out.

The lieutenant murmured, "I've already informed him, but he said he was in a meeting and would come as soon as it was over."

"F*ck," Hardy cursed.

He took out his phone and called Timothy, shouting, "Get your *ss over here right now!"

The people inside the cafe were worried upon seeing soldiers on the scene and quickly hid, not daring to make a sound.

"Uncle."

Hugo stood up, took out a cigar, and handed it over with a smile.

"What brings you here?"

The Lanes were somewhat related to the Doyles, so Hugo naturally knew Hardy.

Smack! Hardy swung his hand at Hugo.

A crisp and loud slap resounded in the cafe.

Hugo was stunned after suddenly being hit.

"You rebel! What have you done?"

After slapping Hugo, Hardy lifted his foot and kicked him to the ground.

Then, he swung his hands and feet at him.

"What are you doing, General Lane? He's still a child, after all. Is this how you should be educating a child?"

James stopped him.

Hardy quickly walked over and asked respectfully, "D-Dragon King, what did this rebellious child do?"

Dragon King?

□ □ □