

The Almighty Dragon General

Chapter 910

□ □ □

Chapter 910

The old man approached her.

Tiara asked, "Were you calling me just now, sir?"

"Of course."

The old man was none other than Thomas. He leaned forward and whispered into Tiara's ears.

"Really?!!"

Tiara was ecstatic.

"Definitely. Come with me. It's not a lie," Thomas said with a smile.

Tiara left the airport with Thomas inside a black vehicle, while James reached the airport a little too late. After arriving, he phoned the Blithe King.

The Blithe King informed him that there was indeed a person named Tiara Youngblood that booked a ticket. However, she did not board the plane.

James frowned upon hearing the news.

"She didn't board the plane?"

"Yeah, the flight she booked has already taken off, but she didn't board the plane."

"Alright. I got it."

James hung up the phone. He sat on the stairs outside the airport, smoking a cigarette pensively.

"Where could she go if she didn't board the plane?"

James muttered to himself.

"Did something happen to her?"

James suddenly became anxious, and he called the Blithe King again.

"Blithe King, use your intelligence network and help me investigate immediately. I've got a bad feeling that something might have happened to Tiara."

"Okay," the Blithe King agreed without hesitation.

After hanging up the phone, he hurriedly activated the military intelligence network. He even collected surveillance footage near the airport.

Soon, he found some clues.

James waited patiently outside the airport.

Ten minutes later, he received the surveillance footage from the Blithe King.

The footage showed Thomas talking to Tiara and her following him into a vehicle.

Then, James' phone rang.

"I've already sent the footage to you. Tiara was last seen leaving with the man inside the video. The man's identity is still unknown, nor have we tracked down the whereabouts of the black vehicle.

"Alright."

James hung up the phone. He stared intently at the video and zoomed in on it.

The footage was slightly blurry, making it hard to see Thomas' face.

However, James felt that the man seemed incredibly familiar to him.

"Who's this man? What did he say to Tiara to convince her to follow him?" James muttered.

Suddenly, his heart skipped a beat.

"Grandpa..."

He identified the man inside the video.

The person was his grandfather, who was framed ten years ago, causing him to turn against James' father and he was ultimately burned to death in the inferno.

"This is impossible!"

James shook his head.

'It can't be Grandpa. He died ten years ago. This can't be him.

'But this person looks so similar to him. They're almost identical. If it's not Grandpa, who else could it be?'

James was confused.

After a while, he recollected himself and sent the video to Jay. He demanded, "Use your underground intelligence network to find out the identity of the old man in this video. I want every single piece of information related to him."

"James, it'll take some time for me to gather intel about him. I'll report to you in three days."

"No. I must have it before dark today,"

James insisted.

Jay was helpless.

All this while, he had constantly been helping James to look up information.

"Alright. I'll do my best."

Jay answered and hung up the phone.

□ □ □