Chapter 856: Chapter 855: The Calm Before The Storm (part two)

"Why? Are you going to invite me over for dinner?" Knowing that Leena was well cared for now, Kevin bantered with Daisy with ease.

"I just thought that you wouldn't agree to participate." Daisy defiantly raised her eyebrows. Of course, she knew he was joking with her.

As long as you buy me a dinner, I'll definitely come. Seriously, What's going on?" Kevin leaned back against his chair, with a playful smile on his face.

So, here is the deal. My soldiers want to compare notes with your armored battalion." Daisy pursed her mouth. The soldiers were inviting Kevin to pick a fight.

"What? Compare notes with my armored battalion? Do they want a shoot-out or a hand-to-hand combat? I don't have time for the shoot-out. As for the hand-to-hand combat, we could hardly win." Kevin pinched his chin. He knew Daisy's soldiers were good at hand-to-hand combat. If he accepted her request, he knew what the result would be without guessing.

"A hand-to-hand fight, of course. So, what do you say? Fight or no?" Daisy certainly knew that the armored Battalion was not good at hand-to-hand combat, so her soldiers would surely win. However, she wanted to show them how good Kevin was.

"As a soldier, I am not afraid of fighting. I don't care about winning or losing. It's no big deal to me," Kevin agreed to the request without hesitation. He would like to take the opportunity to improve the combat capability of his soldiers. In any case, it was just a drill. Winning or losing didn't really matter.

Okay. I'll take that as a yes. So, I'll see you at 7 o'clock at the training ground." Daisy smiled slyly and turned away.

Kevin shook his head, thinking, 'It looks like she has changed a lot lately. Why else would the soldiers dare to request her for such an indulgent exercise?' To their disappointment, however, as they were about to start the knock off, the Gods turned against them and it started raining hard. It seemed like the rain would not stop anytime soon, so they decided to postpone the activity.

Okay! I guess that's it." Daisy sighed, shaking her head in resignation as she watched the downpour from the window.

"All right. It seems like we have to comply to the will of the Gods. We might as well go back together. In the heavy rain we can at least take care of each other." Kevin smiled. Although the process of forcing himself not to love her was painful, he was relieved that he could stand next to Daisy calmly, just like he was right now. It indicated that he had let go of a lot of feelings for her.

"Sure. We seldom get home so early." As they were talking to each other, they opened an umbrella and walked into the heavy rain. Daisy always treated Kevin like a big brother, so even if she knew he loved her, she would never deliberately alienate him. In any case, she believed in Kevin and knew he was capable of letting go. Daisy's and Kevin's cars left the military base consecutively. There was a splash of water as the cars passed. Fortunately, this was a suburb, so there were no pedestrians. Otherwise, it would have wet their clothes.

In the FX International conference room, Edward sulked and glared at the executives present. They had not told him previously that their businesses was being ground down by an unknown enterprise. If he had not stumbled upon it, he couldn't imagine how serious the consequences would have been.

What am I employing you for? Why has no one mentioned such an important thing to me?" Edward asked, his smile akin to a spring breeze. The gentler he smiled, the angrier he truly felt.

I am sorry! At first, we thought it was no big deal and we could solve it ourselves, so we didn't want to involve you. We didn't think it would get worse." The department manager shivered, his head lowered.

Hah! You can solve it? So, have you solved it now?" Edward glanced at them coldly, thinking, 'Damn it! Don't play with me, or I'll make you regret it!'

We are already investigating the matter. But they seem to know our company very well, so..." Another manager bowed his head in resignation. He knew they had not done their job well. It was their fault, so he did not defend himself. He informed Edward that the enemy had a fully devised plan to grind down their company.

From today on, you can't tell anyone about the company decisions. Look up the people in your departments and see if there's anyone suspicious. Take care of all the important documents. Do you hear me?" Edward frowned. 'No company goes against me in the whole of S City, so this man must be mad. What is his purpose?' Edward thought.

"Yes, Mr. Mu. We will be careful. Are we going to stop the promotion of the new villas that have been open for sale?" The sales manager asked, afraid as he was. He was more scared about misunderstanding Edward's instructions.

"No, we will proceed as planned. He wouldn't dare mess with me like that. That's it for today. If you find anything, let me know immediately. This meeting is over for now."

Edward glanced around the meeting room with a playful smile on his face. 'I haven't played an exciting game in such a long time. Since you wish to lose so badly, I will play with you,' thought Edward.

Somewhere else in a luxurious presidential suite, a beautiful woman and a man were tangled in each other, both of them sweating and enjoying the most primitive desires of humans.

"You naughty girl, if you keep doing this, you will drain me out." The man kissed her with affection in his eyes.

"No, I wouldn't. Shaun, thank you. If you bring down FX International, I am all yours. Forever." The woman held his hands tightly, flirting with him coquettishly.

"Melissa, are you serious?" Elated, the man named Shaun kissed her again.

"Yes, of course. I would never lie to you." The woman smiled at him seductively. Her white skin looked delicate and lustrous. She was an unusual beauty.

"Okay. I promise I will never let you down." As he finished speaking, he kissed her again. The rain outside the window served as an aphrodisiac, making them powerless to stop.

The rain didn't stop until the next morning. The conspiracy grew even more serious. As soon as Edward arrived at the company, he was told that the shares of the departmental stores that were owned by FX International Group were being purchased secretly.

"Who did this?" Edward was in the technology department, with a spirited smile on his face. He didn't seem to be mad about it at all. 'Well, I have met a smart opponent indeed. He knows how to buy the stock of the store I least care about. Unfortunately for him, I knew he was going to do that. He really thinks he's capable of buying my stock?' Edward thought.

"We've got it. It's Kompass Group, headquartered in H City. Its president is somebody known as Shaun Gao. It is said that he graduated from Harvard and began a series of reforms after taking over the Group. The results were pretty good," The technical staff told him the information he had found on the Internet. 'In terms of financial resources, Kompass Group is no match for our company. Then why is this company moving against FX International Group?' the staff wondered.

Chapter 857: Chapter 856: A Familiar Woman (part one)

"Kompass Group, right? Good. In that case, it's time for me to do something. Don't blame me if I forget the friendship we shared once." A sly smile played around Edward's mouth. As a matter of fact, he got along with the former president of Kompass Group quite well. It was not an appropriate time for him to turn them into an enemy. But something unexpected happened: they had challenged him. In this situation, there was no need to act friendly toward them anymore.

"Mr. Mu, what should we do next?" The technician looked at Edward and asked. There were severe consequences for people who irritated the CEO, no matter who they were. They were going to be in a world of trouble.

"They are trying to buy the stocks of our departmental stores, aren't they? We will let them buy on purpose. But remember to protect the main system of FX International Group well. Keep them from hacking it. Besides that, let us increase their workload. Decode the firewall in their information system. They will enjoy the feast brought upon by the virus. Finally, we will purchase their stock shares," Edward stated. Edward was strong in the business field. He would not allow others to mount the high horse and look down upon him. He knew how to fight back in a decisive way and put pressure on his enemies. An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. Oh, no! He would ask more for redressal from them.

"Yes, we'll get started right away," the technician replied firmly. One of the most fundamental requirements for a company to be successful was to equip the most advanced defense system. Many complicated and intricate firewalls had been installed to protect the data in FX International Group. If someone wanted to hack them, they were welcome to try! It was not even possible. The boss of FX International was Edward Mu. To let that happen, you would have to go through him first. However, things would be different if that 'someone' was a computer genius like Justin. But Justin would never do such thing as he was Edward's son.

"Yes. Let me know if something comes up." Edward left the technology department. He took out his phone and called Luke.

"Hello! Mr. Mu. What can I do for you?" Luke was about to start his car to exit the company grounds. He stopped immediately to answer Edward's phone and waited for his orders.

"Luke, I want you to find out where the president of Kompass Group from H city is right now. Also, I want all the details about the people he has been in touch with recently." Kompass Group must have cooperated with another big company. Otherwise, they would not be bold enough to interfere with FX International Group's business.

"Yes, Mr. Mu. I'll do it right away," Luke answered. He never questioned his boss's orders, but he could not help but frown. He knew Kompass Group because Edward had made contact with them before. However, he did not understand why he wanted to know more about their president all of a sudden.

Yes, just go! Do pay attention, the one I want to know more about is the new president of Kompas Group, Shaun Gao. Not their former president. Don't get this wrong," Edward emphasized. He pushed the doors of his office open and walked inside. He needed to know everything about his enemy. As the Chinese saying goes: if you know yourself and your enemy well, you will win every war. Edward was an expert at this. Before he took any further actions, he must know his enemy's social circle as he knew the palm of his hand.

"Yes, I see. I'll go. Bye." Luke hung up and dialed another number, ordering his men to carry out the mission. In S city, it was easy for Luke to investigate someone. Within half a day, detailed documents about all the people who had connections with Shaun Gao appeared on Edward's desk. Luke was a true detective. It was the reason why Edward trusted him with the work. "Mr. Mu, here are all the files and photos of Shaun Gao we took while we followed him secretly." Luke put the documents on the desk and stepped back, standing with his hands lowered. He looked at Edward respectfully, who was frowning slightly.

Sure. Is this woman familiar to you?" Edward asked, gesturing toward the photo in his hand. He did not know why, but he thought he had met this woman before.

Oh, I noticed it too. I thought it was strange. Her name is Melissa Xue. She is Shaun Gao's new girlfriend. Unfortunately and to my surprise, we were unable to find any information about her. She seems to have come out from nowhere. There is no trace of information regarding her at all. We know nothing but her name." That was part of the reason why Luke was staring at Edward. He wanted to know how he would react to this woman's photo.

"What? No trace at all? Well, since we can't find anything about her, why not go and meet her?" Edward smiled mischievously. They were staying at Kate Hotel of FX International Group. What a bold pair! They weren't worried at all that they might be under investigation.

I'm afraid they've gone out right now. I have sent some men to follow after them in secret." Luke frowned. He still remembered that when he had deliberately passed by them, Melissa Xue had turned pale. Soon, however, she seemed to recover and walked away as if nothing had happened. Luke found it extremely strange. He had a weird feeling about her.

Well, then let's meet them by accident!" Edward said. He would like to know how capable this Shaun Gao was. How dared he try and acquire FX International Group.

I see, Mr. Mu. Do you mean to have dinner at Kate Hotel?" Only that way could the boss avoid alarming them. He could truly make them believe they met by chance.

"Yes. Oh, invite Rain and the others to have dinner with me. It will be more interesting when they are around." Edward smiled coldly. Shaun Gao, a brilliant graduate from Harvard University? He did not think so. If Shaun Gao was such a smart guy, how could he choose to stay at Kate Hotel, his enemy's territory? Arrogance could kill a person.

"Yes. I'll inform them about it soon. But Mr. Leng seems to have gone abroad," Luke inferred from the news he had heard earlier. His reply was hesitant. He was not sure whether or not Edward knew about it. As Mr. Leng's good friend and Leena's brother, he must know.

Oh! Yes, you remind me! I almost forgot about it. Leena is ill. Duke flew over to Paris to take care of her. He will probably be back in two days." Edward ran a hand through his hair. How could he have forgotten such an important thing? Was Leena better now? She caught a cold earlier.

"Miss Leng is ill? Is she all right now?" Upon hearing that Leena was sick, Luke could not help but ask. After all, he had known Leena since she was a little child. He did not wish for her to be in any trouble.

"Oh! She must be much better now. Since Duke is not here, you can call Tom and Rain. They should be enough, I think." Edward sighed. Leena always had them worrying over her. Luckily, Paris was not so far away from here. Only half a day of flying could bring Duke there. Otherwise, they would have no idea what to do when something befell her.

Chapter 858: Chapter 857: A Familiar Woman (part two)

"Yes, I see. Is there anything else? If no, I'll go and call them now."

Upon hearing that Leena was fine, Luke was much relieved too.

"Nothing else. You may leave now!" Edward picked up his phone and called Daisy. He tried ringing many times but nobody answered him. 'What is she doing? Is she busy with something?' Edward wondered.

He had guessed it right. Daisy was indeed quite busy at the time. The day after was the National Day, so she was involved in the preparations for the military parade that was to be held. Currently, she was correcting the soldiers' formation and figures on the training field.

Get your tiptoes straight! Legs higher! Watch for your gun positions." Several sweat beads streamed down her back and face. Daisy did her job conscientiously. If they were skilled soldiers, they could do well without her instructions. But unfortunately, all of them were new recruits. What was more, the other battalion and company commanders were assigned with different tasks. She had no other option but to instruct them in person.

"Hey, you! Your hands are not in the right position. Look, I'll show you how to do it." Daisy walked to a soldier and took the rifle from him. She showed him the position in front of everyone.

All the new soldiers watched her demonstrate the positions carefully. They did not dare to be absent-minded even for a second, nor did they make any noises. They had heard the senior soldiers mention that Colonel Ouyang, though young and beautiful in appearance, was extremely strict during training. She strongly berated soldiers who performed a bad job or did not concentrate fully.

All right. Now do it like I just showed you," Daisy encouraged them. She handed over the rifle to the soldier and took a step back. She was such a figure of heroic spirit and pride in her green military uniform.

"Yes, Colonel," The fresh recruits chorused. The loud reply echoed around the training field. It was nice to be young. Their voices reflected their bravery.

"Now, pay attention to my words. Attention! Dress right! Watch the formation. Eyes at the front. Now at ease! Attention! Quick steps. Look out, your feet must be on the same horizontal level. Your actions must be powerful and organized." The soldiers followed Daisy's orders. She too stood beside them and performed the actions for their reference. Meanwhile, she was on the lookout for anyone who was not performing correctly.

Colonel! You have a call." Mark trotted over to her, saluting her in military style. He gave her the phone.

I see. You stay here and keep an eye on them the way I was doing. I'll leave for a while," Daisy said to Mark. She took the phone from him and left the training field. Daisy did not answer the phone until she was at a distance, underneath a big tree.

Hello. This is Daisy Ouyang speaking. Who's that, please?" Although Daisy was on the phone, her eyes were still trained on the field that was not too far away. She didn't take a look at the number to see who had called her.

Hello to you too. Nice to talk to you, Colonel Ouyang," Edward greeted her jokingly. A ruffian's smile appeared on his face.

"Mr. Mu. Nice to speak to you too! Say, what is the matter? I am quite busy right now." Daisy frowned slightly. What was wrong with this man? He knew very well that she was very busy these days and here he was, calling her and making fun of her. What was he up to? Was he making trouble for her?

"Yeah, I know, you are quite busy. But you need to have your meals. How about this? I would like to invite you for dinner tonight. Would you like that?" Edward did not get angry at all. If it were the past Edward on the phone, he would have been pissed with her impatient tone. However, ever since he got to understand her temper, he came to realize that this woman was open to persuasion, but not to coercion. He would not be involved in a romantic relationship with anyone but Daisy. When faced with her, he felt like he had no power or prestige at all.

"Tonight? Is there something special today? Can't I have dinner with you some other time?" Daisy anticipated that she was going to stay up late because of her work, so she wished she could reject the invitation.

"No, there is nothing special today. I was just thinking it would be good for us to have dinner with Rain and the others. But since you are so busy, I won't bother you anymore. It's okay, Colonel Ouyang! Sorry to keep you on the line. I wasted your precious time by talking to you. Bye!" Edward finished speaking and hung up immediately, without waiting for her response. He was aware that his phone would ring in a few seconds. He knew her well.

Daisy gritted her teeth. Shoot! This man! He was playing the same trick on her again! He knew she was unwilling to disappoint him, so he pretended to stoop and compromise deliberately in order to make her feel guilty. He knew she would never want to let him down.

Daisy did not know what to do. She sighed, raising her head to take a look at the burning sun. Finally, she decided to call him back. She cursed him a thousand times as the phone rang.

Hello. Who is that?" Edward answered the phone, pretending like he didn't know who was on the phone. A content smile spread across his face. Yes! He had done it again. Unfortunately for her, Daisy was unable to see his sly smile through the phone.

"Edward Mu! Don't you try to fool me! I can see right through your pretense," Daisy said, grinding her teeth. He was taking this for granted! If he were anybody else, she would have handled him with a bullet.

"Pretense? What am I pretending to be? Now you're just putting words into my mouth. Woman, as a Colonel, do not accuse an ordinary citizen falsely at your will." He smiled, teasing her. Edward leaned leisurely against the back of his chair. Daisy could not see him in person. Otherwise, she would be so mad to see how he was lying through his teeth.

"Wow! You? An ordinary citizen? Hah! You are a typical profiteer." Daisy snorted through her nose. Only a cheeky guy like him could claim to be an ordinary citizen. However, she was his wife and knew him well. In her eyes, he was an unfeeling industrialist.

Fine, fine! I am a profiteer. But I won't be qualified to be one soon," Edward said in frustration. As she heard him, she felt a bit worried. She did not understand why he was speaking like that.

Edward, what do you mean? Has something happened?" Daisy asked hesitantly. After all, he did not interrupt her work usually. It was strange for him to call her and insist on inviting her to dinner when she was so busy. That was not his style.

Chapter 859: Chapter 858: A Familiar Woman (part three)

"What if I have nothing to my name someday? Would you be willing to keep me?" Although there was little chance that would ever happen, he still asked her, wanting to know her response. After all, nothing was completely certain.

"No! I will throw you out on the streets," Daisy replied decisively, as if she wasn't joking.

"How dare you, Daisy Ouyang?" Edward's face went red. How could she classify him with those who lived on the streets? Wasn't she afraid he would get angry? He had to admit she was bold to say such words.

"Try me! Don't be such a drama queen. Tell me, when and where do you want to meet tonight? I can't make it if it's too early. I have work to do." If ever the day came when Edward had nothing left to his name, it would have no influence on her. She valued him as a person, not for his money. No matter what the situation was, she still considered him to be her true love. Her feelings for him would not change, whether he was rich or poor. That was real love.

"That's all right. I will pick you up from the army base. But keep in mind, I am not making a fuss out of nothing. I just want you to know so you can prepare for it mentally. That's all! Okay, you should focus on your work now, so you can earn money to keep us from becoming beggars someday. Goodbye!" Edward hung up the phone. A cunning smile still rested on his mouth. Before he could figure out the real purpose of Shaun Gao, he was not a hundred percent sure that the day would never come. So he had said those words to Daisy. He was curious about what she would do if the day really came. No matter what Daisy said just now, there was one thing Edward was certain about - Daisy would never abandon him.

Daisy leaned against the wall, pondering over what Edward had said. He didn't seem to be joking. Was there something wrong in the company? Otherwise, he would not have asked her such a question out of the blue. Didn't FX International Group have a good net worth? A bankruptcy seemed to be impossible. She remembered the times when she had seen him sign cheques that were worth hundreds of millions. He never even frowned. She was puzzled.

Daisy sighed again. Fine, so what if he really went bankrupt? He was still who he was. Nothing would change between them. As long as he was with her and Justin, she'd be happy. Her family meant more than anything else to her. Money was just a worldly possession. What was more, she could look after their family financially for as long as necessary. She was always willing to stand by him.

"Daisy, what happened? You seem to be lost in thought. Are you missing Mr. Mu?" A cheerful voice could be heard. It was the Commander. He was looking at Daisy with curiosity.

"Oh! Commander. Here you are. Don't tease me. What can I do for you?" Daisy adjusted her military dress quickly and saluted the Commander. It was basic protocol in the military that one should be neat when faced with his or her superior. By the time she turned around to greet him, she already looked sleek and heroic in the olive-green military uniform. She was born a soldier.

Oh, no. I was just looking around. How is the training going? Is everything all right? You don't need to be too strict with them. After all, they are still fresh recruits. I am sure they will improve a lot gradually." He had taken a look around the training field. The Commander knew that the men had been practicing a lot. All the soldiers and officers had devoted themselves to the difficult job.

"Yes, Commander. Don't worry, please. I am aware of their limits," Daisy replied, pursing her lips. She knew that they were still like big kids. She was not as strict with them as she was with the senior soldiers. Thinking about them, Daisy felt that they were luckier than her. When she was their age, she had already become a capable member of JC Military Academy. At the time, she had received tons of hard training. Her instructors never showed her mercy. She understood that it was different now. She could not put too much pressure on them like the way she had been pressed by her own instructors at the academy. Most of the time, she lowered the bars during training.

I see, Colonel. That's good. You can continue with it. I am going to have a look at the others," the Commander said, with a gentle smile on his face. He knew Daisy well and was sure she was exceptional in her training methods. He bid her goodbye and walked away in another direction. He had only been looking around and had not meant to interrupt the training.

Daisy wiped the sweat on her face and looked away. She walked toward the training field and continued correcting the soldiers' positions. Fortunately, this would just be a parade within the military. It would be an embarrassment if they were going to perform the parade in front of the entire nation. However, Daisy still tried her best to make the parade as professional as possible, instructing all of them personally. She was a precise officer when it came to her job.

As a matter of fact, there were some soldiers in their base who had been selected to join the military parade in the capital city. She was not the in-charge appointed for them. Some other officer was assigned the task from their superiors. In the past few years, Kevin and her had always been assigned with the responsibility of training them for that parade. However, Daisy had been physically hurt this year, so the army base was considerate enough to give her a break. As for Kevin, he had gone for the training overseas. Both of them had spare time on their hands. That was the reason why Daisy had to attend to the new recruits.

As the sun went down in the west, a Lamborghini appeared at the army base. Clearly, it was Edward. Although his dear wife had told him she would be a little late, he could not wait. So he arrived in advance. He wanted to see her as soon as possible. Looking at the majestic door, Edward smiled brightly. A strong army meant a strong nation. He wished that his country would always remain peaceful. That way, people could live a content life without chaos surrounding them.

Chapter 860: Chapter 859: Rose With Thorns (part one)

Life in the army was colorful in the eyes of outsiders. Only those who were once soldiers would know that it was as dull and tasteless as a corkboard. All they did in the army was to go on drills and attend some training. They did the very same things everyday. Therefore, in order to make great achievements in the army, one must be able to withstand such kind of depressing lifestyle.

In the eyes of the recruits, Colonel Ouyang was a gorgeous woman, while in the eyes of the veterans, Colonel Ouyang was a beautiful rose with thorns. They only dared to look at her from afar but never dared to get any closer. After all, her training for them was just horrible. It was the type of training that no one would even think of trying as it was made to push people beyond human limits.

The solemnity that was surrounding the Army Base was stronger as the last ray of sunset washed over the place. Edward could not help but look at his wristwatch to check the time. A slight frown formed on his handsome face. Didn't that woman say that she would only be a little late to come off work today? He had been waiting for almost an hour. But where was she? Did she forget that he would come to pick her up to have dinner?

Truth was, Mr. Mu was right. Daisy had not only forgotten his invitation but forgotten that he would come to pick up her. Therefore, when Daisy saw the dazzling Lamborghini outside the army base gate, the corners of her mouth twitched. She was sitting in a Military Humvee and was about to go home with Mark. Damn it! How could she possibly forget about Edward? Now she couldn't even imagine what was running inside Edward's mind. Was he going to get crazy or was he planning to strangle her neck? But then wait, didn't he usually make a phone call to her? Why didn't he urge her this time?

Colonel, it's Mr. Mu's car," said Mark. He turned around and looked at Daisy. Did the Colonel know nothing about Mr. Mu coming here?

Well! I know. All right! Then you go back to Mu's house first. I have an appointment with him. I was so busy that I almost forgot about it," said Daisy. She drew a deep breath as her brain started ticking for the best way to explain why she forgot about their dinner.

"Yes, Colonel." Mark stepped on the brake. Daisy got off the car without waiting for the car to completely stop. She walked straightly towards the luxurious Lamborghini.

Edward gritted his teeth as he watched the woman approaching. Good! It seemed that she had completely forgotten about him. He waited for her for about two hours. He would like to see how she would play out of the situation this time. To be honest, he was even curious about it.

The Colonel stopped for a second and took a deep breath before opening the door. She bent down and sat inside the car. Then she gave Edward a fake smile in exchange for his cold glare.

"Darling, have you been waiting for me for a long time?" Anyway, it would not be wrong to smile. Wasn't there an old saying that goes, don't be angry with the people who are in smiles?

Edward just shot her one last look and then started the car. He didn't even say a word. He had already anticipated that she would come up with a new way to persuade him. However, she hadn't been so creative lately and had used the very same style all the time. Darn him for enjoying it though! And double-darn him as he didn't have the heart to stay angry at her.

"Darling, how can you be so handsome today? Your delicate skin and the cold attitude are indeed a king's demeanor. Ordinary people cannot be compared to you." Daisy said as she reached out to his face and pinched his cheek. Shit! He was proud enough today. Couldn't he give some reactions since she was so flattering him?

Edward tipped his head slightly to avoid her touch and continued driving without a word. He was driving the car surprisingly fast. He might look calm on his surface but his insides were definitely in turmoils. Why was she saying that he was handsome today? Did it mean that he wasn't handsome before?

"Mr. Mu, say something! Why are you ignoring me?" Daisy pulled his sleeves. It seemed that her man's temper was bad today. He usually gave in to her with just a little coquetry. Was her mistake that big that he couldn't even just let it pass? Why were her actions and words not affecting him anymore?

Sit properly." Alas! Edward finally opened his mouth. His voice was too emotionless. It wasn't hard to figure out how mad he was.

"You ignore me first! Well, I am sorry? I really don't mean to forget our appointment. You know me, right? I even forget Justin sometimes when I'm busy," Daisy apologized. She continued to please him. It was really her fault anyways. Thus she was very patient.

"Wow. I hope you didn't mean that. So Justin is more important than me, huh?" Edward answered with an even colder tone than before. The chill in his words got through Daisy's skin and made her involuntarily shrink her neck. It was evident that it wouldn't be easy to talk with Edward today. Worse, he was way more stubborn right now.

"Well! I didn't mean that. You are equally important in my heart. Why do you even care about this? Justin is your son." Daisy looked at him carefully. Such Edward reminded her of the time when they were in K city. He was also frigid and heartless. Thus, she couldn't help but feel a little afraid of him.

"Daisy Ouyang, you should know that it doesn't matter whether I care about it or not. Rather, it is about if you have put me in your heart." The car screeched and stopped to the side of the road when Edward abruptly turned the steering wheel. His eyes were filled with disappointment when he looked at her. They had discussed this same topic so many times.

Do you mean that I am totally wrong and you won't forgive me this time? I know that you will not always be so tolerant of me. I still cannot help but hope that you can tolerate me all the time. I can't even imagine that you mind such a petty thing. How can we live together for the next decades? How are you going to live with me? After all, a situation like today may happen in the future again. Are you going to be angry with me like today every time?" said Daisy.
