

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 906 - Chapter 905: Leena Was Back (part two)

Chapter 906: Chapter 905: Leena Was Back (part two)

She was at that state when a flaxen hair captured her attention. A knot suddenly appeared at the pit of her stomach. She grabbed the hair and clutched it as she thought rapidly. Whose hair was this? It couldn't be hers nor Daisy's. Wait a minute, why would she connect the hair to Daisy? Did she subconsciously think that the hair was Daisy's? Were Daisy and Kevin doing something behind her back? Leena immediately slapped her mouth lightly as a punishment for even thinking of it. What was wrong with her? How could she think of Daisy like that? It might just be a sudden thought but it was still a disrespect to Daisy.

Then whose hair would it be? The question was haunting. She tilted her head and thought carefully but didn't dwell on it for too long. She should have faith in Kevin regardless of whose hair it was, right? He was her husband after all, and she should trust him as his wife. It was just a woman's hair. No big deal. It could be from a woman whom Kevin's friend might have brought there, right? Or it could be her sister-in-law's who probably visited there with her brother. There were a lot of possibilities. Plus, it was flaxen. It was the same as Belinda's hair color. She felt relaxed after that thought. She might be just overthinking again. Seconds and she was back to smiling as she moved towards the stairs. The first thing she needed at that point was a nice bath and an equally nice nap. Doubting her husband was nonsense.

The bedroom was the same as before. It was still nice and clean. It seemed that Kevin had been cleaning it after all. It was good that he wasn't like any other men who thought that cleaning was only for women and that they didn't have anything to do with it.

Leena put some lavender oil in the bathtub and had a very calming bath. Then she threw herself on the big bed and closed her eyes. Something in her heart melted upon smelling the faint peppermint scent left on the sheets.

She had set the alarm clock before she took a nap. She planned to wake up at four o'clock in the afternoon. She needed to shop for some groceries as she noticed their fridge was empty.

Leena usually went to the big supermarket to buy food and never went to the farmers' market. She really could not stand the smell and the chaos in the farmers' market. Blame that to her for being such a spoiled kid. She preferred places that were nice and clean. This was basically her weakness.

The foods she chose were all based on Kevin's preference. It seemed so natural for her to choose whatever that pleased him over whatever she wanted. She had fallen so hard and cared for her husband so deeply.

It was given that Kevin didn't like fruits, but she still bought some. She thought that it was a necessity for one to have a balanced diet. Thus, fruits and vegetables were crucial.

It took her an hour to buy everything and go back home. The heavy grocery bags made her hands hurt but she didn't seem to give a damn about it. She happily put all the foods she bought in the fridge.

It was time to prepare a delicious dinner for Kevin. She thought it would be a nice surprise to give him such a delicious dinner. He deserved it for keeping the house neat while she was out.

Kevin headed to the army base after visiting the companies. The sun started to set and it happened to be the time to go home from work. He walked faster as he still got some documents he needed to hand to the commander.

"Major General Gu, where are you going in such a hurry?" Daisy steadied herself and dodged fast. She had to or else Kevin could have knocked her down to the ground.

"Oh! Daisy, it's you! Sorry, I am in a hurry now. Is the commander still in his office?" Kevin ran his fingers through his hair. He felt a bit awkward that she had to see him in such a hurried mess.

"I guess so. I didn't see him myself. But I saw Louisa Ye just now. I guess that she's here to pick the commander up." Daisy didn't like Louisa thus she just greeted her coldly when they met. Louisa, on the other hand, didn't even bother to reply to her at all. Well, that was just bluntly rude.

"What? She's here too? Lee, come here." Kevin hesitated as soon as he heard that Louisa was there. He didn't really want to meet her and get pestered by her especially with the commander's presence. Louisa was the commander's daughter and it wouldn't be nice for their commander to find that he didn't like his child.

Major General, what can I do for you?" Lee was Kevin's guard and assistant, thus, he had also gone to see the companies with him earlier. He was equally as tired and messy as his boss at that point.

"Take this document to the commander. It's required for him to look over this immediately. I won't be coming with you. If the commander asks where I am, just tell him that I have some emergency to deal with and need to go back home early." Kevin didn't care that Daisy and Mark were also there. He just bluntly lied in front of their faces. They all looked at him wide-eyed. It seemed that they didn't expect him to lie as smoothly as that.

"Okay, no problem." Lee took the document from Kevin's hand, then quickly walked to the commander's office. On the other hand, Daisy was staring at Kevin thoughtfully.

Why didn't he want to see Louisa? Did something happen between the two? She was suddenly filled with questions.

"What? Why are you looking at me like that?" Kevin asked and hesitantly touched his face. Was there something wrong with how he looked? What was that strange look from Daisy for?

"Well, Major General, I guess there's something going on here. Aren't you going to tell me?" Daisy smirked. Kevin was in a hurry to see the commander at first but changed his mind after hearing that Louisa was there. There was obviously something going on right there that she didn't know.

What are you talking about? I have no idea. Are you going home too? Then don't waste any more time. Let's get going, okay? Come on now!" It was all he said before Kevin turned around. He was ready to go. He was almost out of that place when an overly sweet voice called his name and made him stop.

"Kevin, you are back." Louisa easily knew that Kevin was back as soon as she saw Lee. She rushed there in hopes of seeing him. Though she claimed that she came to the army base to pick her father up, the real reason was that she wanted to see Kevin. And that was why she was so disappointed when she was told that Kevin wasn't there earlier. She didn't expect quite a luck though. She still caught him!

Chapter 907: Chapter 906: Leena Was Back (part three)

Hello, Miss Ye. What can I do for you?" Kevin said in a cold tone. The thought that she might have some feelings for him bothered him, thus, he couldn't help but be cold to her. He didn't want to give her any false signal or hope. If he wouldn't keep his distance from her, she would probably think that there was still a chance for her. It would be easier and less stressful for him to just let her down that way. It was for the good of them both. Plus, he didn't have the same feelings for her. He was plainly not in the mood for any small talks with her at all.

"Nothing! I saw you, so I just wanted to greet. That's all." Louisa missed to see the impatience on Kevin's face and remained smiling. However, Daisy was also there and was able to see everything. Her heart sank as a hunch that Louisa might hurt Leena suddenly came to her mind.

"Oh. I should get going since you already greeted me. Good-bye!" Now that was Kevin being intentionally cold to the lady. It was so clear that he wanted to get away from her but just couldn't ignore her for the commander's sake.

"But Kevin, can I ride with you to downtown? My car is in the garage being repaired, and I came here by taxi. I thought that I could ride with my dad but you sent him a document just now. So he still has to stay here for a while," Louisa said in a small voice. Her delivery sounded fake and was dripping with excuse even for her own ear. Nevertheless, she needed to make up an excuse to have a ride with Kevin. So she said it anyway.

"I'm going back to downtown too, Miss Ye. I can give you a ride if you don't mind." Daisy interrupted before Kevin could reply. She knew that she was being suspicious but she couldn't let it go as long as there was a possibility that this might hurt Leena. After all, it was clear to all that Louisa liked Kevin very much. As a woman, she could understand Louisa's feeling. Kevin was a great man and it was easy to fall in love with him. She still couldn't understand why Louisa kept pestering Kevin though now that he was already married. It was alright to have feelings for someone but it was selfish to act on it if you knew that doing so would lead to hurting someone else.

"Thank you for your offer, Colonel Ouyang but we are not on the same way. The garage happens to be on Kevin's way back home." What Louisa said was true. She already had everything planned beforehand. She intentionally sent her car to the garage on Kevin's way home for repair. She would bet her bottom dollar to get every chance to be with Kevin and this was a great opportunity.

Oh? Is it so? I wonder how'd you know where I live? You sounded so sure that we are not on the same way," Daisy sneered. Did Louisa take her for a fool? She was being extremely obvious! They were all going downtown first thus, they were all going the same way. The only difference was that she and Kevin didn't live in the same direction from downtown. She could still definitely give her a ride to the garage.

Well, I don't know your address but I bet that it's not on the way." Louisa didn't like Daisy the first time she saw her and her interruption just now made Louisa hate her more. Who was she to interrupt her like that? Who needed her ride in the first place? She was sticking her nose where it didn't belong. She was going to ruin all her plans! She couldn't allow that! Besides, she was asking Kevin, not her!

Daisy, that's fine. You go ahead. Now that Miss Ye insists that she and I are on the same way, I guess I can give her a ride." Kevin's brows furrowed. He was helpless. Louisa was being persistent in catching a ride with him and he couldn't just bluntly refuse her request for the commander's sake. He had to say 'yes'. What he couldn't understand though was why she came here by a taxi to pick the commander up after work hours? For God's sake, she didn't even have a car! Was she really that bored?

Okay, if you are sure. Take care. I'm leaving now." Daisy looked at Louisa keenly with her eyebrows deeply furrowed. There was nothing more for her to say since Kevin already decided on the concern. She believed that Kevin could handle the situation anyway.

"Okay. You take care too. Mark, drive safe," Kevin said as he turned his head to Mark. Though Mark was often careless, he was in fact very good at driving.

"No problem, Major General Gu. Of course, I will be very careful." Mark gave him a standard military salute. He was extremely polite to Kevin. Not like his usual carefree self when he was with Daisy.

Kevin watched Mark and Daisy walking to the parking lot until both disappeared. It was only after a couple of few minutes that he turned to Louisa who was still patiently waiting for him. He let out a small sigh under his breath then finally said to her, " Let's go."

"Thank you so much, Kevin! Hope that I'm not too much of a hassle." Louisa felt a little nervous upon seeing Kevin's expression. It was so clear that he didn't like anything about what happened. She had no idea if she was being too forward but she really wanted to know why he left so suddenly last night. She wouldn't be able to rest unless she knew. She had the feeling that he lied when he said that he had something to do back then. Truth was, he really got nothing going on during that time and just made some random excuse to leave. He was avoiding her.

"That's alright. Like what you said, it's just that we happen to be on the same route, right?" Kevin said as he pulled out the car door and waited patiently for her to get in. He was in a hurry thus, he asked Lee to park his car directly outside the building when they came. It explained why he didn't have to walk through the parking lot with Louisa. At least that was a good thing.

Louisa's lips trembled. She was suddenly speechless. She didn't expect Kevin to be that cold and distant at all. She felt both embarrassed and awkward. Her teeth gritted before she got in the car. How awful, now she had to think of any possible way to break the awkward until they reached the garage.

Chapter 908: Chapter 907: A Surprise For Kevin (part one)

Kevin's face had been grim all the way. He knew that he had gone a bit too far and it was rude to treat a lady like that. It was just that he had to. He must give Louisa the message that she wouldn't stand a chance to enter a relationship with him.

The beautiful scenery outside the window kept passing by but Louisa was in no mood to appreciate it. Kevin's silence had blown up her worries as time passed. She wanted to start a conversation and defuse the awkward ambiance. The only problem was how was she supposed to begin when Kevin seemed all cold and distant with indifference clearly written across his face.

Kevin, how did the emergency go last night? Was everything okay?" she finally asked while smiling embarrassedly. She was still bothered by how he left abruptly last night.

Yes." Kevin replied without any extra word. He showed no interest in chatting with her at all. Apparently, he would like to distance himself from her.

Louisa bit her lip. It was evident that he was annoyed. His attitude towards her hurt. She had never been cold-shouldered since childhood. She had always been cherished. Kevin was the first person, or more specifically, the first male to have snubbed her. If only she wasn't into this man and trying to win his heart, she would never put up with him.

"Tell me the specific location in case I go the wrong way." Kevin finally spoke once they reached downtown. Nevertheless, his voice was still eerily cold.

"It is that 4S store. The one by the crossroads," answered Louisa in a low voice as she cast him a glance. Her pride bled a bit upon realizing that there could be a man who would not be attracted to her.

"I get it," responded Kevin in a monotone as he finished his sentence with a mouth shut. He wasn't acting like a gentleman as he normally would, but rather like the ruthless Duke.

"Kevin, did I ever offend you? It seems to me that you dislike me very much," asked Louisa after a brief silence. She looked up at him innocently with tears in her eyes. The tears kept gathering in her eyes as she spoke.

"No, not at all. I'm afraid that you might be thinking too much," replied Kevin. He turned and looked at her upon hearing her shaky voice, but then his face remained stoic.

"But I can tell that you are very upset along the way," blurted Louisa. It was true that she was a bit thick-skinned but it didn't mean that she was too numb to feel his displeasure.

"Am I? Sorry about that. I was just feeling tired after long work hours." Kevin faintly smiled. It would be impolite to further wear a sour expression since she had expressed her worry.

Really? I'm so relieved. I thought you were unhappy because I have caused you trouble." Louisa breathed a sigh of relief after hearing his words. She could still think of other ways to win his heart as long as he still appreciated her presence. Otherwise, it would basically destroy all her hopes.

"No, you haven't. It's no bother. We are going in the same direction anyway," explained Kevin. Although his attitude was not as good as Louisa had expected, he did shift to a milder manner that time.

"I can see the store now. Please pull over and drop me there," said Louisa as she readied to get off. Originally, she intended to invite him for dinner, but changed her mind as she thought that today was not the right time for advancement. It seemed that he was not a bit happy seeing her after all. Haste makes waste. It would be rash to make further actions unless she knew the reason for his aloofness.

"You mean here?" Kevin slowed down, turned the car around, and pulled over. He just moved into that place thus, he hadn't discovered that there was a 4S store around the area yet.

Yes! Thank you so much, Kevin. To show my gratitude, let me treat you to dinner some other time," said Louisa as she flashed her most charming smile.

Don't mention it. Just forget about the dinner. By the way, can you make it on your own?" Kevin refused and was only being polite when he asked about her car. He wasn't even looking at her as he talked. His focus was on the 4S store as he mentally sized it up.

"No problem. I can pick it up myself. Sorry to have troubled you again," answered Louisa with her bright smile still on. She then opened the door and got out of the car. At the same time, she tried hard to control the expression on her face to avoid Kevin from knowing how disappointed she was.

"Okay. I have to go now. Goodbye." After nodding to her through the window, he stepped on the gas and sped away. Louisa didn't head to the store until his car was out of sight. It was only then that she took a deep breath, lifted her chin, and then walked to the store with her nose held high. Kevin passed a supermarket on his way back home. The fridge was nearly empty, so he thought about stocking up on food. He dropped the idea when he remembered that he was a bit dusty and dirty. He'd better make do with what was left in the fridge tonight or else, he would cause eyebrows to raise if he shopped looking like that. Meanwhile, Leena had prepared a big and wonderful dinner at home. There were seafood dishes and high-class cuisines that required complicated and refined cooking processes. It took her over two hours to fix all of them.

She glanced at her watch while putting the finishing touches on the foods. It was nearly seven and Kevin should be home soon. All was almost ready except for the chicken soup. There was no need to worry though, she thought, for Kevin never got off work on time.

Grabbing a ladle, she scooped up some soup to have a taste. She frowned when she found that it was a bit too bland. After pondering for a while, she decided to toss in some chicken powder seasoning to make sure that the soup tasted more delicious. It was the pleasant smell of food getting cooked that welcomed Kevin as he opened the door. He noticed that the lights were on and it seemed that someone was in the room. Who could it be?

He went on alert and slowed down at once. He lightly closed the door and walked towards the living room almost on tiptoes. It was then that he saw two big suitcases lying on the ground. He let out a sigh of relief. Those suitcases just gave away who was playing tricks on him. He was suddenly overwhelmed with joy and went to the kitchen with a spring in his step.

As expected, his petite and gentle lady was busy cooking dinner. She didn't realize that he was back. 'Good one.' Kevin grinned and squinted at the familiar figure before him. He wasn't expecting her to play that joke on him. So, she turned off her cell phone because she was on the plane, and not because she had to bury herself in the graduation thesis! Come to think of it, she should have reached home this morning. Why didn't she call him when she arrived?

You little liar. Are you having fun tricking me, huh?" He crept up to her and wrapped his arms around her waist from behind. Leena got startled and nearly dropped her ladle with a shriek. How could he just show up without making any sound?

"Oh... Kevin! you're back!" she exclaimed. Leena felt warm breathes on her ear, shortly after her shock wore off. It was then that she realized that he was hugging her tightly and literally pressing himself against her back. Her heartbeats started racing. Blushing, she couldn't tell whether she was sweating from the heat in the kitchen or from the passion he had aroused.

Chapter 909: Chapter 908: A Surprise For Kevin (part two)

Yeah! Now, I'd like to know why you didn't tell me that you would come back today?" asked Kevin gently. He turned her around to face him and then looked her straight in the eyes. It had been almost a month since he last saw her. He found that she had changed a bit. He now could see a more mature and enchanting woman as compared to the cute girl who left some time ago.

"To give you a big surprise, of course! Do you like it?" She quickly avoided his gaze after saying those. She couldn't help but feel shy with the intimacy that suddenly seemed to occupy the place.

"You want the truth? I am more scared than surprised! You really should have called me in advance. I could have picked you up at the airport," said Kevin with great affection. He reached out to wipe the beads of sweat off her forehead then pinched her rosy cheeks softly.

"I know how busy you are with your work. Besides, I'm very much capable of coming back on my own. You see, I am home safe and sound!" Leena replied while smiling shyly. With his big warm hands still resting on her waist, she felt a kind of nervous excitement that made her muscles stiff.

"How is your thesis then? Did you get it completed and passed?" asked Kevin worriedly. He feared that she had to go back to school again since she said previously that it would still be some time before she finished her thesis.

"Yes! It is all completed. Congratulate me, Kevin. And I think I deserve a gift!" declared Leena with her eyes flashing with pride. She was actually thinking about the beautiful necklace she saw in his suitcase not long ago and was trying to remind him of it. She wanted to know whether it was for her or not desperately.

"You have my earnest and warmest congratulations. As for the gift, well...I will give you my heart, okay?" answered Kevin teasingly. He said those words on purpose to see whether she would still push him away.

"No way! It is not a gift at all!" Leena's face began to burn like mad after what he said. She was clever enough to read between the lines and knew that it was, in fact, his invitation to do something unspeakable.

"Are you sure? It is now or never, Miss," asked Kevin with a wicked smile while giving her a meaningful look.

Gosh, I forgot the soup!" Leena cried suddenly. "The dinner is almost ready. You should go and take a shower now unless you want to eat with dust all over you. Look at you. What have you done today? Crawling on your belly or what?" She freed herself from him and went back to the stove in an attempt to dodge the topic. She didn't refuse him nor did she give a clear answer.

You've got it. I had to do the demonstration for those new recruits in my company. It was it that made me look like this." Kevin sighed. Urged by their repeated requests, he gave in and demonstrated a whole set of basic skills for them, which was rare for him.

"Take a bath and freshen up then. Hurry up, the dinner will be ready soon." Leena pressed. Kevin wanted to continue the conversation but was pushed out of the kitchen by Leena. She stood at the door, watching, and didn't get back to set the table until Kevin went upstairs with her two huge suitcases.

Kevin instantly frowned soon as he lifted her things. They were very heavy and seemed too much for a petite girl like Leena. He wondered how she managed to bring them home with her slender arms. It was such good news that she was back though and he was somehow cheered up just by seeing her face. She had really given him a pleasant surprise.

After a quick shower, Kevin went downstairs in his dressing gown and his hair was still wet. Leena had already laid the table and was sitting as she waited for him. She smiled when she saw him come down.

"Why so many dishes? They must have taken a lot of your time," said Kevin with a concerned look shortly after he sat down. He was surprised to see the tableful of delicacies but then suddenly grew worried about her. She must be exhausted from the long flight. She should have been sleeping instead and not in the kitchen to prepare him a lovely dinner. Her acts were making him confused. Shouldn't she be acting like a spoiled brat? Could a rich young lady be so good at cooking? He didn't think so.

Well... not really. You know, no matter how long it takes, I won't feel tired if I'm doing it for you." Being a lively and outgoing person, Leena was humorous and liked to make jokes. It was hard to tell whether she meant what she said or she was merely teasing him.

"Does it mean that I can eat delicious foods often in days ahead?" asked Kevin. He felt quite touched by her words though he got no clue if those were true. It was already a blessing to have her around and enjoy the feast tonight after all.

Consider it done. I'm thinking of turning you into a real butterball. That way, no women will find you attractive and try to steal you away from me," said Leena playfully. She adopted a seemingly jokey manner, therefore, making it difficult for others to tell if she was serious or not. She hoped to draw the secrets out of him without losing her pride in that style. That was exactly what she wanted.

Don't worry. No one can take me away from you even if you don't fatten me up. I'm your husband, surely I will not pay attention to those ordinary women after I set eyes on you." Kevin was quite amused. He had seen through her and known that this cunning girl was putting his loyalty to test. It didn't bother him at all and he just decided to play along.

"Ordinary women? So, you mean if a stunner turns up, you will throw yourself at her feet immediately?" The woman continued fishing for his true feelings as she passed the soup to him. She was even looking at him provocatively.

Well...you can say that again. If that is the case, I suggest that you keep a close eye on me to make sure that no one lures me away," answered Kevin before taking a sip from his soup. His face was bright. He had never had soup since Leena went abroad. He really couldn't afford the time to make soup for himself. Plus, life became pretty dull when he was alone at home thus, he was in no mood for meals and would always grab a bite after work.

"Easy. And just so you know, I will even give you elaborate dowries when you leave me." Leena said with a grimace while pushing his favourite dishes towards him. She was acting like a good wife.

Why dowries?" Kevin looked up at her in confusion. Shouldn't she try hard to win him back?

Why not? I have been feeding you and taking good care of you, treating you like my child, if not husband. Though you are an ungrateful one all these years, I should not break the convenance. Just take it as my blessings for you two." Seeing Kevin's face darken at her words, Leena smiled slyly.

You little rascal. Why not just say that you are planning to kick me out of the house? Besides, may I remind you that we have been married for less than six months, so don't make it sound like you have taken care of me for years." Kevin shook his head. The truth just sunk in, and he really could do nothing with her crazy ideas.

Chapter 910: Chapter 909: A Surprise For Kevin (part three)

"I was talking about things in the coming years. After all, you are still mine and I can't expect to marry you off in a short time, can I? You are not that popular, sir," scoffed Leena. She could actually imagine Kevin wearing a Cinderella gown and a bridal veil. However, what she was trying to say was that if her man would be seduced by other women that easily, then she would not be so kind to him now. What was the point of clinging to him knowing that he would betray her someday?

"Seems that you are really far-sighted. But I will tell you what, it's difficult to follow the path of virtue but easy to succumb to vices. You will never know when a person would change. Maybe in a few years, maybe tomorrow." Kevin responded with faked seriousness. He put some food into her bowl, as he feared that she was too skinny to be considered healthy. He strongly thought that she should be the one gaining weight and not him.

"Then what about you? Will you succumb to vices? Or can I trust you?" Leena asked eagerly. She frowned at the food in her bowl, but ate them with resignation in the end.

"Who knows? That's why you should keep a close watch on me!" Kevin said jokingly, then gave her a wink. Now it was Leena's turn to wonder whether he meant it or not.

After pondering for a while, Leena replied, "In my opinion, no one can take my place if we are destined for each other. Otherwise, you will still be unfaithful to me even if I never let you out of my sight. So I think I should just let it be." This was Leena's idea and practice about love. She was never a doubting Thomas but she would not tolerate it if people deceived her.

"You said it, girl. I'm glad that you think that way. Now just dig in before the dishes get cold," urged Kevin after he put the succulent crab flesh he had peeled for her in her bowl. He would really like to make her eat all the nutritious foods on the table.

"Stop it! I can't eat that much. Can't you see? My bowl is all full!" groaned Leena. She was looking at the heaping pile of food before her with a pained expression. She nearly shouted out when she discovered that Kevin had put so much food in her bowl without her knowing it. Were her plans backfiring at her? Was Kevin really launching her plan to feed him against her after he heard about it? It seemed to her that he wanted to strike first and fatten her up even before she could take actions.

"You should eat more. I think you're too skinny. All I can see is nothing but skin and bones," teased Kevin. He had stopped adding food to her bowl after she protested. Instead, he started to enjoy the meal.

"Nonsense! Look at my beautiful body and curves first before you say that again. To tell you honestly, I think I have perfect curves completed with big breasts and buttocks. I'm just the way a model is!" Head up and chest out, Leena tried to show her figure while fighting back. She was too excited to realize that she was about to make a spectacle of herself again.

"Oh... really? Where? I can't see any of what you are saying." Kevin continued to tease her. It was just amusing to see her blowing her top. He faked a little cough with his fist covering his mouth to stifle his laughter.

"If you don't believe me, you can feel it yourself..." She broke off in mid-sentence, stunned. 'What was I talking about?' She thought to herself. 'Was I just telling him to touch my body? Will he think that I said it on purpose to lure him?'

However, her answer was also way beyond Kevin's expectation. He couldn't even bat a word as he froze there with his eyes wide with surprise.

Well...You can simply forget about what I said." Leena said lamely. She grew absolutely ashamed of herself and avoided Kevin's gaze. She couldn't believe that she had actually said those words. How could she just drop her guards and talk to him in that way?

But I heard it, and I can't take my mind off it now," Kevin refused with a malicious smile after recovering himself. Of course he would not drop the matter since she took the initiative and seduced him. Although it was quite unintentional, she could not take those words back.

"I'm afraid that you heard it wrong," argued Leena helplessly. She could only lower her head out of shame until she nearly hit her forehead against the table.

Hey, eat with your mouth, not your forehead," Kevin quickly stopped her. He couldn't help but chuckle as he saw her act like a kid. She would shoot from the hip sometimes and he had long gotten used to it. It was just that what she said meant something else to him this time. He was a bit aroused.

"I... Kevin, are you laughing at me?" Leena questioned then bit her lip. She had always been good at playing tricks on others but it was odd how she always ended up being the laughing stock when faced with him. Did this conclude that love could really make one stupid?

No, I'm not," Kevin paused and said. "You're overthinking it. How would I laugh at such a cute girl. Now stop making unworthy assumptions and dive in!" He really didn't mind if his woman was clumsy before him. He knew that it didn't mean that she was foolish. Rather, it just showed that she trusted him and she was relaxed enough to be herself when he was around.

"You are lying! I saw you laughing secretly just now and you are smiling again!" Leena pouted in annoyance. She knew it clearly that she had just made a fool of herself again by saying those thoughtless words. It was fortunate that there was no one else there to watch. She would rather die than let others see her act that way. If ever, that would be a social-suicide.

"What do you expect then? Am I supposed to cry? But why would I?" People said that women were hard to please. Kevin couldn't agree more. Apparently, Leena was one of that kind of women.

Nah...why would I make a fuss about this trifle with you? You see, I don't care about it at all. Now, I'm full, and I will go upstairs to unpack. Remember to clean the table after your meal. It's your punishment for offending me!" As soon as she finished her words, Leena stood from her seat and bolted out of that place. She did it so fast that Kevin wasn't even able to blurt any word at all. He watched her disappear in the staircase in no time. He suspected that she must have practiced the stunt so many times thus she was an expert at escaping now.