At the same time, many other fans loved her and Harry as a couple in the drama. Those who weren't die-hard fans felt that she was pretty and had good chemistry with Harry. From then on, Skylar and Harry were promoted in a way that made them look like they were developing feelings for each other. Kate had even received an invitation for Skylar and Harry to model as a couple for the cover of Harper's Bazaar. For a budding actress, it was a great honor indeed. Meanwhile, Tobias had become more prudent and would consistently send her a message every day. However, it would only contain a concise sentence: I'm doing fine today. The last time they met was half a month ago. During this period, it was the text messages that confirmed the existence of their relationship. At the rate it was going, Harry had become her boyfriend in the rumor mill. There wasn't any truth to it other than to satisfy the fans' fantasies. When Skylar was waiting to do her makeup in the studio, Harry arrived earlier than usual. Unlike before where they hardly spoke in private, he gifted her a box of expensive chocolates.

Skylar replied with a smile, "I didn't prepare anything as a gift in return." When he saw the conflicted look on her face, Harry suggested, "Just treat me to dinner. After we're done with work, let's go grab a bite. Just the two of us." Skylar lifted her gaze at him. "Why just the two of us? Have you contacted the press to take some photographs? Is this your management company's idea or your own?" "It's their idea. They want to capitalize on our popularity right now to elevate it one step further." Skylar smiled in response and looked just as stunning doing so. In the entertainment industry, it was difficult to rely on one's capabilities alone. One couldn't avoid dipping their toes into the rumor mill. The world was fair; no one would ever get anything without sacrifice. At that moment, Kate entered and whispered something to Skylar. Only then did she agree to have dinner with Harry.

She too wanted to test the waters and see what Tobias' reaction was. When they first got together, he was actually quite petty. But now, he seemed to be so open-minded that he didn't care about the rumors at all. The last time he apologized was for not maintaining a proper distance with the opposite sex. At that time, Skylar realized that the balance of power wasn't in her favor and she had nothing to threaten Tobias with. She recalled someone telling her that the honeymoon phase of a relationship was three months. During that time, the man would love her to bits, and she could hardly tell whether they were truly compatible. After three months, most men would show their true colors. A relationship would always start with the man being passionately in love and ending with the roles reversed.

Harry found a place that served spicy food which was his favorite. Coincidentally, Skylar loved spicy food too. Both of them dressed were casually in baseball caps. They sat by the full-length windows of the restaurant. As Skylar glanced out of the window, she saw paparazzi taking photos of them discreetly from their cars, just as expected. Skylar recovered her gaze and looked in Harry's direction. He remembered the first time they met was also under equally unassuming atmosphere. The feeling was both comfortable and soothing. At that moment, he understood why someone as powerful as Tobias could fall head over heels for Skylar. Or in fact, fall into bed with her. "Do you have a girlfriend?" Skylar asked. Harry was briefly stunned before he calmly replied, "I do, but she doesn't work in showbiz. I have to keep it under wraps for the sake of my career." "Do you have a boyfriend?" Harry asked in return. Skylar took a sip of coffee. "You can say so. Isn't your girlfriend angry that both of us are having dinner alone?" Harry looked conflicted as this was his management agency's decision. Therefore, he had no say in them. As for his girlfriend, she would definitely be upset. After their meal, he would have to rush over to her place to pacify her. He replied, "No, she won't. She's someone sensible."

Skylar hated it whenever a man said that a woman was sensible. Who doesn't want to vent once in a while? Besides, men are just forcing women to become more understanding.

When her phone suddenly rang, Skylar assumed it was the same word she received from Tobias every day.

Tobias: Where are you? I'm already home.

Skylar gasped at once. Of all days, why does he have to come back today?

She replied: I'm having dinner and will be back late. Mr. Ford, it's not my safe period tonight.

But I have made the necessary preparations.

Her reply was candid.

By now, she took more initiative than Tobias when it came to sex. They were both adults and there was no need to pretend to be shy.

Tobias didn't reply after that.

During dinner, a few fans came to ask for their autographs. Skylar assumed that they were here for Harry. But, she didn't expect them to hand her their notebooks instead.

Surprised by the attention, she not only signed her autographs but also took photos with them.

By the time she reached home, it was three hours later. Reeking of the smokey smell from the restaurant, her hands were ice-cold as she fumbled for her keys in her bag.

Before she could find them, Tobias opened the door from inside.

Having not seen each other for half a month, Tobias looked as charming as always.

With his tall figure towering over her, he was dressed in his black shirt and pants. He had a cold expression on his face.

The lights of the villa opposite had been turned off. When Tobias came home earlier, he saw Miranda staring out the window, just like a stalker.

The moment Skylar entered, she threw herself into his embrace. When her attention turned to the table, she saw that it was full of supplements and red wine.

“Did you bring me gifts for the new year? But I have no one to gift them to.” Skylar snuggled in his arms. It had been a long time since she smelled his familiar scent. Sometimes, she wondered if Tobias had added musk to this white sandalwood fragrance as it always stimulated the lust in her. Furthermore, she wondered how many other girls had smelled that scent too. “You can give them to whoever you want, or keep them for yourself. Did you miss me?” As he leaned in closer to her, he was annoyed by the smell of smoke in her hair. After letting her go, he took her bag and hung it by the door. “I was so busy that I didn’t have time to miss you. Mr. Ford, what brings you here to visit this lonely lady tonight?” Skylar teased seductively. Sensing that she was in the mood, he replied softly, “I saw you the last time because I missed you. But tonight, I’m here to bed you.” Skylar was cognizant that Tobias resented the smell of smoke on her. Hence, she quickly went to take a bath. After all, a night of passion was priceless to her. When she returned to the bedroom, she noticed Tobias was checking the trending topics on social media. In the era of big data, news traveled extremely fast. Before she had time to digest her dinner, her date with Harry was the top trending topic. It read: Skylar and Harry develop feelings for each other.

The title couldn’t be any clearer. Skylar watched Tobias quietly as she didn’t try to explain. Putting his phone down, Tobias closed his eyes in deep thought. Contrary to what she expected, his response was extremely calm. She had imagined that he would question her in anger. Or at least, the Tobias early in the relationship would definitely do that. Finally, she couldn’t bear it any longer and wanted to explain to him. However, before she could say a word, Tobias kissed her. She then wrapped her arms around his shoulders and kissed him back. In the midst of the passionate kiss, they were out of breath in no time. However, neither of them was willing to let go of the other. As their tongues curled around each other, they sucked the souls out of one another. Pressing his body on top of her, Tobias breathed heavily as he asked, “Baby, which position do you prefer?”
