“Cassidy’s still crying,” Hannah said scornfully. “What’s going on with her? Everyone’s there trying to comfort her.”

Skylar twisted open the food jar and saw that the food the crew prepared was surprisingly decent.

“Maybe I should shed some tears too tomorrow,” she remarked while eating.

“Everyone now looks at me like I have bullied my senior, and they’re all sympathizing with Cassidy.” Hannah actually believed her and wanted to dissuade her from doing so. “Don’t do it, Skylar. I don’t think you can even if you tried, since you lack the proper experience. Just let her be. I doubt she’d be able to keep it up for too long.”

Suddenly, Skylar’s phone rang, and it took her a while before she managed to dig it out.

During filming, she would often hide her phone inside her boot if she could not find Hannah.

Seeing that it was Tobias calling, Skylar raised an eyebrow. She remembered everything she said to Tobias before she left.

Skylar had a bad memory, but Tobias was an exception as she could recall anything related to him well.

“Send me your location. I’ll be there in half an hour.”

That was the first thing Skylar heard when she picked up. She could distinctly hear the sound of the car speeding on the road, and her grip tightened around her phone.

“Didn’t you say you won’t come for visits? Why the change of heart all of a sudden?”

“Just send me the address.”

It was a touching notion, but Tobias’ tone destroyed her mood, as though he could not stand Skylar’s voice whatsoever.

Hence, Skylar put down her spoon and sent him her location, reminding him to drop by secretly as she was already the center of attention in the crew.

Skylar got out of the motorhome, wanting to wait for Tobias in the room. Instead, she bumped into Cassidy, whose eyes were swollen from all the crying.

“Are you okay?” Skylar asked. “I’m sorry for what I did back then. I was young and stupid. I had no ill will towards you at all.” She bowed towards Cassidy as soon as she finished. “How could you do that? Is it because I stole the spotlight even though you were the main character? I’m your senior, so how can you bully me? Have you no conscience?” Skylar frowned as she never had that thought in mind. Cassidy was not the same actress compared to when she debuted. Sadly, her bad acting, spacing out, mumbling and fumbling lines, and all sorts of mistakes plagued Cassidy’s performance. On top of that, she looked unhealthily skinny and lost the vigor of her youth. There was no way anyone would think that Cassidy could outshine Skylar. Hence, Skylar apologized to Cassidy again. At the same time, she vowed to be more grateful for her current achievement and not to leave any more sarcastic comments on social media ever again. Back then, she had never thought that her name would one day be trending on Twitter. Sh*t! I should’ve never done that. Largo came by with his assistant and saw what was going on. When Cassidy noticed them, her tears started pouring out once again. Skylar was amazed by the capacity of her tear glands, as she was able to cry within seconds and could go on for hours. It was something Skylar could never do. Largo approached them and acted as a mediator, comforting Cassidy. Nevertheless, all she did was continued crying.

Her sobbing made Skylar feel increasingly uncomfortable, so she wanted to leave, forgetting that Tobias was waiting for her at the hotel.

Thus, she made up an excuse that she had to discuss the script with Largo and got Largo into her motorhome.

Hannah was surprised to see Skylar back in the motorhome again, and she even brought Largo along. She wanted to remind Skylar that she was supposed to go to the hotel, but she had decided to keep quiet after giving it some thought.

It was the first time Largo visited Skylar's motorhome. It was one of the models that he had been eyeing. Largo liked it a lot, but the price was a little steep that he had not made his move. Moreover, Skylar had all the best accessories equipped in it, which made him wonder if the rumors online were true since Skylar was only in her early twenties—too young to own something like that.

He read from the internet that Skylar was a toy for some big shots. To those people, she was nothing but a doll with a pretty face. It's difficult to stay pure and innocent within the entertainment industry.

"Do you have anything going on tonight, Mr. Zeller?" Skylar smiled as she took out the script.

"Am I holding you up by any chance?"

"I'm always free during the night. You could also come to my room for this. It should be much more comfortable," Largo said as his assistant passed him his script.

Skylar's gaze slowly darkened when she heard what he said, staring at his innocent smile. Is he hinting at something? Or am I thinking too much?

"I'll pass on that." she smiled. "I don't want to get you involved with all the negative news I have at the moment, Mr. Zeller. Besides, running through lines in a hotel room doesn't sound too good. Do you do this with Avery, Mr. Zeller?"

It was quite obvious where Skylar was heading with her question, so Largo immediately clarified the matter, "Please don't listen to what the others say. She only came to me to borrow a charger."

His reasoning was a little too over the top for Skylar to believe, but she did not probe any further as it was none of her business.

She figured that Largo had a lot of secrets and was not the man that the media portrayed him to be.

Having said that, Largo was very patient with Skylar when they were going through the script, as she would immerse herself in the role quite often.

That was also why acting was one of the jobs that had the highest divorce rate. A lot of celebrities would get too much into certain roles and developed feelings for each other, mixing up what was real with what was not. Moreover, the character that Largo played was indeed a very charming man. When they were done, it was already pretty late. The hotel was quite a distance away from where they were, but Largo had other things that he needed to attend to, so he did not accompany Skylar back. In the lobby of the hotel, Tobias sat on the sofa at the window, looking as handsome as ever, with a fresh haircut that Skylar did not know. The short hair made him look much more masculine. When their eyes met, neither of them approached each other, a rare sense of chemistry between them. Skylar walked straight towards the elevator, and Tobias followed suit, carefully distancing himself.

Tobias' sudden appearance was a surprise that Skylar really appreciated, as she always thought that the next time they met would be after all the filming was done. When Skylar got into her room, she instinctively left a small gap at the door without even looking. When she heard the door close, she could also hear footsteps closing in on her. Skylar turned around wrapped her hands around his neck. "Sorry for making you wait. I had to run through some lines, and it took quite some time."
