

In a Love Nest with the Aloof CEO Chapter 499

The multimedia subsidiary of Ford Group had been doing well as the most downloaded games in the industry were developed by that particular subsidiary. The players of those games had deep pockets. They were all willing to spend a fortune purchasing items in the game, which contributed to Ford Group's success as the market leader.

Ironically, the players, who had been informed they would have to spend a fortune beforehand, weren't against the idea at all.

To be precise, they had a hard time resisting the well-developed game with ethereal-looking scenes and a surreal storyline.

When Skylar approached him, she leaned on his shoulder and asked, "Why haven't you played any of the games developed? As the owner of the company, aren't you supposed to experience it firsthand?"

Tobias closed his eyes and announced while placing his hand on his forehead, "What kind of theory is that? Have you heard of scientists trying the drugs they are developing?"

She was rendered speechless by the man's reply because his point seemed valid.

Initially, she wanted to get him to join her for another game, but he broke the silence, announcing out of the blue, "I don't think I can deal with the game because it requires a timely response. Speaking of which, aren't you tired? If you're not going to sleep, shall we have some fun? I'm sure you're going to have a great time sleeping after some exercise."

Tobias spent the upcoming few days dealing with all sorts of things regarding the promotional activities. Occasionally, he would get in touch with Skylar through a call when he was free.

She was glad because he had improved as compared to the time they started getting into a relationship. Previously, he would go missing for a fortnight without keeping in touch with her.

Thus, Skylar came to the conclusion Tobias was a man without any sense of crisis. He seemed to be pretty confident she wouldn't leave him.

On the other hand, Skylar had garnered the attention of the public due to the exposure over the past few weeks. Her fans had established an official fan club for her and would show her their support during her live show.

One of the journalists asked her if she was in a relationship during the last day of the series of promotional activities in Dellmoor.

She replied with a straight face, "I'll leave that to God because I don't have time to take those into consideration. I mean, I wish to focus on my career since I'm still young. To be frank, I think there are quite a few aspects I have to work on."

The journalists rolled their eyes in disappointment as they were conscious of the things going on behind the scenes. With that being said, they were well aware of the reason behind her lie.

No celebrity would announce their relationship because their management company would stop them. It was the same for Skylar, a rookie in the entertainment industry. Should she announce her relationship, it would be over for her career.

Skylar received a call from Wesley when she made her way back from Dellmoor. He yelled at her and asked her to make her way to his place immediately.

She wasn't close with Wesley at all. Unlike Sharon, Wesley was a hypocrite capable of concealing his emotions instead of showing his true colors. He has been telling me how much he loves me and how I can always approach him if there's anything I need. However, when I showed up at his place, he refused to answer the door and turned me down without a second thought. Skylar was conscious that was the first time Wesley had raised his volume against her.

Initially, she had the rest of her day sorted out, including taking a nap once she was home. Unfortunately, as exhausted as she might be, she had no choice but to tell the driver to drop her off at another destination. On her way to her uncle's place, she called Miranda and asked, "Are you aware of the reason Uncle Wesley has asked me over out of the blue when it's getting late?" Miranda, who was roused from her sleep, yawned and said, "What else could it be? I'm pretty sure it's because he misses you. It's not a big deal to pay him a visit since he's a relative of ours, isn't it? He used to be your grandmother's favorite. We're no longer the same, but we're not supposed to forget the favor they have done us. I'll talk to you again because I need to sleep."

Skylar went dead silent when Miranda hung up her call. She couldn't believe her mother had the guts to mention that her uncle missed her. It was evident that her uncle, Wesley, was up to no good.

Miranda seemed to have forgotten Wesley was the reason Skylar had been turned into an outcast of the family after Meredith passed on.

Those were the darkest days of Skylar's life because her life would depend on every single cent she had. As she had no one to rely on, she spent some time living on the streets.

If it weren't because Penelope had done her a favor, she might have to spend most of her days in the middle of nowhere. She had long gotten used to starving because she couldn't afford any proper meal.

Miranda dismissed her brother's responsibilities and thought his wife was the one at fault because he had been stripped of the authority to make the call once they got married.

Once Skylar showed up, she noticed Wesley had been anticipating her arrival at the entrance of the manor.

Since he had shown up to show her the way into the place, Skylar thought it must be a big deal.

Wesley greeted her with a scrunched-up face when she alighted from the car.

She proceeded to tell the driver to head back without her.

However, the driver rebuked, "Ms. Jones, I think it's better for me to stay around! It's tough to get yourself a cab home because it's getting late!"

Skylar was reluctant to waste the driver's time because he had been driving since the moment she touched down. Thus, she repeated herself, "It's fine! I'll hail another cab one way or another! Thanks!"

The driver had grown fond of Skylar because of her straightforward personality. He thought she wasn't as indifferent as the rumor had claimed her to be.

In fact, she was one of the most easygoing celebrities he had ever encountered throughout his career.

Skylar didn't even have the chance to figure out the things going on because Thomas showed her the way into the place once she was done. As they made their way through the passage with faint illumination, Skylar noticed the handrail of the stairs and the benches around had corroded. It had been a long time since Skylar last made her way there in the middle of the night. As she walked down the hallway, she found everything familiar, including the scene and the lingering sensation in the air. She would only make her way back in the late evening during her high school days. In order to make her way through the pitch-black passage, she had to rely on her pink torchlight.

Concerned about her granddaughter, Meredith would stay up until Skylar was back, no matter how long it would take. Meanwhile, the moment Skylar stepped into the manor, she heard Sharon yelling at the top of her lungs again. Kevin was seated at the dining table with his head drooping over his shoulders. When Sharon noticed Skylar had shown up, she got increasingly infuriated and pinched Kevin's ears in front of Skylar. "What has gotten into your mind? You're supposed to spend your time studying instead of wasting your time and money playing games! Are you aware you have spent the entire family's fortune just to have fun?" Skylar was taken aback because Kevin had always been a top-notch student. As a matter of fact, he was a match for Avery in terms of academic results. Caressing his swollen ears, Kevin went dead silent, but his frustration was written all over his face. It was evident the rebellious young man had no intention to listen to his parents. Skylar was confused about the reason her proud aunt, who would show off her exceptional son in front of others, had summoned her over and taught him a lesson in front of her.

Wait! Is she trying to get me to compensate them? What kind of joke is this?

When Kevin made his way back to his room, he banged the door shut, indicating he was irked.
