"Does Ryga and your friend know about you?". Dorothy nodded but Hakurou's facial expression changed "next time don't go out and tell anyone your identity because a lot of hunters were hunting some witch, not only they hunt a wolf but also a witch". Dorothy nodded and was pleased to hear that someone was actually caring for her.

Ever since her mother died, she had nowhere to go. She was wondering from one place to another. She was traveling alone to find her father. From her mother's point of view, her father was an ordinary human who escaped from the black witch's grasp. She didn't think of her father as a runaway guy; instead, she wanted an answer as to why his father ran and left her behind.
