

The Amazing Son In Law (Charlie Wade)

Chapter 3436-3437)

Afterwards, the planes took off one after another, and were divided into two echelons in the air, one after the other towards Hunter (Hamid)'s base.

At the same time, 5,000 government soldiers were only less than 40 kilometers away from Hunter (Hamid)'s position.

Due to the mobility of the entire crew, they are expected to be able to arrive at the scheduled location in 40 minutes.

And Hunter (Hamid)'s base is full of enthusiasm.

More than 140 explosion points have been buried in advance, and they are controlled by 14 blasting divisions and engineers.

The blaster in front of each of them has been marked with the location and number of the blasting point, and at the same time they are holding a walkie-talkie with a dedicated channel in their hands.

Once the enemy appears, once the soldier in charge of the investigation has determined the enemy's location, they will be notified of the explosion point that needs to be detonated through this walkie-talkie channel.

At that time, as long as the person in charge of blasting finds that the explosive point to be blasted is within his control, he will immediately detonate the designated explosive point at the first time.

In this way, even if more than 10 people control more than 100 bursts, there will be no misoperation.

At the same time, Hunter (Hamid)'s scouts are also paying attention to each road into the mountain. The drones are also guaranteed to stay in the air at all times. Although the observation capabilities of the drones at night are greatly reduced, if the opponent is a large force marching, it will be bound to be lights, and although the lights are difficult to spot in the dark mountains, the drone's angle of view can be unobstructed, so it is easier to spot the enemy at night.

Chen, sitting in the cockpit of the plane, was observing the ground outside the window.

The mountainous areas of Syria are very remote and blocked. At night, there are only a few light spots in the vast hilly areas. Most of these are villages located in the mountains, and there are also some small-scale opposition organizations.

The two pilots of the plane were both soldiers of the Dragon Temple. Because they were worried that the Syrian Air Force pilots had insufficient flight experience, Chen replaced them all with his own people.

At this time, the captain said: "Commander, we will reach the skydiving position in another twenty minutes."

Chen looked out the window and said thoughtfully: "This place is really too backward. It is said that many villages in hilly areas have not yet been powered on."

"Yes." The captain nodded and said, "Most of the light spots we can observe from above are burning torches in the village, but all that can be used for electricity is basically armed by the opposition, and only they can use it. Start the generator."

Chen smacked his lips and said: "I really don't understand why so many Brother Paoze can be sacrificed in such a backward armed force... There is a strong sense of unknown in my heart, which makes me feel uneasy."

The captain said hurriedly: "Commander, you don't have to worry too much. We will defeat the war during the day. The main thing is to underestimate the enemy, plus the enemy's fortifications are there, we really do not have the advantage."

"But they must not be able to cope with the raid at night!"

"Not to mention, the night vision equipment alone is probably not worth it at all. Even if there are estimates, there are only a few sets."

"Once a thousand of us are pushed up, their night vision equipment is useless at all. No matter how many soldiers, most of them will be blind, and they will definitely not be able to hold our offensive by then."

Chen nodded slightly: "I hope we can destroy them in one fell swoop if we descend from the heavens!"

Ten minutes later, the warning light in the cabin came on.

The hatch at the tail of the plane opened slowly, and the soldiers knew very well that this was a signal for parachuting, so they got up one after another and checked each other's parachute bags.

Twenty minutes later, when the planes successively arrived at the parachuting position, batch after batch of soldiers descended from the sky, raining down toward Hunter (Hamid)'s position.

Before the first paratrooper landed, Hunter (Hamid) received a reminder from the scouts that they had found the parachutist parachuting through the night market and thermal imaging equipment.

As a result, everyone has the spirit of twelve points, waiting for this group of people to throw themselves into the net again!