

Baby alliance: helping daddy get a rich mommy chapter 279

However, Selena realized when the truth was uncovered that Pierre wasn't in fact doubting her. The reason he refused to marry her was because he wanted to protect her. In fact, his identity dictated that he would never be able to indulge in marital bliss.

Seeing that he wasn't riled up by the fact that she was a spy, she figured he must've loved her, or else he would've already put a bullet through her head. However, she wasn't exactly certain if her conjecture was right. She already made multiple misjudgements prior to this, so she no longer had the courage to make a guess.

By the next morning, Juniper rose with the sun. Upon noticing that Selena was back when she opened her eyes, a smile bloomed on her face. "You're finally awake. What would you like to have for breakfast?" "Um... I'd like some congee."

"Sure. I'll go get some for you." With that, Selena left to buy breakfast. She returned later on in a jolly mood with the congee that Juniper wanted, only to see Juniper sitting on the bed with her face and hands smeared with blood. "Juniper!" Making a dash toward her daughter, she asked, "What happened?"

"Don't worry, Mom. It's just a nosebleed." Juniper seemed much calmer than her mother, as it wasn't her first time getting a nosebleed.

Deftly, Selena helped Juniper stop the bleeding. Although she managed to stop it, she was still a little worried about her, so she had a doctor do a checkup on Juniper. Later on, she was called into the doctor's office.

Ever since Juniper was hospitalized, she came to learn more about the doctor's office. The doctors would only speak to patients there whenever a grave situation occurred. If the patient was recovering or never had much of a problem to begin with, the doctor would simply talk to them in the ward without needing to have a conversation in the office. Therefore, she was inexplicably nervous. "Doctor, does my daughter's nose bleed indicate something really bad?"

Instead of giving an immediate reply, the doctor pondered on the question before answering, "Yes."

The doctor's definitive reply made her feel as if her world was crumbling. Why are the heavens unwilling to let go of this poor child? "What's her condition?"

With his palm facing downward, the doctor made a gesture to indicate to her to keep calm. "You have to remain calm. Listen to my explanation first."

However, it was just impossible to not get all agitated. "Doctor, tell me the truth. I can handle it."

"Your daughter has leukemia."

I knew it! Selena screwed her eyes shut in agony. Seeing that the doctor called her into his office over something as minor as a nosebleed, she already had an inkling that Juniper might have leukemia.

However, having her conjecture being confirmed by the doctor was still devastating. "How could this be? Juniper..." She choked on her own words.

"Miss Yard, you don't need to be overly concerned. With modern medicine, we have more knowledge regarding leukemia, so we have less to fear."

It wasn't until then that Selena lifted her head to look at the doctor. "Is there a cure?"

"Your daughter is lucky, as her condition isn't terminal. Besides, she is still young, so she has a high chance of making a full recovery after treatment. We have a few patients with a similar case who were cured, so we will definitely be able to get her condition under control as well as present a cure."

The doctor's explanation seemed to have given her some hope. If all goes according to what the doctor says, there's still much hope in the situation! she thought to herself. "So what do we need to do? Do we need a bone marrow transplant?"

"While that might be the best option, her current condition isn't very severe, so we can first try out other regular options for treatment first."
