

Baby alliance: helping daddy get a rich mommy chapter 455

Selena nodded, and without saying any more pretentious words, she left and went home. At home, Joaquin was reading a book while Jameson was fiddling with the toy blocks in boredom.

With a whoosh, he pushed the castle he had just put together so that it fell apart and scattered across the ground. "It's not fun at all!" Raising his eyes, Joaquin looked at Jameson. "What's wrong?"

"Jojo, did Grandpa die?" Jameson didn't have much spirit these days and felt very down. Besides, he kept having nightmares about his grandfather spurting blood. When he woke up several times in the middle of the night, it was Joaquin who came to calm him down. Joaquin didn't tell Jude about all this, as he knew he couldn't add more trouble to the adults anymore.

"Yes," Joaquin affirmed. "Then if he's dead, where did he go?"

"To the sky, where we will never see each other again." But Jameson cocked his head and looked at his brother. "But why do I always dream about Grandpa? He spurted a big mouthful of blood and sprayed it on my head!"

When Jameson said this, he also touched his head as if he still had blood on it.

"That was just a dream. As you miss Grandpa too much, that is why you dreamed of him. I'll tell you a story the next time you sleep so you won't dream of him again."

Jameson nodded. "Okay, sure!" The two brothers were chatting when Selena opened the door and entered.

"Mommy!" Jameson immediately rushed over and jumped into her arms. "Why are you even busier than Daddy at work? I haven't seen you for days!"

Picking Jameson up, Selena replied, "Sorry, Jamie. I'm indeed a little busy." "Then will you make up for it by making me something delicious tonight?"

Selena really wanted to say 'yes', but she had a lot of things to do, and she was not in the mood to cook for the kids. "Sorry, Jamie, I need to go to the hospital later to visit Juniper. You know Juniper is sick, right?"

Jameson nodded. "Yeah, I also miss Juniper. Mommy, why don't you take me and Jojo to the hospital to see Juniper?"

Then, Selena took the two boys to the living room. "You two, listen to me, okay?"

Jameson sat on Selena's left lap, and Joaquin sat on her right lap, then she held them with both hands. "Juniper is very sick and needs a bone marrow transplant."

"What do you mean by a bone marrow transplant?" Jameson was really forthcoming with his questions, so he hurried to ask questions before Selena could continue to speak further.

“Let me do it.” Joaquin opened his mouth. In fact, Selena had long thought that since Joaquin was so thoughtful and knowledgeable, he must have known about leukemia and bone marrow transplantation. He might have even looked up things related to bone marrow transplantation. Regardless, she was unwilling to talk to Joaquin in private alone because that would give him too much pressure. It would be as if this was his responsibility, so he must do so.

Looking at him, Selena spoke. “Jojo, I know that you are a thoughtful boy, but I also hope you can think about it clearly first. A bone marrow transplant is not that simple, and your body may become worse for some time. Besides, you also have to stay in the hospital for a period of time, and even during the surgery, you may...” Selena could not continue.

“I may die. I know.” Joaquin finished her words.

“Die? Does that mean you’ll be able to see Grandpa?” A confused Jameson looked at Joaquin.

Then, Selena pulled Joaquin into her arms and pressed him against her chest. “I’m sorry, Jojo. I’m sorry. Actually, you can refuse.”

But Joaquin shook his head very firmly. “I won’t refuse.”
