

Baby alliance: helping daddy get a rich mommy chapter 479

Yoel's accusations made Helen feel guilty. "Yoel, I didn't expect that this would be the outcome. I also didn't know how Selena found out about Chris' identity. By the way, how is he now?"

"He's fine." Upon learning that her son was fine, Helen wasn't sure whether she should feel sad because her son was doing well without her or relieved that he wasn't affected by what happened to her. "I'm glad that he isn't affected. Yoel, have you come up with any solution to get me out of here?"

"No." "No? Please do something. I can't stay here any longer," Helen pleaded. "I have never thought about saving you." Helen widened her eyes in disbelief. "Yoel, you—"

"It's over now. I'll take care of our son in your stead. If I try to save you now, my identity will be exposed. If I get put behind bars as well, who's going to take care of our son?" Yoel replied impassively.

Yoel had always treated her coldly when they were in the Fowler Residence, but that was mainly because of his identity. Now that only the two of them were there, she was starting to doubt why he was still so unfeeling to her. "Yoel, have you given up on me?"

Upon hearing that, Yoel lowered his gaze. A moment later, he looked at her and nodded.

At that instant, Helen was devastated. They were always living on the edge when they were in Zephyr Organization. However, at that time, they had never thought about giving up on each other as they would either survive or die together. Has everything changed now?

"Yoel, why are you doing this to me? Don't you love me anymore? You promised me that we'd always stay together."

"Yes, I gave you that promise, but I can't do that now because the situation has changed. We have to adapt to the changes. If you plead guilty, Chris and I will be fine. However, if you don't do that, the investigation will go on, and all of us will be prosecuted."

At the mention of Chris, Helen was shocked. Killing John was her and Yoel's idea and had nothing to do with Chris, so he wouldn't be affected however the police looked into the case. The plan was practically executed by Helen only because she trusted Yoel wholeheartedly.

At that moment, she realized that if she wasn't going to plead guilty, Yoel would drag Chris into this matter—perhaps he would even shift all the blame to Chris and stay clear of it. "Yoel, you can't do that! He's your son!"

"Every man for himself. Wasn't that what we were taught in the organization?"

The unfeeling man before her eyes made her feel like she had never known him. Many years had passed since they left the organization, and he was no longer the same man as he was in the past.

"Think about it." Yoel put the handset back in its place and rose from the chair.

"Yoel, don't go! You can't do this to me! You can't!" Helen wailed, but the man couldn't hear her. Nevertheless, he wouldn't turn around again even if he heard her.

Following that, a prison guard took Helen's arm and brought her back to her room. Dejectedly, she fell on her bottom, as though her soul had left her.
