

Baby alliance: helping daddy get a rich mommy chapter 685

Danny was speechless. In the end, he was just the butler of the Murray Family, while Linda was the owner of this family. "Alright." Danny nodded, not daring to continue.

Linda looked at Danny contemptuously and went straight upstairs. Although she was also scared, there was nothing she could do, and she could only hope that Meredith could get rid of Selena this time and spare her worries.

When Danny looked at all the accounts, he felt a headache coming. Although the Murray Family was very rich, they were never wasteful. As their butler, Danny naturally needed to report and manage some things, not to mention the reason he had been working in the Murray Family as a butler all this time was that he owed Jerry a favor.

Most importantly, Danny was an upright person.

That night, Danny came to Jerry's room. Jerry had been sitting by Lindsay's bedside all this while, but Lindsay was still the same. The original decision was to euthanize Lindsay so that she would no longer be in such pain, but Lindsay struggled desperately when this suggestion was brought up. As Jerry seemed to see the reluctance in her eyes, he decided to treat Lindsay properly and not to mention euthanasia anymore. Nevertheless, they had used acupuncture, traditional medicine, modern medicine, rehabilitation equipment, and so on, but all to no avail.

Danny came to the bedside and looked at Jerry, who was in tears. Suddenly, he couldn't bear to disturb him with other matters. But Jerry seemed to understand that something was on Danny's mind. "Danny, just let me know what's wrong. We've been friends for so many years."

Although Danny was only a butler in the Murray Family, and in the eyes of outsiders, a butler was a subordinate, Jerry never considered Danny as a subordinate but an old friend instead.

"Mr. Murray, I don't know if I should tell you about this." Danny still had some difficulties voicing his thoughts because he knew how precious Linda was in Jerry and Lindsay's hearts.

"Go ahead, Danny. You know I prefer you to be more candid."

"It's about Miss Linda's bill." Danny handed the bill to Jerry, who took it over and looked at it. The 30 million that had just been spent was very striking.

Frowning, Jerry did not feel that Linda needed so much money. Girls usually liked to buy clothes and cosmetics, but even if she bought all the biggest international brands, she would not end up spending so much money.

"I think it is necessary for me to tell you about such a large amount because the Murray Family has never had such a large sum of expenses before."

Linda had just walked to the door when she heard Danny's voice, which made her frown.

Just now, Danny had been respectful in front of her, but then he had gone to snatch on her the next moment. I've really underestimated him.

Jerry returned the bill to Danny. "What do you think about this matter?"

"Miss Linda had suffered a lot in the past. Perhaps becoming the daughter of a wealthy family all of a sudden might have..." Danny politely refrained from continuing further.

Jerry nodded. "You're right. Linda has suffered a lot since she was a child. Now that she has suddenly become the daughter of a wealthy family and holds a bank card with an unlimited overdraft, she must have grown a little conceited and could not control her spending."

Danny smiled a little. "Actually, it's not a big deal. I'm sure she just needs a little financial advice, Mr. Murray."

Jerry, however, sighed while shaking his head. "I'm afraid I don't have the time."

He looked at Lindsay worriedly; when he was younger, he was busy working on his career, so it was Lindsay who raised their children alone. Then, because of him, his daughter also left home and died in another place. Now that Lindsay was bedridden and paralyzed, he felt guilty and just wanted to give all his remaining time to her.

"Thank you, Danny, for telling me this. Recently, I've been preparing my will, and originally I wanted to give Linda some shares so that she can live worry-free for the rest of her life. However, it seems now that this is obviously not going to work."
