

BABY MAFIA 1071

Chapter 1071: "Severing An Arm"

The crimson tornado was like a dark cage. Even the open area above the tornado only allowed a bit of light to come through.

Thus, when the spotlight shone over the slit, it was all Charles could see.

A pity, the moment Charles got too close to the slit...

Ainsley hardened one of her new wings– the right-wing.

The wing became as hard as the previous wings, and the tip of the branch was sharper than a sword.

Before Charles could do anything, Ainsley had already used her 3D mapping ability to ensure Charles' position behind the tornado's wall.

Yes, Ainsley did use another ability other than her wings, but that was only an assist.

Ainsley opened and closed her mouth for only a few seconds, and after seeing Charles' precise position behind the tornado's wall...

She didn't hesitate to thrust the sharp tip of her wing onto Charles' body!

Ainsley made sure that she wouldn't attack Charles' heart or whatsoever.

The tip of the wing only attacked Charles' shoulder, but it was enough to give a huge amount of damage...

SWOOSH!

Within seconds, the wing thrust onto the slit, instantly stabbing Charles' left shoulder!

The sharp wing's tip was like a curved blade, plunging deep onto Charles' flesh.

But this wasn't enough.

Before Charles could scream in pain, the blade-like wing already slashed, instantly severing his left arm!

Charles did arm himself with hardened feather armor, but after the wear and tear inside the tornado, how could it still remain tough?

Ainsley's sharp wing easily cut down the entire arm like cutting butter.

SLASH!

Charles was still dizzy from the pain when the pain suddenly intensified...and his arm got separated from his body.

Even worse, the severed arm didn't fall to the ground, but got torn apart brutally inside the tornado's wall.

Fresh red blood splashed everywhere, dying the already crimson tornado even redder.

The blood spurts also dyed the floor red, and the fishy smell of blood instantly filled the entire arena.

The live broadcast camera and the arena's camera faithfully captured the image inside the tornado.

Well, one would wonder how these cameras did it.

But anyway, after they captured the image, the cameras immediately flew outside of the tornado, afraid that they would be torn to pieces too.

The flying cameras themselves already had deep scratches and various 'wounds' despite having good materials to stand up against special abilities.

For a moment, the entire arena was silent. Only the sound of the tornado's whistles and Charles' loud shout could be heard.

"AHHHHH!! My arm! My armmmmmm!"

Everything happened too fast.

Even the 3D protection above the fighters had to slow down the recording they just got, showing the audiences exactly what happened inside the tornado.

When the audience saw a slim blood wing suddenly come through the slit and stabbed Charles' shoulder, everyone held their breath.

Then, the curved tip became like the God of Death's scythe, instantly severing Charles' arm.

But hey, even the severed arm couldn't be saved. The fierce blood tornado instantly gobbled the arm, leaving nothing but blood and flesh.

The image was too sadist and too bloody for some people.

Even when the audience was used to watching this kind of bloody fight, seeing a dismembered body part get torn apart like a piece of paper was too much to handle.

Ainsley's live broadcast also immediately turned on the family-friendly filter, turning most of the bloody scene into a cute cartoon.

Some people who wanted to see the real scene had to manually turn off the family-friendly filter.

The whole arena was full of Charles' painful scream and the smell of blood.

Amidst the bloody scene, a four-year-old baby slowly came out of her crimson cocoon.

The tornado's wall slowly disappeared, and the blood icicles stopped raining upon Charles.

Ainsley gradually emerged from her cocoon.

Unlike Charles, who was bloody from head to toe, and his clothes even changed color, the baby's pink uniform was still as clean as before.

From head to toe, there wasn't even a single splash of blood dirtying her appearance.

Well, there were some blood sprinkles on her skirt and clothes.

There was also a bit of stain on her hair, but it was hard to see this if not for the camera's close-up shot.

Flying with four wings on her back, the baby had an indifferent face as she looked down at Charles, who had already rolled on the floor with his arm missing.

It was as if she had seen something worse and this kind of bloody scene was just an appetizer.

The audience simultaneously gasped in both fear and awe.

They never expected such a small child to be so ruthless.

She looked cute and obedient, but she was more savage and ruthless than anyone.

Indeed. As a mafia boss who often went to war, if Ainsley weren't ruthless, she would have long died on the battlefield.

From a person who had never killed even a weak chicken, Ainsley gradually transformed into a devil.

It didn't mean she would kill people casually, but in a serious fight, for her, it was always a life or death battle.

People called her ruthless, but if she wasn't ruthless, the one with a severed arm would be her instead of Charles.

Ainsley flicked her wings a few times to get rid of the blood splash before slowly descending to the floor.

Her four wings were still spread wide, but they gradually folded on their own behind Ainsley.

Ainsley's descent from the air was extremely graceful, just like a cute angel from heaven.

When her feet touched the arena's floor, her pink skirt even fluttered beautifully.

But no one would dare to underestimate her just because she looked cute and easy to be bullied.

She's too heartless!

Chapter 1072: "The Winner"

This baby, who looked calm, acting as if she never did anything, had just severed a young man's arm without hesitation!

The live broadcast' audiences already swiped the comment barrage frantically.

Some fighting maniacs even sent countless castles, spacecraft and golden gachapon to reward the little anchor.

[Sh*t! Sh*t! That's an awesome fight!]

[Dang! The little anchor is OP!]

[She really defeated Charles with only her wings!]

[Well, she has four wings, though...but it's still wings, right?]

The live broadcast audience was in an uproar, and the on-site audience was no different.

After a brief silence, the audience immediately stood up and cheered for Ainsley's victory.

"Damn— she did it! That kid is so awesome!"

"Did you see her reaction speed? She's too good."

"Actually, you can see whether she's used to being on the battlefield or not. From her walking posture alone, there's almost no opening to attack."

"Yes, yes. It's hard to believe that such a young kid can be so strong...I think she's already above the prodigy teens, right?"

"She should be on par with the prodigy youngsters above 18 years old. Or maybe already comparable with the adult elite ability users."

"I don't know how her family trains her. This is no longer a prodigy, you know?"

"I heard that it's only been a year since she first awakened her ability, but she already awakened so many abilities..."

"Some experts said that kids like this generally won't awaken any more abilities in the future, but their already awakened abilities will be super strong."

"She got time to train hard. Maybe a decade. Imagine what she will be in a decade."

"Maybe she would already reach the highest power realm? She will be able to use the domain for each of her abilities by then."

"Agree, agree."

"Say, will the Winged Guild do something to avenge Charles? After all, no matter how strong this kid is, she can't fight against a whole guild."

"Hush. Don't say that. Didn't you see her first war video? She actually goes against an entire army on her own. Her curse ability is too terrifying!"

"If she used that ability here...Charles would have died in seconds, yes?"

"True."

Amidst the audience's whispers, the stunned commentators and MC slowly regained their senses.

Although the commentators only commented on a few movements in the battle, they weren't completely useless.

At the same time, the MC also realized that it was time to close the battle officially.

Thus, the MC immediately stood up and spoke with his microphone.

"Okay, that's the end of the battle! Let's congratulate Ainsley Sloan for winning against Charles!"

The dumbfounded referee outside of the arena also snapped out of his daze and immediately sounded the whistle, officially ending the fight.

Once the battle was declared done, the medical team immediately rushed into the arena and the arena's barrier also slowly disappeared.

The noise and sound from outside the ring finally entered the battle ring.

At the same time, the Winged Guild members rushed to save Charles, who had already fainted from extreme pain.

"Save Charles! Quick! Quick!"

"Bring him to the hospital! It's still possible to regrow his arm! Quick!"

There were several senior guild members among the 1,000 audience.

They did their best to save the future of their Winged Guild— Charles.

While Charles' side was panicking, Ainsley's people were calm. They slowly walked toward the baby in the ring.

At this moment, Ainsley had already let go of her realism art ability.

Her four crimson wings also disappeared into countless crimson sparkles.

Thankfully, the anti-spirit talisman that Charles used to tie the Godfather had lost its effect and slowly unbound the young spirit.

Zev rushed to see the Godfather while Elliana, Axelle, the three cats, and the two celestials came to check Ainsley's safety.

"Little cub, are you okay? If you're injured, you can ask for medical care too!"

Leah still had a cold face, but a trace of concern slipped past her eyes. The same went for Zach.

The young man scanned Ainsley from head to toe, trying to see any hidden injuries such as bruises or so on.

Ainsley appeared to be uninjured, but she did receive a few small injuries like bruises and such.

She also spent a lot of energy maintaining her realism art ability, and it almost dried up her entire energy core.

"Thank you, everyone. I'll use the energy crystal to replenish my energy first." Ainsley nodded at Leah and Zach before trotting to Elliana and Axelle.

After Ainsley ensured that Elliana and Axelle could protect her, the baby immediately took out several seven-coloured energy crystals and frantically absorbed energy into her body.

For the current Ainsley, using a seven-colored energy crystal the size of her fist was no longer a miracle.

Her current status allowed her to consume this thing, just like drinking tea during tea time.

While Ainsley absorbed some energy from the seven-coloured crystal, Axelle and Elliana also questioned the baby.

"Boss. Okay?"

'M-master...I have several potions for bruises here..."

Axelle immediately took out his handmade potions while Elliana took out a glass of milk from her storage necklace!

Yes. It's a glass of hot milk, ah. The glass was even a cute pink cup with the strawberry pattern.

Ainsley looked as if she was used to this and casually took the milk cup from Elliana's hand.

She also signaled Axelle to give the potions to her. After she drank the milk, she would drink the potions.

The two cats, aside from Code-L, who were still in their cat forms, immediately rubbed their bodies against Ainsley's calf, trying to be her cute little pet.

Oh, hey. They can only act like a spoiled child so that Ainsley can be her usual self again after a bloody fight!

Chapter 1073: "Burst Into Tears"

After all, Ainsley used to be cold-blooded and strange after she ended a fight that involved blood.

Furry cats are needed to restore Ainsley to her usual bubbly and cute self.

Indeed, after the OP cats meowed, rubbed their heads on Ainsley's leg and acted like spoiled children, the baby's aura slowly turned gentler than before.

During the battle, her aura was sharp and cold, just like her teacher, the Godfather.

But after the battle, the baby slowly turned into her cute self that could charm people from miles away.

Zach and Leah saw all of this, and both of them almost cracked their usually cold expressions.

...drinking milk after a bloody fight...and then playing with cats...

One wouldn't associate the current Ainsley with the Ainsley who had just severed a person's arm.

They didn't know that a human cub could be this weird...

After Ainsley calmed down and restored her physique to the best, the baby slumped her shoulders and went to Code-L, who was a few centimeters taller than her.

In front of Code-L in her loli form, Ainsley would always act like a cute little sister.

"Code-L...how is it? How's my battle? Do you have any advice for me?"

As usual, after each battle, either the Godfather or Code-L would analyze her battle and try to improve her next match.

Usually, the Godfather was the one who would do this, but when Ainsley saw the Godfather huddled with Zev behind her...

The baby chose Code-L instead.

Code-L nodded at Ainsley and immediately lectured the baby with her milky voice unique to a child around her age.

"To be honest, you did great. But you wasted too much time on the blood rain and the blood storm. It's actually completely unnecessary."

Blablalabla...

Code-L advised Ainsley for several minutes before casually ruffling the baby's head.

"Anyway, since you can use two skills simultaneously, just take this battle as a progress. If it's not a match, you should end the fight faster, though."

Of course, it would be better if killing was allowed...after all, killing was easier than harming.

At least in Code-L's eyes.

Ainsley listened to Code-L's lecture with all of her might and nodded with a solemn face.

"Okay, I get it. Thank you for the advice, Code-L."

Ainsley was still not qualified to call Code-L with her original name, but it's not a problem.

The two lolis discussed things related to the previous battle with a serious attitude, completely overlooking the adults around them.

Even a certain Graph young master had a blank face as he listened to Ainsley's conversation with Code-L.

'...no wonder the baby is so strong at such a young age. Her teachers are basically psychos...'

No one would bother to analyze their battle after such a thrilling match, right?!

But Ainsley did. She even asked Elliana for the battle video and discussed it with Code-L!

Ainsley had done this for a long time and this kind of attitude was actually the one helping her to have good skills in a real-life battle.

Aaron shook his head at Ainsley's earnest attitude in analyzing her own battle video.

At the same time, the live broadcast audience who were watching the broadcast also expressed their awe and respect for the little baby.

[The anchor is already a prodigy, yet she's also a hard worker. As an ordinary ability user, I'm ashamed that I'm not even as diligent as her!]

[I thought kids around the anchor's age like to play and such...but the anchor is serious about learning...]

[At this point, she doesn't need to attend any school, right? She's already better than some of the teachers!]

[I think so.]

[I wonder which prodigy children can go against the little anchor. I'm waiting for that day to come!]

[By the way, the anchor is still live broadcasting, huh...it's been a few hours already. Maybe almost half a day?]

[But the anchor doesn't even interact with us, ah...so lonely.]

The audience had calmed down from the fabulous fight they watched through the live broadcast, but now, they wanted to interact with Ainsley.

The number of the live broadcast had reached 500,000 people when Ainsley was fighting, and even after the battle ended, the number didn't fluctuate much.

Thus, the comment section flashed so fast that Ainsley almost couldn't see anything from the projection she got.

The baby also had the same thought as the audience and wanted to answer a few questions, but since the barrage scrolled too fast...

The baby smiled wryly and could only pick out a few questions from the audience, who smashed super gifts.

The live broadcast platform highlighted these rich people's comment with various colors, allowing Ainsley to see their comment easily compared to other small comments.

At the same time, these comments were so big that they filled the entire screen.

"Hum. Answering a few questions from all of you...someone asked me how I trained my ability in my daily life."

Ainsley paused before tilting her head, looking innocent in front of the camera.

"The Godfather trained me every day, and Code-L, the sacred beast in my family, also trained me...as for how they trained me...you guys wouldn't want to know."

It's hellish, anyway!

"When was the first time I killed someone...well, it was at the Aretha Battle."

"After the massacre, I had nightmares and psychological problems for a few days."

Ainsley was already calm when she mentioned the past events, but in the audience's eyes, the baby was just trying to be tough.

Thus, no one dared to ask this kind of question again, afraid that the baby would burst into tears!

Chapter 1074: "Going Viral In A Foreign Country"

While Ainsley was interacting with the live broadcast audience, her fifteen-minute battle video against Charles already circulated around the internet.

One of the live broadcast audiences was a huge 'Youtuber' in this world, and the person cut the battle video from the live broadcast he had recorded.

He didn't forget to add subtitles and his own comments to the video, successfully attracting a bunch of viewers.

He even added cool special effects to the video, highlighting Ainsley in the cloud.

This 'Youtuber' was also a big one with a few millions of fans. He's famous for uploading various thrilling battle videos among ability users.

Surprisingly, he also had a special playlist for famous fighter's battle videos on his channel and Ainsley was included among these fighters.

But today's video was a bit different because Ainsley fought against a foreigner and her appearance was also different from usual.

Thus, the YouTuber purposely didn't put Ainsley's name on the title and only regarded her as the blood clan's cub versus a winged person.

In just a few hours, the video almost got a million views, and many internet celebrities also reposted the video from various angles.

Chatty people even brought the topic to forums and other social media platforms, successfully creating a small fire for Ainsley.

By then, Ainsley had stopped her live broadcast and was resting at her hotel, but the internet was still boiling.

[A four-year-old blood clan's cub VS a prodigy winged person– the end result is shocking!]

[The first underage arena fighter in Gasha Country!]

[Is this video fake or real? A toddler beating a young adult to the ground!]

[One of The Gasha Country's Biggest Guild's First Public Humiliation??]

[Getting Rich Overnight After Betting On A Live Broadcast's Anchor!]

[Is there no child-protection law related to live broadcast anchors and such? The world is degrading.]

[The Prodigy of The Century! A mysterious blood clan's cub!]

[The Rise of The Blood Clan Is Near? Will There Be A Huge War Between The Blood Clan and The Celestials?]

[The Blood Clan's Cub Wandering Around A Country With Tons of Celestials. Is This A Conspiracy?]

From a normal battle video to a conspiracy theory, in just a night, Ainsley's name soared one more time.

This time, the majority didn't know that the kid in the video was Ainsley Sloan.

Only some fans knew the truth, but it didn't stop the netizens from digging out the kid's information.

The unexpected 'fire' instantly brought Ainsley close to a million subscribers on her live broadcast channel.

She even got many more followers on her personal social media accounts!

At the same time, the big guilds in Gasha Country were alarmed.

Overnight, they held an online meeting to discuss the phenomena.

"What do you think of this so-called blood clan's cub?"

The Winged Guild's vice chairman looked at the other guild representatives on the screen with a solemn face.

These guilds were all guilds who built their buildings on the Battle Street at Guild Union Zone.

Ainsley's arrival did disturb them one way or another.

The people who reacted the strongest were those from the tamer guilds.

The vice leader of the Beast Tamer Guild in Gasha Country immediately furrowed her eyebrows and scoffed.

"She's not a blood clan's cub. She's a mafia boss from the Godlif country and also the guild founder of that Irregular Tamer Guild. She's a threat to our local guilds!"

The Monster Tamer Guild's vice leader was also agitated.

After all, she got the detailed information about Ainsley's guild and knew that her guild would be the most affected if they allowed Ainsley to build a guild here.

"We have to boycott her. Can't we go to the government and stop her from getting the relevant permission?"

The others were also threatened, mainly because Ainsley was too strong in the video.

Although they didn't know how strong her guild would be, a single strong powerhouse in a guild was enough to threaten these big builds.

Especially when Ainsley was a foreigner.

How dare a foreigner threaten them like this? This is also related to their nationality and such!

The Winged Guild's vice leader grunted and shook his head at the Monster Tamer Guild's vice chairman's advice.

"I have inquired about this. The government is more than happy to strengthen the local ability users, and that kid can provide what the government wants."

After all, she's changing a 'waste' charm ability user into a unique tamer with actual battle strength!

Even if Ainsley was a foreigner, the Gasha Country's government would not oppose her.

If this was any ordinary guild that had existed in Gasha Country before, the government would oppose Ainsley, who was a foreigner.

But her guild was unique and there had never been such a guild in Gasha Country.

For the government, not accepting such a guild in their country was a foolish movement.

What if their rival country actually accepted Ainsley and the baby cultivated many strong tamers from that country?

Those who joined guilds could still join the military or help the country whenever they could.

There were also International Guild Tournament among the same guild type and cross-guild tournament...

If their Gasha Country didn't have the Irregular Tamer Guild branch, they couldn't enjoy any of these events, and their chance to glorify their country would be smashed to dust.

The Gasha Country was a big human country, but their guild branches hadn't been the champion in several international guild tournaments.

Only the Gasha Country's Winged Guild had this privilege because the winged ability users in their country were much more powerful than other winged guilds.

Still, the Winged Guild wasn't such a big guild outside of the Gasha Country.

It was only influential in Gasha Country because of their country's unique traits!

Chapter 1075: "The Gasha Country Guilds' Terrifying Influence"

As such, the government currently needed more guilds that could win in the international cross-guild tournaments.

They also needed champions in the international guild tournament, making one of the guilds in their country become the global headquarters.

Ainsley's guild was actually an opportunity for the government to realize their dream.

They believed that the Irregular Tamer Guild would spread throughout the human continent and as the first guild branch outside of the Godlif country...

Maybe they could win the guild championship in a year or two? Who knows.

Anyway, the government was happy to welcome Ainsley as the guild founder.

Only the local guilds disliked Ainsley's guild because of their conflict of interest conflict.

The surrounding vice leaders sighed at the Winged Guild's vice chairman.

"So, what do we do? If we can't stop the government from issuing a license, do we have to trouble that brat's guild once in a while?"

The big guilds usually used this method to suppress other emerging guilds, especially those guilds with unique ability users.

Although their members weren't a lot, their fighting power as a whole was superb, which was a threat to a battle-focused guild like them.

Thus, for the past decades, they had been suppressing unique guilds one way or another.

This was one of the reasons why the Gasha Country rarely snatched the international cross-guild tournament's championship.

But the government couldn't stop the big guilds because they had branches worldwide, and those small guilds didn't necessarily have a lot of guild branches in other countries.

Although each big guild in a different country also had a sense of rivalry in terms of determining the global headquarters against 'outsiders', they were united.

These big guilds in Gasha Country had used so many tricks to annoy smaller guilds that may threaten their prestige.

But sometimes, because these small guilds united and created a small union within the Guild Union Zone, the big guilds also find it hard to bully the small guilds inside such a circle.

But Ainsley was alone and hadn't even joined any small guilds' circle.

Not to mention that the small guilds' circle wouldn't necessarily want to accept Ainsley, who had a potential to be a big guild.

Ainsley couldn't join the big guilds' circle but the small guilds' circle also had a tendency to reject her.

That baby is really alone.

The surrounding vice leaders all agreed with this tactic.

Anyway, they had bullied countless guilds in the past, especially in such a guild-loving country like the Gasha Country.

"We can send people to create trouble at their guild building. We can also spread rumors to stop the charm ability users from joining that guild."

One of the vice leaders gave a few ideas to the Winged Guild's vice leader.

"We can guide the internet to believe that turning into an irregular tamer has a dangerous side effect or something."

"Yes, yes. We can also put our people in their guild. Just pay some random charm ability users to testify for us."

"But I heard that each guild member has to make a soul oath and can't betray the guild founder or the guild..."

Some vice leaders had a good information network and already inquired about some news from the Godlif Country's guilds.

If the soul oath were involved, it would be way more tricky.

But these leaders were also cunning. How could a soul oath hinder their malicious and jealous hearts?

"Hey, hey, just find a few desperate charm ability users who need money more than their abilities."

"True. Even if they break the soul oath and die or lose their ability, they won't care."

A few vice leaders laughed at their own advice. All of them believed that this is also a good way to smear that emerging guild.

The Winged Guild's vice chairman accepted the idea, and once he agreed, he couldn't help but want to implement it as fast as possible.

"We may not be able to disturb those unique tamers in Godlif Country, but this is the Gasha Country. We can't lose on our own home ground."

The vice-chairman also prepared several tricks to disturb Ainsley's guild, and one of them was to use 'threat'.

"Say. If the guild can't recruit new members, they will stay a small guild forever, right?"

The Winged Guild's vice chairman looked at several vice leaders of guilds that supplied tons of items to ability users such as the Alchemist Guild and so on.

The alchemist guild's vice leader immediately hooked the corner of his lips and nodded.

"Right. Without a lot of strong members, a guild will stay a small guild forever. Why? Do you have any idea how to suppress their potential guild members?"

Of course, the Winged Guild's vice leader had an idea.

"It's like this. We can target charm ability users from ordinary family backgrounds."

The vice chairman paused before tapping the table with a subtle sneer on his face.

"Tell them we will boycott them if they dare to join the Irregular Tamer Guild."

Boycott anyone who joins the Irregular Tamer's guild. They won't be able to use a healer, buy potions, buy weapons, and so on.

This is the negative effect of having a Guild Union Zone. The guilds have too much influence over the ability users in the Gasha Country.

If the Godlif Country's most pitiful people are the ordinary ones without abilities, then the most miserable people in Gasha Country are the ability users with normal family backgrounds.

Organizations in Gasha Country aren't as influential as the guilds, except for government's organizations and those belonging to elite families.

The ability users' only choice was to join guilds or work for influential families as bodyguards, and so on.

Still, it was better to join guilds than influential families!

Chapter 1076: "Jointly Boycotted"

After all, normal noble families in Gasha Country didn't need that many ability users, unlike the Godlif Country's mafia families and other families.

In Gasha Country, employing too many ability users can be seen as a threat to the government.

But because of this, the guilds hold the rein instead of non-guild forces.

In terms of business, the merchant guild is number one.

In terms of potions, weapons, beasts, monsters, and so on, there are the other big guilds.

These big guilds joined hands to monopolize a lot of things in Gasha Country.

But the government also has a lot of say in the guilds, which prevents the guilds from raising their products' price to the sky.

Unfortunately, they can still jointly boycott a certain force or a family who has no alchemists and other unique ability users.

Not to mention that most talented ability users will choose guilds rather than other forces, simply because guilds in Gasha Country are the true rulers.

Guilds in Godlif Country also had higher prestige than normal families, but the mafia families were still keeping an eye on the guilds.

Thus, guilds in Godlif Country couldn't blatantly oppose the mafia families and most of them even joined hands with the mafia families.

After all, the mafias are all maniacs and war-loving people.

However, the guilds in Gasha Country are just like mafia families in Godlif Country.

Once they boycotted or blacklisted a certain force...

Very little force can survive under the guilds' joint blacklist.

The vice-chairman of the Winged Guild wanted to put pressure not only on Ainsley's upcoming guild itself but on those who tried to join Ainsley's guild.

The other guilds' vice leaders simultaneously agreed with the Winged Guild's vice leader.

"That's a good idea! No matter what, a guild needs various items to operate. If we jointly boycott that brat..."

The Merchant Guild's vice leader rubbed her hands excitedly.

Her guild was one of the biggest because, unlike the scattered Merchant Guild in Godlif country, their Gasha Country's Merchant Guild was unified.

All sorts of business had to go through the Merchant Guild, including the Alchemist Guild and other production-type guild's selling products.

In return, the Merchant Guild managed all their marketing strategy and other things, saving the production guild a lot of time to focus on producing good items.

These guilds usually sold their products to Merchant Guild,, and the Merchant Guild was the one selling the products to other ability users or ordinary people.

The production guild could only conduct a private business when it came to auction or private orders.

But mass-produced items were all sold to the Merchant Guild.

This is really unlike the guilds in Godlif Country who could sell their own products, making their guild a huge influence among the other ability users.

In return, the Merchant Guild in Godlif Country was weak and less powerful than ordinary business families.

But the production-type guilds in Gasha Country didn't mind handing over their products to the Merchant Guild because the profit they got was equally huge.

And other ability users still respected them as the ones creating the products.

These guilds also had a delicate relationship with the Merchant Guild.

On the one hand, the Merchant Guild needed these production-type guilds to supply products.

On the other hand, the production-type guilds needed the Merchant Guild to sell their products to get the maximum benefit.

Because of this, the Merchant Guild in Gasha Country held a huge power, maybe comparable to the Billios Family in Godlif Country.

The Merchant Guild's vice leader licked her plump lips as she snickered.

"A newly emerging guild will need a lot of things to complete their building. They will need to buy so many things...and that's when we will strike!"

She didn't believe that Ainsley would buy the things she needed at Godlif Country and transported them all to the Gasha Country.

Such an operation needed the government's permission, and the license involved was enough to delay the guild's development for a few months.

The other vice leaders nodded in satisfaction.

They had already imagined how Ainsley would react to such a large-scale embargo.

Coincidentally, after the battle that afternoon, the next day, Ainsley completed the building purchase.

She spent a few days to get the building's deed in Aaron's name and also received the official guild license from the government.

After almost a week, the baby was finally ready to open the guild.

Now, she only had to decorate the guild and fill the building with the necessary furniture.

However, when the baby and her group went to the local stores and malls to purchase their furniture and other things, no one received them.

The clerk looked at Ainsley's face, confirmed her identity and flatly refused to sell anything.

"I'm sorry. Our store is under the Merchant Guild's influence, and we have blacklisted you."

At first, Ainsley was only a bit taken aback, but after circling the capital city to buy furniture and such but kept getting rejected...

The baby finally smelled the deep conspiracy.

"What is this? How come these stores are so unreasonable?!" Aaron's face flushed red from anger as he stormed out of the mall.

Their group had tried a few stores and malls yet once they were about to pay, the stores received the buyer's information and then immediately rejected all their purchases.

Even Aaron couldn't use his identity to buy furniture for Ainsley.

Wait. Even the whole Graph Family was blacklisted if they wanted to buy anything related to Ainsley's guild.

They could still buy other things but once they buy related items...they were also rejected.

Ainsley even tried to pay other people in the capital city to buy the items for her, but it seemed that she was already under surveillance.

No matter what, Ainsley couldn't buy anything!

Chapter 1077: "Calling Dad"

Ainsley bit her lips and stared at the closest Merchant Guild's gathering place with cold eyes.

"The clerks said the Merchant Guild boycotted us?"

The baby questioned Aaron and Elliana, the two people who knew more about this compared to her.

Aaron was the first to complain.

"Exactly! My dad investigated for me and it seemed that you offended the Merchant Guild and they boycotted you and your entire Irregular Tamer Guild."

The guild hadn't even opened and was still an empty building but so many people had started to block the baby's path.

Ainsley was smart and immediately knew that the Merchant Guild didn't want her to successfully create her guild in Gasha Country.

Although she got the license already...it was useless.

Ainsley took a deep breath and suppressed her tendency to use violence to solve everything.

Hey, after being a mafia boss for more than a year, the baby realized that she tends to be more violent than her previous self.

"Are there any stores or factories that aren't under the Merchant Guild's influence? There must be one or two, right?"

What Ainsley needed wasn't just ordinary furniture but many things that ability users needed.

After all, normal furniture would break easily in the hands of countless ability users.

Making a guild wasn't as easy as making an ordinary organization because their circle was an ability user's circle.

Many things are different from ordinary people's lifestyles and such.

Under Ainsley's cold questioning, Aaron hesitated for a few seconds before shaking his head.

"I don't recommend you to find these loose stores and factories. Their products aren't guaranteed at all, and many are scammers..."

Basically, all the standardized stores, factories and other businesses were under the Merchant Guild.

In a sense, the Merchant Guild basically held the country's economic lifeline...

If not for the government inserting people into the guild and watching over the guild all the time...the guild could easily damage the country's economy.

The Merchant Guild in this country is too terrifying! Maybe even more terrifying than the Billios Family.

After all, such a monopoly was rare. Even the Billios Family couldn't monopoly the entire business circle like the Merchant Guild.

Ainsley had another deep understanding of a guild's influence in the Gasha Country.

No wonder there was even a special zone dedicated to guilds...guilds here are as annoying and dangerous as mafias in Godlif Country!

Ainsley took a deep breath and pursed her lips.

She was already tired after tossing for a few days, and now, she was blocked for such a ridiculous reason.

Can't purchase furniture because the Merchant Guild boycotted it? Then just brought the furniture and other items from Godlif Country.

Ainsley was now a princess of the Billios Family.

She accepted the Billios Family as her second family and had no shame in trying to ask for help.

If she's bullied outside, why can't she go to her family?

Oh, and since the Gasha Country's Merchant Guild insists on blacklisting her...

Ainsley's eyes flashed with a hint of cruelty.

Don't blame her for blacklisting them from Pandora Island and all the inheritance stones and products from that island.

"Big brother. Do we have any business related to the Billios Family in Gasha Country's capital city?"

Ainsley asked Aaron about the Billios Family's connection in Gasha Country.

She knew that the Billios Family here would also choose to obey the Merchant Guild, and she didn't want to bother them.

But hey, there should be portals and such, right?

Ainsley didn't say much, but Aaron, who had visited the Godlif Country and knew a lot about the Billios Family, immediately understood Ainsley's intention.

"Ahhh, you mean the Billios Family's Teleportal Business? They have one in the capital, and the government usually uses it for cross-country business exchange."

Even the Merchant Guild relied on Billios Family's Teleportal because it's just the best among other portals available in the market.

Not to mention that cross-country exchange needed a reliable portal, especially because the distance was way more distant than in the same country.

Because of this, there were many Billios Family's exclusive Teleportal placed in the Gasha Country's capital.

Of course, the portal's operation was in the hands of the Gasha Country's government, but if the Billios Family wanted to use their privilege for something....

As long as their request didn't clash with the country's interest, the Gasha Country's government wouldn't reject the Billios Family's request at all.

After confirming that there were a few Billios Family's Teleportal in Gasha Country's capital city, Ainsley immediately made an international call to Jake, her dad.

Jake wasn't traveling to other non-human continents and was still at the Godlif Country. Thus, the call quickly got connected.

Before Ainsley could even speak, Jake had already bombarded her with questions.

"Hey, hey, dad's little baby is here. Why did you only call now?? And what's with the battle video on the internet? Did someone offend you?"

Jake's tone was slightly teasing, but in fact, he was really worried.

It's just that...knowing Ainsley's real soul was an adult, Jake was afraid to be a 'nosy dad' in Ainsley's eyes.

Ainsley also didn't call Jake before because she was afraid of disturbing Jake's daily life, especially after knowing how busy he was.

Just sending text and such was enough, right? Especially when she was already an adult.

Although Ainsley's body was a child, Ain was too embarrassed to act like a kid again.

If this was before her identity was revealed to Jake, Ainsley had no shame and could continue to act like a spoiled child.

But now, it has become a bit awkward.

Still, the moment Ainsley heard Jake's worried voice over the phone, her heart instantly felt warm.

It's really nice to have such a good dad!

Chapter 1078: "Jake's Assistance"

Ainsley suppressed her excitement and patiently answered Jake's several questions in one go.

"I didn't call you because I thought you were on some random non-human continent, dad...and I'm okay, really."

"About that battle video...there's a situation here..."

Ainsley explained what happened in Gasha Country and why she had to make a call to Jake.

"So...the Merchant Guild blacklisted me and I can't buy anything for the guild's building. I just wonder if you can send some items over, dad?"

Ever since the Sloan Family and the Billios Family got connected through Ainsley and Jake, the two families had helped each other a lot of time.

The Billios Family's people often hang around the Sloan Family's people, and the family members also held parties once a week.

Not to mention that the two families cooperated closely, improving their own family's worth by leaps and bounds.

Now that Ainsley asked her dad, Jake, to send her some items for her guild, Jake immediately agreed.

"It will take three days to prepare all the things you need. The transportation only needs a day with the portal, though."

Jake calculated how long it would take to help Ainsley fill up her guild's building.

"Overall, you have to wait for four days until the goods arrive."

"Four days? That's enough. I can wait. It's not a bother, right?"

"It's not. Dad can send you some workers to help you install all the furniture and other things too."

Ainsley's eyes immediately lit up.

"That will be great, dad. I don't know if I can hire some local employees. The other guilds can mess with me in this regard."

Thus, it would be best if Jake sent his own people to Gasha Country to help Ainsley fill her new guild's building.

"If you count the installation period, we need another three days. You only need to wait for a whole week before you can use your guild's building."

Ainsley listened to Jake's words and nodded casually.

It's just a week, anyway. It's not that long.

She could stay in this country for months, and it was enough to ensure the guild's operation.

"Okay, dad, thank you. A week is fine. I'll be waiting for you! Ah, I'll send you the building's address..."

Ainsley sent the guild building's location, and after Jake received it, the young man couldn't help but raise an eyebrow.

"This is your guild building? The location is good, but there are many local big guilds around. Won't they mess with you?"

When Jake heard that other local big guilds wanted to hinder Ainsley's plan, he had guessed this a long time ago.

When he first expanded his business outside of the country, so many businessmen in other countries played tricks on him.

All so that he couldn't continue his business in other countries.

The same went for foreign business people who wanted to develop in Godlif Country.

Their Billios Family also suppressed the foreigners so that they couldn't beat the local business.

Now that Ainsley wanted to expand her guild to other countries...the same thing would happen all over again.

But guilds usually involved fighting using abilities, unlike in the business field where they used other strategies except for physical violence.

Physical violence was only done in secret and not openly, but a guild dispute could openly involve physical violence.

Hearing Jake's concerned question, Ainsley let out a sigh as she complained a bit to Jake.

"Actually, the reason why I fought Charles in the video is because of the guild building I just purchased..."

"And yes, dad. So many big guilds here are alarmed. Maybe that's why the Merchant Guild starts to move and block me everywhere."

Jake listened to Ainsley's story carefully and could imagine what happened to his baby girl.

Although he wanted to help, he believed that Ainsley would want to solve the problems on her own.

"Okay, okay, just pay attention to some tricks that may endanger you," Jake tried to console Ainsley as he gave her some advice.

"Aside from that, as long as you abide by the law, not even the government can do anything to you."

Of course, the big guilds could play tricks however they wanted, but he believed Ainsley wouldn't back down.

"Just keep your life in battles, and don't get injured."

That's the most important thing!

Ainsley grinned at Jake's words and subconsciously nodded even when her dad couldn't see her.

"Okay, okay, I'll be careful. If it's about fighting, I'm confident."

Anyway, she had fought countless people in war and even fought too many enemies independently.

She didn't necessarily fear these big guilds, unless they had unique ability users that could threaten her life or her abilities.

Plus, with the three sacred beasts here, the guild's safety was guaranteed.

"Okay, dad, thank you for your help. I'll call you often...mmm, mmm. Don't sleep too late, dad...yeah, yeah. Okay. Bye~ "

Ainsley chatted a bit with Jake for close to an hour before ending the phone call.

The moment Ainsley cut off the call, the baby sighed once more, and she looked even more childish than before.

It's really nice to have someone to depend on...

But hey, she really had to face all of this alone. After all, in the end, she also had many people that she wanted to protect.

Ainsley sorted out her emotions after not seeing Jake for close to a week.

After she was sure that she was calm, the baby blinked her reddened eyes and looked at Aaron, who was waiting for her story.

Aaron saw Ainsley stopped talking to the person behind the call and the young man immediately asked cautiously.

"How is it, guild founder?"

Did you solve the problem?

Chapter 1079: "Dirty Tricks"

Ainsley nodded at Aaron with a confident smile on her face.

Her previously gloomy face was gone, replaced with a sweet smile that she used to have when she was acting like a spoiled child.

"It's okay. I called my dad and he promised me to help with the furniture and other installations. We only have to wait for a week."

During this one week, it's better to tighten the guild's security and finish other necessary administrations.

"Oh, right. We also have to post on social media about our guild's opening day. Let's say two weeks from today?"

Ainsley had never held such an opening party for her guild when she was in Godlif Country, but she felt that she needed this when she was in Gasha Country.

Anyway, the opening banquet could help her announce her guild's existence to Gasha Country's people, and it was also a silent warning to the other big guilds.

For this, Ainsley needed an influential family to host the banquet so that they could invite many families and their ability user children.

Preferably those who had charm abilities. That way, she could abduct them to join the guild right away.

As for which family could host the banquet...

Ainsley blinked her eyes as she looked at Aaron, the third young master of the Graph Family.

Hey, there's a candidate here!

"Aaron. Can I ask you and your family to handle the opening banquet for me and the guild?"

Ainsley politely asked Aaron for his family and his help in hosting the opening banquet.

Well, the banquet was just camouflage to recruit members from influential families secretly.

If there were people from influential families joining the guild, those families would invest in their Irregular Tamer Guild one way or another.

All for their kids!

Who wouldn't want their kids to have relatively useful ability when all their lives they only had the 'useless' and 'lowly' charm ability?

Even those who didn't particularly like their children would consider tossing their children to the guild just to bring more benefit to their family.

Aaron was already a member of the Irregular Tamer Guild.

And...deep down Ainsley had chosen Aaron to be the guild leader but she also needed a tougher vice leader to assist Aaron.

Thus, asking Aaron and the Graph Family was a secret trick to pave the way for Aaron to be the Gasha Country branch's guild leader.

How could Aaron not catch what Ainsley meant by giving over such an important task to him and his family?

The young man's eyes instantly lit up, and even his face flushed red from excitement.

"Ah, ah, don't worry, guild founder. It's my honor to be able to help you! My family will also be glad to have this opportunity!"

The Graph family did have a lot of connections with influential families and they even created a club for charm ability users.

Their family could invite all the club's members to attend the opening banquet, and Ainsley could reap all these charm ability users to be her guild members!

Ainsley was extremely satisfied with Aaron's response. The baby patted Aaron's hand and nodded in approval.

"Okay, okay, I'll leave it to you. I also need you to spread the news about the guild members' registration after the opening banquet."

With the Graph Family's influence, she could inform tons of people in Gasha Country about her new guild as soon as possible.

Well, the internet was also an option.

After arranging things, the group went back to the hotel and didn't care much about the Merchant Guild making troubles for them.

But the Merchant Guild members who knew the news immediately reported it to the vice leader.

"Vice leader, that brat called someone, and it's very likely she's asking for help from abroad."

The Merchant Guild's vice leader had already expected Ainsley to call for help from her native country, the Godlif Country.

From the information they had collected, this brat actually became the Billios Family's adoptive daughter.

Her background is quite impressive, especially in terms of business.

The Merchant Guild in Gasha Country also knew about the Billios Family because their family business in Gasha Country could even rival their Merchant Guild.

Usually, their Merchant Guild would use suppression and threat against foreigners or business rivals outside of the guild's circle.

But the Billios Family was a tough nut to crack to the point where they had to lower their heads and seek cooperation with the Billios Family instead of threatening them.

The Merchant Guild knew all of this but still insisted on blacklisting Ainsley.

"It's okay. Let her bring her own furniture and other items from her country. In the end, she still needs to purchase things locally for daily consumption."

The vice leader snickered as he signaled his secretary to implement the next strategy.

"Just watch. I'll make her unable to live well in our capital city, especially in the Guild Union Zone."

After the vice leader asked the secretary to launch their attack, the Merchant Guild officially targeted Ainsley.

From big things like rejecting the group's entry to any stores or mall to small things like sending thugs to the guild building itself.

"Guild founder, those people come again. They have been lingering around our guild building, chasing away anyone who wants to get close..."

Aaron looked at their empty building from across their hotel and sighed.

No matter what, many elite forces in Gasha Country had heard about the Irregular Tamer Guild wanting to expand to their country.

Many forces were interested in investing in this guild, and they usually visited the empty guild building because Ainsley had set up a temporary office there.

But these thugs who came from nowhere scared people away to the point of scaring the investors too!

Chapter 1080: "The Big Guilds' Threats"

Ainsley and the others usually waited inside the guild building, but after the third day, they stayed in their hotel instead.

And indeed. The thugs were still there to scare away people.

"Go, go! This area is restricted!"

"The building's owner owes our boss a bunch of money. We will squat here until we get the money."

"Yooo. We are from the social protection organisation. The new building's owner hasn't come to see us yet."

"Yes, yes. We are waiting to see her here!"

The thugs used various reasons to chase away the people who wanted to step into the building.

The investors also saw the thugs having quite decent strength, and they had no choice but to sneak away.

After all, the thugs threatened some stubborn visitors to fight in the arena if they didn't want to leave.

Since this can be counted as a problem between the two party, the only way to solve it was to go to the arena.

But the visitors knew how cruel the arena was.

No one would be foolish enough to fight these thugs so that they could visit the building.

Some visitors directly gave up, and smarter ones tried to find Ainsley's phone number to contact her.

Although they couldn't visit Ainsley's guild building now, they could still communicate with the baby.

Some thugs squatted in front of the building to chase away people and some even came in the name of social protection organization.

They wanted to ask for a protection fee!

Ainsley squinted her eyes as she glanced at the thugs displayed on her 3D map.

If Aaron could see the thugs using technologies, Ainsley could see them using her 3D mapping ability.

The small hotel wasn't far from the guild building, and many travelers liked to stay in this hotel.

Their group actually changed hotels to stay closer to the guild and also because other hotels rejected them.

Only the hotels under the Graph Family's business didn't blacklist their group.

Hearing Aaron's complaints, Ainsley just sneered coldly.

"It's okay, don't mind them. After my dad's people arrive, they won't be able to linger around for too long."

It's not that Ainsley didn't want to fight the thugs.

It's just the guild union zone's rule that prohibited fighting outside of the arena.

But Ainsley was too lazy to read these thugs to fight with her in the arena.

These thugs didn't fight anyone and only scared people with their scary appearances and bloody aura.

Ainsley had no reason to fight them or chase them away, unless she used the Godfather's domination ability or her charm ability...

However, Ainsley kept her charm ability a secret from the spies around her.

Yes. The big guilds sent spies to monitor her every movement!

Although there were many battle videos of her using her charm ability on the internet, it was different from witnessing it with their own eyes.

Thus, Ainsley ignored those thugs and stayed in the hotel for days, not even visiting scenic tourism spots and such.

Anyway, so many stores and malls rejected her and her people from even stepping into the building.

Ainsley was even blocklisted from any online shopping platforms and apps in Gasha Country.

From the convenient online taxis app to other service-type apps...

It was already a good thing that the Internet didn't keep her away.

The Merchant Guild wasn't the one in charge of the Gasha Country's internet world, and Ainsley was glad to know this.

"It's okay, Aaron." Ainsley patted Aaron's palm again as she sipped her cold milk on such a hot day.

"These guilds can only use such petty tricks because they can't do anything else."

Since fighting outside of the arena is forbidden, even the big guilds can't do anything to Ainsley and the guild building.

They can only use tricks such as throwing garbage in front of the guild's door, throwing monsters and beasts' carcasses to scare people, etc.

"Once we have a complete guild with its own security system, these tricks can't bother us."

Ainsley was rarely patient, and even silently enjoyed the big guilds' foolish tricks.

Aside from blacklisting her from all kinds of business, what else could they do?

Jake would provide all the things she needed for her guild, including staff and other personnel.

Axelle was also here to provide emergency potions and such.

As for the guild app...Ainsley had successfully registered the app in Gasha Country, and despite the one-star spam review, she wasn't affected.

The guild would open for business sooner or later, anyway.

But what Ainsley didn't know is that...the big guilds started to coerce and threaten charm ability users who knew about the Irregular Tamer Guild's branch in Gasha Country.

The big guilds started with the people in the capital city, and for the past three days, almost all charm ability users in the capital city knew about the Irregular Tamer Guild's existence.

But they couldn't do anything about it. Even when they thought of joining the guild to change their life, the people sent by the big guilds made them scared to death.

The Merchant Guild and other guilds even announced in secret that those who joined the Irregular Tamer Guild when it opened would be blacklisted as well.

They used Ainsley and her little group as an example to scare the potential guild members.

The people sent by the big guilds showed the video of Ainsley and her people when they got rejected recently.

"Look at them. They can't even buy snacks in convenience stores and can only eat at small restaurants with poor quality."

"Do you know that many ability user schools and academies in our country have connections with us, the big guilds?"

"We can also ban you and your children from ever entering these schools and academies!"
