

BABY MAFIA 1081

Chapter 1081: "Lack of Potential Members"

"See those hospitals for ability users? The Healer Guild owns them and they can also blacklist you if you join the Irregular Tamer guild."

"It's really not worth it to join such a small and broken guild just to offend many other big guilds, right?"

Because of the warning, many charm ability users who came from an ordinary family shrink in the face of the big guilds' threats.

They didn't dare to mention joining the Irregular Tamer Guild, no matter how attractive the temptation was.

Even the small guilds were afraid of helping Ainsley and her upcoming Irregular Tamer Guild.

The small guilds' union was afraid of offending the big guilds' union for an unworthy reason!

Thus, the Irregular Tamer Guild was really alone.

The good news was...the big guilds could threaten ability users without good family backgrounds, but they weren't fools to threaten those with good backgrounds.

For the past three days, Aaron worked hard to use his family connection to secretly spread the news about the Irregular Tamer Guild's opening in Gasha Country.

He was also a member of the Charm Club, and that club housed almost all charm ability users in the capital city— limited to those with good family backgrounds.

Of course, there were other smaller clubs full of charm ability users from ordinary families, but because the big guilds already threatened them...

Aaron didn't bother to persuade these people again.

He focused on gathering potential guild members from the upper circle, and in just three days, he managed to gather 200 people!

There were really a lot of charm ability users among ability users, and the upper circle wasn't an exception.

Most of these ability users from a good family background didn't need to rely on their ability to contribute to their family, but some still joined the entertainment industry.

Thus, among the 200 potential guild members that Aaron collected, there were as many as 30 people with high charm ability—

All because they usually used their ability in the entertainment industry.

Ainsley read the list of the potential guild members along with their personal information and nodded in satisfaction.

Unlike in Godlif Country where the weak charm ability users had to wait for a while to strengthen their ability to join the guild, the Gasha guild branch had a special privilege.

Ainsley needed as many members as possible, so she didn't mind accepting weak charm ability users either.

Anyway, the guild development in Gasha Country would be far harsher and more difficult than the one in Godlif Country.

Accepting as many as she could should be the best for now.

Wait until it was as popular as the one in Godlif Country— only then they could pick up good ones among those who wanted to join the guild.

Right now, the guild was desperate and urgently needed new guild members.

They only had 2 weeks to gather potential guild members to officially build the guild in Gasha Country.

"What's a guild's minimum member requirement in a month? I forgot." Ainsley nudged Aaron, who was still watching the thugs with his telescope.

Hearing Ainsley's question, Aaron immediately answered without looking away from his beloved telescope.

"I think about 300 members? We must have 300 official members in a month to be able to continue running the guild."

Otherwise, the government could revoke the license they had given to Ainsley, and the guild would be disbanded.

Even small guilds had at least 300 members. If there were too few members, they would be demoted to clubs instead of guilds.

Ainsley looked at the 200-ish potential members on the list and couldn't help but frown.

They still lacked 100-ish people.

"What about ability users outside of your upper circle? Is there any news?"

They also had spread the news from mouth-to-mouth over the past three days.

There should be many ability users interested in joining their guild.

But they weren't recorded in the list.

Maybe Aaron didn't make a list yet or something?

But this time, Aaron's body stiffened, and he even slowly looked away from his telescope.

Then, the young man gritted his teeth as he ruffled his afro hair.

"About this...I also don't know what's going on, but there is almost no one from the other circles who contacts me..."

Either they weren't interested, or they were interested but forgot to contact Aaron to include them in the pre-registration list.

"I think I have a lot of connections, and I have spread the news throughout the capital city."

Aaron let out a sigh, not understanding what happened after spreading the news.

"Although our guild hasn't announced this over the Internet...but there should be some responses already...."

Yet, in fact, there were only a few people outside of the upper circle who contacted Aaron and his family.

The number was so pitiful compared to the list of charm ability users throughout the capital city.

"There are close to 1,000 or 2,000 charm ability users in the capital city alone who aren't included in the upper circle."

Aaron played with his fingers as he glanced at Ainsley briefly, not daring to look at her for too long.

"But there are only less than 30 people who contacted my family and me...."

Just what's going on? Three days should be enough for them to think about whether they want to join the upcoming Irregular Tamer Guild or not.

Ainsley furrowed her eyebrows and started to think of this strange phenomenon.

"Maybe they don't believe that I have such a skill that can let them become irregular tamers?"

Aaron immediately denied this guess.

"That can't be. When I spread the news, I also gave them evidence that this isn't a scam. Many of them already look interested!"

Chapter 1082: "Grandma Is Here"

Despite Aaron's effort, after three days, only a few people contacted Aaron and his family to get on the pre-registration list.

This is really strange.

"Can you investigate what's going on? Somehow, I have bad feelings about this matter..."

Ainsley wanted to focus on arranging her new guild because today, Jake's people would arrive.

But she also couldn't cast aside the matter with the potential guild members. The guild members are the core and the soul of the guild.

If she didn't have many capable ones, the guild development in Gasha Country would be too slow.

"Yes. I'll ask my family to investigate the reason why those people don't come to register." Aaron quietly sighed in relief as he reassured Ainsley.

Anyway, all of them had become a bit sensitive and emotional because of the big guilds' pressure on them.

If this case is also related to the big guilds...

Aaron didn't dare to think what would happen to those big guilds.

He still remembered what Ainsley did in Godlif Country toward many families and branch guilds.

His informant told him all sorts of things Ainsley had done, and it was really illegal when transferred to Gasha Country.

Please, please...don't let the little baby choose the violence path!

That afternoon, Jake's people arrived at the building, and Ainsley's group immediately went to welcome them.

There were close to fifty people coming with loads of trucks, almost blocking the whole street.

Such an eye-catching move immediately attracted the spies' attention. One by one, they reported to the big guilds.

[That brat got some reinforcement!]

The spies took a picture of those trucks full of furniture and items and then sent the pictures to their bosses.

Actually, Jake could stuff all the furniture and items into a few huge spatial storage, but he purposely came with such a grand occasion to show his support for Ainsley.

So what if Ainsley couldn't buy furniture in Gasha Country's capital because the guilds blacklisted her?

In the end, there was still the Billios family behind Ainsley!

When the crowd came to the building, the thugs also knew when to retreat.

They didn't know these people at all but looking at so many strong ability users among the crowd...

The thugs were smart enough to secretly leave the area, afraid of bumping into 'a hard rock'.

They could bully the weak, but in front of the strong, they also knew when to surrender.

Ainsley didn't care about those thugs and immediately went to find the leader of this crowd.

There were so many workers and ability users sent here...Jake must have sent some of them for the guild's security measures.

She really had to meet the leader of this crowd and thank them on behalf of Jake, who sent them here.

To Ainsley's surprise, the leader of the crowd wasn't a burly person like the rest of the people in the crowd.

When Ainsley first saw the leader, the baby almost tripped and fell.

The person in front of her looked eight points to ten points similar to Jake, her adoptive dad.

But this one is a female.

And it's someone whom Ainsley had met once in the Sloan Family's first auction— Jake's mom.

Jacqueline is here!

Jacqueline saw Ainsley, who almost tripped on a flat ground and couldn't help but laugh.

"Hey, hey, are you that surprised?" The young mom hurriedly lifted Ainsley and hugged her just like hugging her own granddaughter.

"We haven't met for a long time...how come you're still so tiny, little baby?"

Jake's mom patted Ainsley's head as she started to act all familiar in front of the cute baby.

It really has been a long time since they last met because Jake's mom didn't attend the welcoming banquet weeks ago.

Back then, Jake's mom was still on the non-human race's continent, and she could only congratulate Ainsley through a video call.

It's been almost more than a year since the two people met each other face-to-face.

Now that Jake has become Ainsley's dad...Jake's mom automatically became Ainsley's grandma!

Jacqueline should have known about Ainsley being a transmigrator, but she still treated Ainsley like usual.

Ainsley faced Jacqueline's strong 'offense' and couldn't help but blush.

"G-gwandma..."

The baby subconsciously used her cute baby language although she almost never used it lately.

But Jake's mom immediately blocked the baby's mouth.

"Hey, hey! Don't call me grandma. I'm still young. Just call me auntie or something...grandma sounds too old."

But it's really a good thing to have a granddaughter! Heheheh.

Jake's mom grinned as she looked at the baby in her embrace...

The more she looked at Ainsley in her disguise, the more satisfied she felt.

Yooo~ Ainsley with this appearance really looked like Jake's daughter!

Ainsley pursed her lips and quietly called out to Jacqueline. "H-hello, auntwie..."

There we go. Another baby language. Somehow, in front of Jake's mom, Ainsley subconsciously tried to be cute...

Jake's mom was a mind-reader and could see Ainsley's thoughts at a glance, but she didn't mention it at all.

If she scared her cute granddaughter...that wouldn't be worth it.

"Okay, okay, enough with the greetings. Your grandma— I mean, your auntie is here to help you decorate your guild building!"

Jacqueline changed the discussion's topic as she strode into the building itself.

She had just returned a week ago and already rushed to Gasha Country a few days ago because of Jake's request.

That silly son asked her to accompany his daughter, afraid that his daughter would suffer grievance and injustice abroad.

What a protective daddy.

Ainsley heard what Jacqueline said and was a bit taken aback for the first time.

She almost forgot about Aaron, Elliana and the others behind her.

Jacqueline is here to help her new guild??

Chapter 1083: "Jacqueline's Advice"

"Eh, you're here to help mwe decowate the building, auntwie? I thought you have some business to do..."

It was strange to ask for the current Billios Family's matriarch to help her decorate the guild building!

Jake's mom could see Ainsley's doubt at a glance and the woman immediately snickered.

"Your dad asked me to accompany you during your stay in Gasha Country. I might as well help you with decorating the building."

Anyway, she also had a good aesthetic view and could definitely turn the empty building into a great guild building.

"Oh, right, little baby. I heard that the big guilds around here suppress you?"

Jacqueline signaled the staff behind her to unload the furniture and the items into the building as she brought Ainsley to the corner of the first floor's lobby.

The woman whispered to Ainsley's ears, acting all secretive. "I heard they also boycotted you!"

Ainsley could only smile wryly at Jake's mom while hugging the woman's neck.

"It's true, auntwie. I don't know why. The big guilds boycotted me and make some small troubles...they must be jealous of me."

Jacqueline nodded with eyes full of disgust towards those big guilds.

"This is normal. When the Billios Family first expanded the business to Gasha Country, the locals suppressed us to death."

If not for their Teleportal winning the government's favor and the big guilds' favor, their business would develop as slow as a sloth!

"The guilds' influence on Gasha Country is huge. It will be hard if they want to continue blocking your party."

Jacqueline shook her head and sighed.

"Do you have any plan to stop the big guilds' suppression? Your Irregular Tamer Guild is a threat for the tamer guilds, after all."

And the tamers were included in the big guilds' alliance.

As long as the Irregular Tamer Guild still 'robbed' the tamers' business, there would be no end to this matter.

But generally speaking, only the Monster Tamer Guild would be threatened.

Anyway, they couldn't sell their taming service like the beast tamers...so honestly, there was no conflict of interest between their guild and Ainsley's guild.

Ainsley shook her head at Jacqueline's words. "For now, I have no idea. But if we can solve this through the battle arena...that will be good."

Ainsley is still confident of her own ability. It's not that she's arrogant, but it's really faster to solve the problem through the arena.

The question is...will the big guilds want to solve the conflict through the battle arena?

If they insisted on bullying their guild and their guild asked the big guilds to fight..

The big guilds didn't necessarily have to obey their wishes and fight in the ring.

Unless Ainsley went to the big guilds and challenged them head-on or something.

After Jacqueline heard Ainsley's answer related to the big guilds' suppression, the woman smiled dotingly.

Okay, her granddaughter can do anything, and the Billios Family will always back her up.

Anyway, the Sloan Family is also developing extremely fast because of Pandora Island.

Maybe next year, the Sloan Family will already become as strong as the Walter Family in the mafia society and can be even better.

Right now, the Sloan Family only lacks experts of their own.

In regards to business and other things, the Sloan Family actually already left Walter Family behind.

As for cultivating experts...the Sloan Family recruited many wandering experts this year, and their Irregular Tamer Guild is also a kind of military force.

Soon, even the Walter and Aretha Family will not dare to breathe loudly around the Sloan Family.

Jacqueline recalled how many years it took the Billios Family to reach their current height and how many years it took the Sloan Family to their current position—

The Sloan Family's foundation was actually good because they used to be a part of the 7 sacred families.

Thus, after the family head changed to a capable one like Ainsley, they soared faster than ever. In no time, they could reclaim their lost throne.

Not to mention that Ainsley's luck was really defying heaven.

With Pandora Island and the inheritance stone in her hands, the Sloan Family would become a giant family sooner or later.

The Irregular Tamer Guild was a guild under such a powerful force.

Even if they were now in a foreign country with almost no backing, Jacqueline believed that Ainsley and her guild could turn the tide in no time.

"Okay, okay. It doesn't matter if you don't have any plans for now. You can focus on recruiting members and professional ability users."

Jacqueline sincerely gave Ainsley some advice in terms of leading an organization and managing it.

After all, the baby wasn't experienced in this field, much less a business field.

"If you can recruit a lot of carpenters and other producer-type ability users to join your guild as employees, you won't need to fear the big guilds' oppression."

They currently had Axelle as the alchemist, but since Axelle wouldn't stay in the Gasha Country forever, they also had to hire a lot of capable alchemists.

The most important thing was— they must not be under the Alchemist Guild or any guild related to the big guilds in Gasha Country.

"You have the rare inheritance stone in your hands. I doubt a lot of people can resist the temptation."

Jacqueline grinned as she rubbed Ainsley's head again.

As someone who was once the family head of the Billios Family before Jake took over, Jacqueline knew a lot of things that Ainsley didn't know.

Her vision was unique, and she was really powerful in this field.

Ainsley was confused with a lot of things related to the guild before this, but once Jacqueline's words fell onto her ears...

The baby's eyes instantly lit up.

Yeah! The inheritance stone!

Chapter 1084: "A Handy Bait"

"The inheritance stone!" The baby exclaimed with eyes full of joy.

How could she forget such a handy bait?!

At first, Ainsley was still worried about hiring experts to complete the guild in Gasha Country.

She never needed so many experts in her country because she had a lot of relationships with various guilds and she didn't need to hire extra employees for her guild.

But in Gasha Country, the big guilds blocked her everywhere and she really needed a lot of experts to work for the Irregular Tamer Guild.

Starting from a carpenter, a group of workers, a blacksmith, alchemists, healers, special hackers, doctors, etc.

After all, her guild was really isolated here, and so many things required other ability users aside from a mere charm ability user who became a tamer.

Still, who would want to work for her if the big guilds were there to suppress her? Many people wouldn't dare to provoke the big builds.

However, Jacqueline's idea really paved a way in Ainsley's mind.

She could use the inheritance stone as a bargaining chip!

There will be people brave enough to oppose the big guilds to work for her because of these stones!

"Hum. Use the inheritance stone as a bargaining chip, and you can offer it to influential families who really need the inheritance stone, "

Jacqueline didn't forget to guide Ainsley to find her target consumer.

After all, not all people really needed an inheritance stone.

At most, others would want the stone to trade it with those who needed the stone at a high price.

Pandora Island really produced a lot of inheritance stones, but the T  ssera Alliance restricted the number of stones that could be circulated in the market.

Thus, the stone is still a rarity that many people want to get.

It also becomes a bargaining chip to make a deal with various forces, further expanding the Sloan Family's networks.

But this is limited to the Godlif Country.

A lot of foreign human countries can't contact Ainsley that easily, and the same goes for the Gasha Country.

Tbs Gasha Country's government can contact the Sloan Family and already have a subtle relationship with them, but the other forces in the country are still in the dark.

The top tiers knew about the inheritance stone but couldn't get it while the lower tiers didn't know that such a stone existed.

After all, the forces in Godlif Country didn't want to have too many rivals when fighting for the inheritance stone.

Thus, the news related to the inheritance stones are strictly controlled by top-tier forces in each country and race.

Only top-tier forces know about the news, and Ainsley also didn't mind keeping the inheritance stone's existence a secret from the lower tier forces.

Anyway, what she wanted to target is the top-tier forces who have many employees.

They can send their employees to work for the Irregular Tamer Guild in exchange for inheritance stones.

The employees will also get a few more benefits such as a free contract, low-level monster from the guild, and so on.

It's easy to have a contract beast, as long as the money is there. But it's almost impossible to have a contracted monster without being a tamer.

There has always been a debate about monsters and beasts, discussing which one is stronger.

But in the end, if the ability users can get both beasts and monsters as their contracted companions, who wouldn't want that?

Ainsley was sure that the transferred employees would be happy. If they didn't need monsters, the guild could also give them what they wanted.

This way, Ainsley could openly poach the employees from the top-tier forces while creating a friendship with the forces themselves.

After Jacqueline reminded Ainsley, the baby immediately called Elliana and asked her to contact the top-tier forces.

"Tell them that they can get one inheritance stone of their choice. We can meet here in this building to discuss the details."

Anyway, some potential members recorded in the pre-registration list are also from top-tier forces—either illegitimate children or distant relatives.

There are only less than five people from top-tier forces who turn out to be a charm ability user.

After all, genes also play a role in ability users' awakened ability. Basically, not many top-tier people will marry a charm ability user except for true love.

Elliana listened to Ainsley's arrangement and immediately nodded.

The woman was still as introverted as usual, but she had already turned into a capable secretary in the past year.

"Roger, boss." Elliana saluted Ainsley before going to the corner and playing with her phone.

In the past year, Elliana's phone already recorded countless important people's contacts, including those whom Ainsley never contacted or met before.

It only took Elliana less than ten minutes to contact the person in charge of external communication within the top-tier forces.

Almost all of them expressed a positive attitude toward Elliana and promised to tell their boss about the offer.

That's an inheritance stone, ah!

They knew that their bosses had been trying to contact the Sloan Family but the forces in Godlif Country played tricks to block them.

If the Sloan Family didn't take initiatives to contact them, they could only remain passive.

Now that the chance was here...their bosses would be excited for sure!

Regarding inheritance stones, while the top-tier forces in Gasha Country were in uproar, the big guilds knew nothing about it.

After all, for a guild, an inheritance stone wasn't a blessing but a curse instead.

Who would want to leave their ability to their successor when they weren't even related by blood?

They weren't even in a master and disciple relationship.

Even if there were some cases like this, the master still wanted to be an ability user and wouldn't want to use the inheritance stone to give away their ability to their disciple.

Thus, although the big guilds would want the inheritance stones for its rarity value and its bargaining chip attribute, they weren't that obsessed.

The big guilds themselves as a whole weren't that obsessed, but it didn't mean the members didn't care.

They still care a lot!

Chapter 1085: "Ready To Accept New Guild Members"

Some elders in the guild also had their own family despite joining the guild.

If they didn't leave their ability to a fellow guild member, they could still leave their ability to a family member, right?

Unfortunately, in Gasha Country, guilds controlled influential families which made these families send their family members to join big guilds.

On the contrary, guilds in Godlif Country relied on influential families as backers and had a win-win relationship, not as controlling with the Gasha Country's guilds.

Thus, even the guild members in Gasha Country's guilds knew nothing about the inheritance stone.

While Elliana was contacting the top-tier families in Gasha Country, Jacqueline and her people started to decorate the guild's lobby, the first floor.

The theme Ainsley wanted to apply to her guild building in Gasha Country was the concept of 'a kingdom above clouds, heavenly place and crystal-like tower'.

Thus, the furniture and items placed in the lobby were either made of crystals or had heaven-like features such as clouds, holy items, and so on.

The building would actually look closer to a priest's temple but way grander and majestic, unlike the simple priests' temple.

Ainsley estimated that the team would finish decorating the entire building within three days if they worked for more than twelve hours a day.

But to her surprise, the employees Jacqueline brought with her weren't ordinary workers.

All of them were ability users with specialties in arranging furniture, installing various technologies, decorating buildings, and so on.

In just a day, they managed to transform three floors in one go.

By now, the building's lobby, the staff dorm and the training ground were all ready to use.

They could start accepting members right away!

Ainsley was pleasantly surprised. This speed was really unbelievable, and their work's result was also top-notch.

The Billios Family was really dependable in various fields.

"How is it, little baby? This team is one of our Billios Family's private teams. We cultivate these ability users to take care of our company buildings."

Jacqueline went to find Ainsley in the lobby and immediately sat on the couch prepared for guests.

The lobby had many waiting areas, couches, sofas, coffee tables, and countless registration desks.

There were as many as eight registration desks with four booths for each desk to better facilitate the upcoming new members.

Half of these desks and booths also functioned as a mission board for outsiders to place an order on the guild members.

The guild members could also do missions through this mission board desk.

Ainsley looked around the heaven-like lobby and had to nod in satisfaction at Jacqueline's words.

"Auntwie, your team is really powerful!"

Ainsley didn't expect the Billios Family to cultivate a group of ability users like this just to decorate buildings.

But considering how many companies the Billios Family's corporation had opened in the past hundred of years...

Such a team was really needed.

Not to mention that the Billios Family even opened a small company full of ability users with this kind of daily life skill.

These ability users would run around the city and even the country to decorate various buildings, moving furniture and such.

The Billios Family even had a cleaner company under their wings!

No wonder the Billios Family was such a big merchant family.

Their business had expanded to all kinds of fields, penetrating into many people's lives, including ordinary people.

Even useless ability users could still live well as long as the Billios Family's business flourished since this family provided them with workloads.

Jacqueline patted Ainsley's head and didn't hide her pride for her Billios Family at all.

"Hehehe, this is normal. We need so many teams like this because we also open so many businesses with countless buildings."

And the team that Jacqueline brought with her for Ainsley was in the top three of the whole company.

"Anyway, we can finish the whole workload in three days, but you can start to accept members now."

They had settled the guild members' dorm and the staff dorm as well, so ability users with no home and no family or those who came from afar could live in the guild building.

"Hum. I have 200-ish people on the list, and I'll immediately contact them to register as soon as possible."

Ainsley nodded at Jacqueline, still in disbelief that she could accept members so fast.

Of course, all of this is a good thing.

Thus, while Elliana was busy contacting top-tier families to lend them a bunch of special ability users, Ainsley asked Aaron to inform the people on the list.

"Tell them they can register tomorrow morning, and the inheritance ceremony will be held together at night."

Since there were only 200 people so far, a day was enough to conduct the inheritance ceremony that every member had to attend in order to transform them into an irregular tamer.

When Aaron heard the good news, he almost jumped to the ceiling and startled his whole family.

"Really, really, guild founder?! We can register tomorrow?! Then, can I also transfer my guild affiliation to the Gasha Guild branch?"

The young man quickly sat down on his bed in his mansion as he spoke to Ainsley through the phone.

After all, it was already nighttime when Ainsley called and the young master couldn't stay outside for so long.

"Hum, I'm serious. You guys can register tomorrow and I'll also change your affiliation to the Gasha Capital branch."

In the past weeks, Ainsley didn't just go around playing.

She had contacted the people in her country to design the Gasha Capital Branch's emblem design.

She had also ordered a lot of uniforms that could stretch to follow the users' body type and size, all for the upcoming new members in Gasha Country!

Chapter 1086: "Charm Ability Users In Gasha Country"

Ainsley even contacted her old friend, Zenan, to help her build a new overseas guild app for the Gasha Guild branch.

This way, the Gasha Guild branch had their internal app but also had the overseas app to connect with members from the Godlif Country.

Of course, Ainsley rewarded Zenan handsomely for his good service.

Everything was ready, and Ainsley only lacked guild members who wanted to join her Irregular Tamer Guild in Gasha Country.

However, speaking of potential guild members...Ainsley got reminded of something unpleasant.

It's about the lack of potential members from ordinary backgrounds.

"Right, Aaron. About the other charm ability users...from the data I got, there are more charm ability users in Gasha Country than in Godlif Country. Is that true?"

Ainsley easily found the data on the internet and was shocked when she saw this.

She knew that this world was much bigger than her previous world, and the number of living beings with intelligence here was higher than the number of the entire Earth's population.

Still, it was shocking that the charm ability users in the Gasha Country counted around 5% of the whole ability user circle.

5% is a lot! That's so abundant! Even a lot more than daily life ability users!

Not even the winged ability users can reach this terrifying number despite being hailed as the most influential ability user in Gasha Country.

If Ainsley didn't see the data, she would think that the winged ability users, who counted for around 3% of the whole ability user circle, were the one with the highest number.

But no. The charm ability users turned out to be much more abundant than the winged ability users!

Maybe this is also why the Winged Guild and other big guilds were especially afraid of Ainsley's new guild.

If all these 'useless' charm ability users could be fighters and tamers...the Irregular Tamer Guild would be the number one guild in the whole country within months.

They were sure of that because the number of guild members also corresponded to the guild's entire strength.

Although there were many guilds with little members who became strong guilds because of the members' quality, the majority of the big guilds had many guild members of varying quality.

Hearing Ainsley's question about the charm ability users' percentage in Gasha Country, Aaron went to check the internet for a few minutes before nodding his head.

"Yes, guild founder. What you said is true. There are so many charm ability users here and most of them become tour guides or stars in the entertainment industry."

Because the Gasha Country was bigger than the Godlif Country and had many foreign visitors from the Celestial Kingdom, their entertainment and tourism field was developed well.

This is also why the Graph Family was seen as one of the top-tier families despite only engaging in the tourism field.

"The entertainment industry in our country is much better than the one in Godlif Country, and the majority of stars are ability users," Aaron added.

In Godlif Country, the entertainment industry was a place for the leftover ability users with 'magic' skills or beautiful and capable ordinary people.

Because the Godlif Country was usually full of infighting, wild monsters and beasts attack, and other dangers, the entertainment industry was a bit backwards.

One of the proof was the fact that even a small internet celebrity like Leroy who didn't have any notable work, could have countless fans.

Even Ainsley who followed his ex-father's footsteps, was super popular in Godlif Country despite only using her fame as a baby mafia boss and a little anchor.

But in Gasha Country, Ainsley's feat of 300,000 live viewers was only peanuts.

"Half of the first-line celebrities in our country are all charm ability users. The other half are ability users with magic-like skill..."

There are almost no ordinary people who become celebrities in this country, except for the rich people and those with high-face value or talents.

Ainsley nodded at Aaron's words and was silent for a few seconds before quietly asking him in a low voice.

"Then...have you investigated the reason why there aren't many charm ability users from ordinary backgrounds who enter the pre-registration list?"

She believed that a lot of people already knew about the news, but the result was unsatisfactory.

It's normal for the charm ability users in the entertainment industry to reject the idea of joining the dangerous ability user circle when they're already flourishing in the entertainment industry.

But what about those who weren't in the entertainment industry?

Aaron actually had already investigated the case and was about to tell Ainsley, but coincidentally, Ainsley called him first to inform him about tomorrow's registration.

However, he was a little hesitant to tell Ainsley the result of his investigation because he could imagine Ainsley's response after knowing the truth.

It wouldn't be a good response, anyway.

"That...I have investigated the cause. Do you really want to know the truth, guild founder?"

Aaron asked cautiously, afraid that he would accidentally give more burden to this little baby.

Although Ainsley looked calm in front of the big guilds' suppression, she was actually upset and a bit nervous inside.

Aaron knew this very well, especially because the baby ate more than usual to vent her anger and would often ask him about the guild's future.

She looked less confident than when she created the guild in Godlif Country.

Aaron was a sensitive guy and felt that Ainsley's burden was actually too much.

She was alone in this foreign country, and she faced the pressure from countless local giants.

Even adults might collapse under such a pressure, but so far, Ainsley was still rational and didn't act rashly.

It's all because she still had a bit of confidence in her unique Irregular Tamer Guild.

But soon, her confidence would shatter to pieces.

Chapter 1087: "Blocked On The Internet"

Ainsley was confident that no charm ability users would reject such an opportunity to be a unique and powerful tamer.

But Ainsley didn't know that the Gasha Country's ability users weren't as extreme as the Godlif Country.

Here, weak ability users could still live well if they could use their special ability in the right place.

It doesn't matter if they don't become strong. Anyway, there isn't any beast and monster tide each year.

There's almost no danger of beasts or monsters' sudden appearance on the street, unlike the chaotic and dangerous Godlif Country's capital city.

Even if there is a beast and monster tide or a beast and monster's sudden attack, the celestials will help everyone to face the beasts and the monsters.

Because of this, many charm ability users don't think that it's really tempting to be stronger if they have to offend all the big guilds that hold their lifeline.

Isn't it good to lay down and become an entertainer or something. Having a sugar momma or a sugar daddy is also okay, right?

Prostitution here is extremely common, and strangely, the prostitutes' rights are well-protected.

They aren't treated like a sex slave or something lowly comparable to animals, unlike the prostitutes in Godlif Country.

Thus, even if Ainsley wanted to save the prostitutes in this country, they might not thank her and might even curse her for being a busybody.

Aaron didn't have the heart to tell Ainsley all of this cruel reality. Thus, he tacitly shifted the blame to the big guilds.

Still, he asked Ainsley whether she really wanted to know the 'truth' and Ainsley said yes.

Then, he could only push all the blame to the big guilds because the big guilds were really the perpetrator.

If the big guilds didn't threaten these charm ability users, many of them would still be interested to join the Irregular Tamer Guild to earn easy money by becoming a unique tamer.

As for training to fight others? Some may want to do this while others will only want to train to be a good tamer to get more money.

"I investigated the case and found that the big guilds threatened the charm ability users with ordinary backgrounds."

Aaron took a deep breath and explained carefully.

"That's why, a lot of charm ability users don't dare to register to be our guild's member..."

Ainsley was silent for a few seconds. The news she just heard was too much for her brain at the moment.

Really. This is the first time she ever knew of big guilds threatening others not to join her guild.

This is too extreme, right? Just how much hatred these big guilds have to threaten the whole capital city's charm ability users not to join her guild?

Ainsley tried to calm her mind by imagining sweet cakes and candies she ate a few days ago before slowly replying to Aaron's reports.

"What about those outside of the capital? Don't tell me the big guilds inform their branch guilds to stop the charm ability users from joining my guild in the capital?"

"This...the big guilds didn't do that, but they...they blocked the news about the Irregular Tamer Guild from spreading to other cities..."

Aaron inhaled sharply and decided to break the jar.

"They even collude with the internet-focused guilds to block the Irregular Tamer Guild's name from appearing on the internet."

Because of this, many Godlif Country's people don't even know about the Irregular Tamer Guild already appearing in their country.

They know that Ainsley's guild is powerful in the neighboring country, but they don't know that the guild has already started accepting new members in their country.

Ainsley had actually spread the news through her live broadcast, but her live broadcast platform was one from the Godlif Country.

Although it could accept foreign accounts, not many foreigners knew about this live broadcast platform, especially when the one in Gasha Country was bigger.

If Ainsley wanted to attract more Gasha Country's people, she had to use a local live broadcast platform.

However, foreigners couldn't register because they wouldn't be an official citizen of the country.

Hey, it's so difficult!

There's almost no global live broadcast platform like YouTube in this world, only processed videos could be uploaded in global platforms like Youtube.

There's a global video platform like Youtube in this world too, and Ainsley had an account there.

She had many followers thanks to her battle broadcast and other battle videos throughout the year, but her videos could still be blocked in some countries because of the violence content.

The big guilds in Gasha Country colluded with many hackers and internet-focused guilds, even government's officers to block Ainsley's channel from reaching the people in Gasha Country.

Thus, only a fraction of Gasha Country's people knew about Ainsley and her Irregular Tamer Guild.

Most of them were from the capital city.

Ainsley never imagined that the big guilds hated her so much until they did such a complicated thing such as blocking her news and information on the internet.

That's not an easy thing to do, but the big guilds still did it!

Just how much hate they got for her?! Is it really necessary to block people to this extent??

Ainsley didn't know that her Irregular Tamer Guild brought much more threats to the other big guilds than what she could imagine.

The Irregular Tamer will crush the monster tamer to the ground.

This new guild can even surpass the Winged Guild as one of the strongest and most respected guilds in this country.

The matter already involved the Gasha Country's pride as a country with the most winged ability users among other human countries.

This also indirectly involved the celestials who had close relationships with the Winged Guild!

Chapter 1088: "Too Rash"

Many celestials weren't old-fashioned anymore and didn't hate the blood clan like the old generation.

But there would still be some extremists.

Imagine the guild that the celestials backed actually lost in front of a guild built by a blood clan's cub?

Although the cub wasn't a real blood clan's cub, since she could control blood, she was a pseudo-blood clan's cub in a sense.

The celestials wouldn't want to lose against a blood clan's cub.

This is also why some celestials helped the Winged Guild to block Ainsley's path in the dark.

Whether blocking the news of Ainsley's guild from spreading or threatening the charm ability users...

How could the Winged Guild and other big guilds do this carelessly when there were so many celestials with justice in their bones?

Of course, there must be higher-level celestials who supported their plan.

They just can't let Ainsley succeed!

After knowing the truth behind the investigation, Ainsley was so shocked and almost dropped her phone to the ground.

The big guilds are really ruthless and so paranoid!

"Are you sure they really block the news from spreading to other cities? Maybe there will be some loopholes through the live broadcast platform..."

Ainsley believed that although her current fans and viewers on the live broadcast platform were not worth that much compared to the big anchors, she's still doing exceptionally well as a newbie.

There should be many Gasha Country's people who watched the live broadcast from the global video platform or something, right?

"Well, there are many Gasha Country's people who watch your battle with Charles and other things, but they don't necessarily have a good impression on you..."

Aaron had to speak his thoughts from the perception of a Gasha Country's citizen.

"In that battle, Charles became the representative of the Gasha Country while you became the Godlif Country's representative."

Aaron let out a sigh.

"Although I know you didn't say this, many viewers thought this is the case and the gambling pools and such are the proof."

Then, Charles was defeated. Ainsley even severed his arm in front of so many viewers online and offline.

That's like a slap to a lot of winged ability users and Gasha Country's people who had a high patriotism in their blood.

Thus, although they knew Ainsley would open a new guild soon, none of them bothered to promote the news.

Some extremists even tried to block the news so that the charm ability users in their country wouldn't defect to the enemy's side.

Ainsley was silent as she listened to Aaron's explanation.

All her problems started with her identity as a foreigner and the fact that her guild was a self-made guild that first started in Godlif Country.

This means the guild was actually a unique guild affiliated to the Godlif Country.

Other countries' guilds would try hard to prevent her from spreading her guild abroad, both because of personal interest and because of national interest.

Although the government would love to see many charm ability users in Gasha Country become unique tamers, they couldn't openly support Ainsley and her guild.

In the end, the government had to close an eye on what the big guilds did to Ainsley.

It was already good that the government didn't suppress Ainsley despite their silence.

Ainsley was in a trance for a few minutes, wondering which step she did wrong.

Is it because she was too high-profile when fighting Charles? Or maybe because she couldn't grab the Gasha people's hearts?

Maybe...she was too rash when she came to this country to open a guild branch.

She didn't study anything about the local situation between guilds, and everything became a mess.

Ainsley doubted her choice for the first time, but Aaron's voice over the phone woke her up.

"Guild founder? Are you there? Actually, I think you did nothing wrong. There are so many foreign guilds in Gasha Country who also suffer like you..."

There were too many unique abilities in this world, and many ambitious people like Ainsley also created their own guilds.

Many of them came to Gasha Country to develop and all of them faced the same issue—

Mainly because guilds in Gasha Country held a strong influence compared to guilds in other countries.

"It was said that the most difficult place for the foreign guild to develop is in Gasha Country."

Aaron paused before injecting a little motivation to Ainsley, who had begun to doubt her worth.

"They said that once you conquer Gasha Country, the guild's development in other countries will be much smoother."

After all, guilds in other countries would also pay attention to these unique guilds and if these guilds could conquer such a difficult place like the Gasha Country...

How could they reject such a guild from developing in their country when the guild's influence in other countries weren't as powerful as those in Gasha Country?

Godlif Country was famous for their mafia families. The Gasha Country was famous for its guild circle.

Other countries also had their own 'specialties'. Some countries relied heavily on nobles.

There were no presidents, and there were only kings and queens.

Other countries relied on democracy, but the ordinary people had more influence because the number of strong ability users were pitifully small.

Some even directly migrated to other countries that could better facilitate their strong strength.

Different countries had different regulations and it was normal to face a setback in Gasha Country.

"It will be difficult if we want to counter all the big guilds' small tricks in the dark, and I believe they still have more tricks to use so that no one will want to join our guild."

Aaron sighed, but he was rarely wise and mature as he gave Ainsley a little advice.

"Instead of focusing on how to solve these small tricks, how about we just confront the source of these small tricks?"

Chapter 1089: "Let's Provoke Charles' Close Friends!"

Ainsley instantly snapped out of her muddy mind and squinted her eyes.

"You mean— let's confront the big guilds directly?"

'Yes!'

"But how do we do that? Challenge the guild leaders to the fighting arena? They won't be so stupid to agree."

Ainsley wrinkled her nose and felt that she was about to get an epiphany but everything was still foggy.

It's really the best move to confront the big guilds directly because Ainsley never lacked strength but always lacked political moves and other influences.

Anyway, she was in a foreign country so what kind of influence could she have?

Even the Billios Family's influence here could only cover their specific business, such as the Teleportal.

And that was also achieved through peaceful cooperation with the big guilds.

Ainsley wanted the big guilds to stop using small tricks like these and came to confront her directly in the fighting arena.

But if she was in the big guilds' position, she would also refuse to engage in any fight.

Anyway, the big guilds didn't have any 'dispute' with Ainsley. Only Ainsley was at a disadvantage here.

However, it wasn't really a dead end. As a local, Aaron knew a lot of tricks to drag someone to the battle arena willingly.

"We can't drag their guild leaders because we haven't even seen them fight in the arena in the past few years. But what about the guild members?"

Aaron's tone of voice was like a fox about to trick someone to death.

"We can provoke the elite members of each big guild to fight in the arena. There are many ignorant but arrogant youngsters in the guild, " Aaron added.

There would be many people who couldn't withstand someone's provocation, especially if they saw their friend get beaten in the fighting arena.

"We can start with the Winged Guild. You just severed Charles's arm a few days ago, remember?"

Ainsley paused a bit and nodded even when Aaron couldn't see her.

"Hum. I remember."

"Well. His close friends will want to challenge you to avenge Charles."

But they didn't have the face to come to Ainsley and challenge her to fight.

If only Ainsley could go to them or give them a reason to fight. Many people would want to avenge Charles.

"The big guilds are in cahoots with each other, and there are many family members from the same family who join two or three different big guilds."

Relying on the blood relationship between these members, Ainsley could justify dragging more than one guild to the arena.

"This will be a serious challenge for you, especially since you will have to challenge so many people from various big guilds."

But Aaron saw how Ainsley defeated Charles with only one ability. He believed that Ainsley could still defeat others countless times.

"If you feel that a one-on-one duel will take too long, you can apply for a battle royale. One against four or more people."

This will undoubtedly drag more people into Ainsley's plan, but it would fasten the process.

Ainsley could understand what Aaron wanted to do, and for a moment, she couldn't wait to apply for a battle royale.

"Okay, okay, I understand your intention. After we defeat those guild members, we should attract the leaders' attention, right?"

It would be better if Ainsley seriously injured someone who had a close relationship with the guild leaders.

For example, their sons, daughters, cousins, uncles, and so on.

"Exactly! Once you provoke them enough, they will also have a 'feud' with you, which means they have to solve the case in the battle arena."

Aaron was happy at the thought of dragging a bunch of guild leaders to fight in the arena.

This will undoubtedly give Ainsley and her guild more exposure.

But Ainsley didn't want to stop at that. She wanted things to be bigger than just fighting in the arena.

However, considering that the people here were cowardly and killing was not allowed...

Ainsley actually had a better idea in mind that could drag all the big guilds in Gasha Country to participate.

This event will be so big that the national television would have to broadcast the entire event, which means the entire country would be watching!

But first, let's provoke some small fries.

"I have a plan in mind. Now, can you help me investigate which person I should provoke and how I can find them?"

Ainsley no longer focused on the member registration she would hold tomorrow.

Whoever was interested would come, and whoever was scared wouldn't come.

It's hard to recruit a member now, but after that event ended...Ainsley believed that those who wanted to join might not even get accepted.

Since Aaron could give Ainsley such a suggestion, he had investigated influential guild members that could touch the guild leaders' reverse scales if provoked.

Aaron immediately sent the list to Ainsley's phone and included where she could find them.

"Let's target a few people from the Winged Guild first. There are three people here...two boys and one girl. One of the boys is Charles' best friend."

The three people created a small group with Charles, and the four of them were regarded as the four geniuses of the Winged Guild.

They were all barely twenty, and the girl was even younger, only eighteen years old.

"The girl is the granddaughter of the current Winged Guild Leader. She has a close relationship with Charles and the other two guys."

This girl would be Ainsley's target, but the bait should be the boy who was Charles' best buddy in the small group.

"They often hang out around the Feather Pavilion at the Celestial Lake. I can give you free access to go there—"

Because the Graph Family owned that lake!

Chapter 1090: "Let's Provoke All The Big Guilds' Geniuses!"

The Celestial Lake was famous because there was a unique natural phenomenon that would only happen when the full moon was out.

The whole lake would shimmer like crystal-clear mirrors and countless feather-like light would fill the entire lake.

This phenomenon was strange, but people believed that the lake was a place where fallen celestials' souls rested.

The feather-like light was the soul of those brave celestials who fell from the sky kingdom to the lake.

Because of this, the lake was called a Celestial Lake, and there were many Feather Pavilion at the lake's bank, surrounding the lake.

Many young people liked to hang out from evening to night time, especially around the full moon.

But the Winged Guild members always came to this place because it was said that they could get better enlightenment when they're around the lake.

The four geniuses often hang out around the lake. Now that Charles was out....Aaron doubted whether the three people would still go there.

But thinking that there was a rumor about the lake, saying that the lake water could heal any injuries as long as the person was a 'chosen one'...

The three naive youngsters would most likely come to the lake this evening to try to get the lake water.

Of course, the magical lake water needed the feather-like light to be called magical, which means the group would wait until the moon came out before taking the lake water.

Many people had to wait from evening or even from afternoon just to get this feather-like light because the legend said that only sincere people could catch the feather-like light.

This was the first time Ainsley heard of such a legend, but since the Xocolet Lake in her territory could even make someone awaken their special ability...

The legend about this Celestial Lake might not be false.

Anyway, she could provoke the three people at the lake tonight.

"The good thing is, this young girl actually has so many admirers, and a few of them are geniuses from other big guilds."

Aaron snickered as he shifted his butt to sit more comfortably.

"I have investigated, and this girl has a best friend from another big guild and has more than four suitors."

Her girl best friend was actually a genius from the Merchant Guild and was hailed as the next guild leader once she was older.

The four to five suitors came from the Alchemist Guild, the Shaman Guild, the Beast Tamer Guild and the Monster Tamer Guild.

"What about the healer guild? Do we have someone to provoke there?"

Ainsley couldn't help but rub her chin with eyes full of interest in this gossip.

Oh, hey. The Winged Guild leader's granddaughter has such a lot of admirers...this is quite interesting!

"The healer guild...there is almost no intersection between the healers and the other big guilds, but the interesting thing is..."

Aaron deliberately paused to create suspense and then slowly blurted out.

"The genius merchant girl's older brother is the healer guild's vice leader."

!

"There can be such a young vice leader? How old is that older brother, and how old is the genius merchant girl?"

Since the young granddaughter was only eighteen, the genius merchant girl should be around the same age, right?

"The genius merchant girl is nineteen years old this year and his older brother is twenty five years old. He's one of the best healers in Gasha Country!"

No wonder he became a vice leader at such a young age.

"He just became a vice leader last year, but this undoubtedly strengthened the relationship between the Merchant Guild and the Healer Guild."

Aaron spread the gossip once more with an excited tone of voice.

"This is also why that genius merchant girl's position in the Merchant Guild rose by a few notches. Even the Merchant Guild leader and the vice leader pay a lot of attention to her."

Such a coincidence...these people were all connected to each other.

Maybe because geniuses usually played with geniuses. Charles was also hailed as a genius, so his close friends were all geniuses.

No wonder there could be such a relationship.

But hey, Ainsley still had to thank the young Winged guild leader's granddaughter for having four excellent suitors from various guilds.

Since the seven big guilds, the first-tier guilds in Gasha Country actually cooperated with each other— it wasn't strange that the members knew each other.

"The four young geniuses from the Shaman Guild, the tamers guild and the Alchemist guild have good family background and have older brothers or sisters in the same guild."

Aaron added more information to Ainsley and didn't hesitate to assist her all the way.

"The older generation are all hailed as the next guild leader in their own guild."

"Many of them even become the Gasha Branch guild representative in international guild tournaments," Aaron added.

Albeit these people had never won the once in a decade tournament when they were less than eighteen years old.

But it was predicted that they would join the young-adult division in the near future and compete once more to bring the title of the headquarters guild to their country.

"These older brothers and sisters are all protective of their younger brothers and sisters. If you seriously injure them...they will definitely challenge you to the fighting arena."

And then, if Ainsley could injure these geniuses....the guild elders, vice leaders and leaders will all react.

Once they react to Ainsley's provocation, they will have to enter the arena or fight using special abilities.

Ainsley will smoothly reach her goal to subdue the big guilds through strength!

What a cunning idea, Aaron!