

BABY MAFIA 1181

Chapter 1181: "The Death Meadow's Favor"

Because of the old lady's high status in the family, the Billios Family also secretly helped the blood clan.

"Maybe they knew that this kid is a blood clan's cub and immediately adopted her to protect her."

The woman had a motherly smile on her face, and the more she looked at the baby, the more she liked it.

This baby is the most talented baby in her generation, and her talent even beats a lot of seniors, shaming the so-called geniuses.

And this kid is their blood clan's cub! Even among other blood clan's cubs, she's the best and the one with the most potential!

The two elders even thought that they could save the blood clan's fate through this little kid.

The day when their blood clan rightfully returned to the surface wouldn't be long! They wouldn't be suppressed anywhere anymore!

"Let's go to the Death Meadow in advance and wait for the kid there."

The young man turned off the broken phone and cautiously put on his hoodie once more.

When the woman heard his words, she couldn't help but deepen her smile.

"The death meadow..." The woman sighed in awe, "Even God is helping us. That place has always been the blood clan's home ground, right?"

The woman's eyes were a bit blurry as she reminisced about the past.

She was old enough, and back then, she was also one of the warriors who fought with the celestial race and survived.

The rumor about the Death Meadow wasn't completely baseless.

Some of the rumors were correct, such as the Death Meadow being a battlefield between the blood clan and the celestial back then.

Many blood clan members had fallen here, and a lot more celestials gave up their lives at that place.

But still, the Death Meadow was soaked with the blood clan's blood for thousands of years and everyone knew that the blood clan's speciality was anything related to blood.

The blood of the fallen blood clan members soaked the entire meadow, making it a really good place for the blood clan to fight.

Because of this, even when a lot of blood clan members died in the battle, those who survived could fight back the celestials and didn't lose.

The history was actually a bit deceiving. In the war back then— their blood clan didn't necessarily lose.

The celestials actually suffered more than their blood clan, but because the blood clan always had a small population, they had no choice but to run away from the battlefield.

From then on, they had been hiding so they wouldn't trigger another war.

What if other races decided to join the war and fought their blood clan?

Their clan was indeed one of the strongest races in this world, but even they would be afraid when facing too many enemies.

Still, the celestials also knew that the Death Meadow completely became the blood clan's territory.

If celestials went there, the weaker ones would always suffer some accidents and the strong ones could even receive sudden deadly curses and such.

The blood clan was still strong even when only their dried blood and bones remained.

Not to mention that after the huge war, the surviving blood clan members brought back the blood of the fallen warriors.

After thousands of years, they managed to revive half of the fallen victims, and the rest were only weak members who hadn't been able to regain consciousness yet.

The blood clan was really immortal. They could still get revived even with just a drop of blood!

The woman rubbed her chin as she walked side by side with the young man.

"It's been a long time since I last visited the Death Meadow." The woman fixed her hoodie and continued her words.

"I heard that many blood clan monsters and beasts resided there and that place became a hunting ground for hunters and tamers."

The young man didn't slow down his walking speed at all and calmly answered the woman without looking at her.

"Well, I heard the same thing. Still, the Death Meadow after the war doesn't allow any flying beasts or monsters, not even planes and flying carriages."

The meaning behind his words was actually to soothe the young woman.

Who wouldn't be sullen when they knew that monsters and beasts related to their clan became toys and prey on other races?

The woman's face seemed to brighten at the young man's words, and she couldn't help but sigh.

"That's good. At least those stinky celestials won't be able to enter the Death Meadow, and there are still some rules to be obeyed."

A lot of people did fear the Death Meadow because of the high casualty rates.

That place was labeled as one of the most dangerous places in Gasha Country.

Not only because of the rumor and the strange natural rules but because of the ferocious monsters and beasts.

There were also a lot of people who casually harmed each other because the Death Meadow was a good place to commit crimes without getting punished.

After all, the rumor said that once someone died at that place, their whole body would sink to the ground, and not even a drop of blood would be left.

People said that the fallen blood clan members used these corpses to nourish their souls so they could be revived faster.

And this is true!

The two blood clan members talked to each other about the current Death Meadow, and they all agreed that the place would be favorable for the baby.

"Even if she turns out to be a normal human and not a blood clan's cub, with the smell of a blood clan member on her, the meadow will side with her."