

BABY MAFIA 861

Chapter 861 - "Opportunity To Show Off"

The big races didn't discriminate against the mixed-blood anymore, but they still couldn't accept those with demonic blood, even if the bloodline were faint.

Coincidentally, Axelle had exactly half the blood of the demons, not a quarter or less than that.

He's really the elves' biggest shame in this sense.

Of course, Finley's mind was on Chronos's words rather than the mixed-blood's fates or Axelle's circumstances.

[Why can't I use my fairy magic? Is that not suspicious? Or maybe I told her that the elders use something to seal my ability...]

The fairy world was naturally magical.

There would be some items or materials that could seal a fairy's magic, only leaving them with their innate racial talent.

[Just tell her the elders seal your magic so that you can't run away. Did you forget all fairies need their magic to come in and out of the fairy world?]

Sometimes, Chronos really forgot that Finley wasn't a real fairy.

Finley only rolled his eyes at Chronos before putting up an act for Ainsley.

"It's like this. I can become smaller, yes, but I need magic. And...because I am locked up in the fairy world, the elders seal my magic..."

Finley bit his lips as he looked at Ainsley with slightly teary eyes.

"I'm sorry. I don't have any magic other than my innate talent to control the wind. I can't even fly using my wings."

Ainsley's face instantly turned pale. She hurriedly hugged Finley, who was a head taller than her and patted his back.

"My bad, I'm sorry. I didn't know it was like that for you. I won't ask you to do anything again, okay?"

How would she know that Finnie was actually treated like that because he snuck out of the fairy world??

Well, he's still young and really shouldn't be playing outside, but the fairy elders are too much, right?

Ainsley felt that she had just poked Finnie's sore spot about his fairy's magic being sealed.

Thus, the baby immediately let go of her wish to see the small version of Finnie, but Finley only wanted to delay the issue, not forgetting it completely.

"It's okay. When I come back next time, I will have regained fairy magic. Then, I'll show you my small size!"

The next time would be Ainsley's birthday next year, which was still a year away from their two-year promise.

After all, this year's birthday wasn't counted as a year yet because Finley left Ainsley only for a few months, not even close to six months.

"I'll ask my elders to unseal my fairy magic on the day of your birthday next year!"

Ainsley's heart instantly felt warm. She looked at her innocent fairy friend and was really touched by their friendship.

"Okay, I'll be waiting. But don't force yourself or argue with the elders, okay? Even if you're a royal fairy, I'm afraid you will get into trouble..."

After all, the elders had lived longer than some of the royal fairies. It's never a good idea to oppose the family elders.

"Hum. It's okay. The elders actually quite like me a lot. That's why they're so overprotective and won't let me play outside of the fairy world until I'm considered older."

Finley lied without batting an eyelid as he pulled out his oscar-level acting once more.

Really, Finley was the elders' favorite human despite not being a fairy.

But he's still not a fairy, okay? At most, he became the elders' golden boy or something...

The ones the elders liked the most were the sun fairy, the moon fairy, and other nature-related fairies.

Aetheria and Chronos as the fairy of space and time, should also be the elders' favorite, but because they're naughty, the elders get a headache because of them.

Aetheria was a fairy with black skin, unlike most fairies with fair skin. Her existence was bound to be unique.

The fairies never discriminated against skin color, and Aetheria was actually considered a goddess among the young fairies.

Still, Aetheria was too rebellious. The same goes for Chronos. No wonder the two of them often got punished or simply locked up by the elders.

Ainsley didn't know anything about Chronos and Aetheria's history, so she just focused on Finnie's well-being in the fairy world.

Whether the other fairies bully him or not, whether his parents loved him or not, and so on.

In the end, Finley managed to dodge the bullet once more and left the bedroom with a belly full of 'debt' to solve.

After that little session with Finley, Ainsley stored the gifts she got from Zev and Finnie before going to bed.

The next day, she woke up at 9 a.m and hadn't even eaten breakfast when the core members started to surround her.

"Boss, boss. There is a notice from the government and the mafia council today. It's about the annual beast and monster tide..."

Jevon handed the written invitation to Ainsley while Elliana showed Ainsley the digital notification.

The others went to pick up the baby and brought her to the dining room to eat breakfast while discussing this matter.

"Right, the beast tamer, monster tamer and shaman guild also sent formal invitations to invite you to attend their summer camps. It's in May."

The annual beast and monster tide would start in early February or mid-Feb.

So, after the annual tide was gone, the big guilds usually held a summer camp for the younger generations.

The academies also usually opened their doors to formally receive new students in March or April.

The Sloan Family's core members told Ainsley all the important news she had to know, but for now, the baby only wanted to focus on the beast and monster tide.

That's an opportunity to show off the Sloan Family's strength!

Chapter 862 - "New Guild Emergence"

"Did the mafia council tell us how many people we should send to deal with the monster and beast tide?"

Ainsley immediately asked Elliana as she gulped her hot milk and munched on her croissant.

Ah, a chocolate croissant is really good!

Elliana immediately sorted the data and answered Ainsley's inquiry.

"They did."

"How many?"

"At least 1000."

1000 people. That's a lot!

But most high-ranking families had around 10.000 mafia members, so sending out 1.000 wouldn't be a big problem.

Plus, they wouldn't be fighting in close range with the beasts and monsters. The casualty rate wasn't as high as the daily territorial war.

This annual event was usually used by various powerhouses to show off by killing as many monsters and beasts as they could.

The beast and monster tamer guild would also use this chance to pick up quality beasts and monsters to be tamed.

After becoming a high-ranking mafia family, the Sloan Family hadn't participated in any events.

This annual monster and beast tide is the best venue to make a splash.

"Hmmm, should I also attend the meeting related to this annual tide?"

Heard that in mid-January, there would be a meeting to discuss the annual tide.

"Yes, you have to go to the capital. The meeting will last for three days...so I suggest we quickly open our Irregular Tamer Guild this week."

Because it's a guild, it had to be neutral. Although the backing would be the Sloan Family, the guild master couldn't be Ainsley. Ainsley could only be the guild master in the dark.

The real guild master would still be Ainsley but the guild master in name should be someone else.

Ainsley had built the branch guild's building at the Roid Valley, and another one at the Crimson Lily Forest, near the Xocolet Lake.

The one at the crimson lily forest was bigger than the one at the Roid Valley.

Two guild buildings were ready. The official documents were ready as well. They only needed the opening ceremony and the member recruitment.

Thinking like this, Ainsley tapped the table and nodded.

"Let's spread the news asap. I need marketing accounts to spread the news on the internet. Lure all charm-type ability users to join our guild."

After all, they could become tamers as long as they joined the guild and swore a soul oath to Ainsley.

Who wouldn't want that? The charm ability users had always had a low presence beside being used as spies and honey traps.

If they could become irregular tamers and could help others make a contract with beasts or monsters...

That's epic!

Of course, Ainsley had told the beast and monster tamer guild about this and the three forces decided to create a tamer alliance to avoid friction.

First, Ainsley's guild would focus on selling the monster contract service rather than the beast contract service so as not to rob the beast tamer guild's business.

Then, they would also tame a lot of monsters and beasts, but it would be for personal uses and not for sale.

The ones for sale would only be the monster contract service, and the guild also wouldn't go through the mercenary route like the monster tamer guild.

This way, they would avoid stealing other guilds' sources of income.

The monster tamer and beast tamer guild would even sell contract scrolls to Ainsley's guild to help her maintain her monster contract service business.

"Let's spread the news about the benefits of joining the guild. Send out the guild's detailed information too," Ainsley added.

The Sloan Family had their own public relation team and this team would be responsible for marketing and other things related to the public's interest.

The Irregular Tamer Guild already created their own website and other social media accounts as well and had been actively sending out hints about the new guild emergence.

"In two days, I'll hold a press conference and live broadcast to attract new members to join our guild."

After all, the members had to come to their guild branches from faraway if they wanted to apply as a member.

Since their guild had just started, they didn't have a lot of branches outside of the Roane Region.

"On it." Elliana nodded at Ainsley's request and immediately asked the public relation team to make a move.

In the afternoon, the Sloan Family's social media accounts and website simultaneously dropped a bomb.

[Surprise~ Our family is backing a new guild in the town– Irregular Tamer Guild! Click the link below to know more about Irregular Tamer Guild.]

The accounts also posted videos of Ainsley subduing monsters and beasts in the war, plus videos of her helping others to contract monsters.

The Sloan Family had always been a hot topic lately, and even the non-mafia people paid attention to them because of Ainsley's birthday becoming a trending topic.

Thus, after the Sloan Family announced the news, countless netizens instantly reacted.

[Wha?? A guild that can make charm ability users charm monsters and beasts just like the lil boss??]

[Sounds too good to be true.]

[Heard that the Lil boss can pass down her ability skill to others as long as they swear a soul oath to her.]

[Is that her special ability or something?]

[No. It must be her sacred beast's ability. Lil Boss now has contracted two sacred beasts in total!]

The Sloan Family did tell others about Ainsley contracting the second sacred beast, and the netizens had long been aware of this issue.

More and more people clicked the link leading to the Irregular Tamer Guild's social media and website accounts.

The social media accounts made a short summary of what the guild was about.

Included the benefits the members would get, why they should join, plus the requirements to join the guild.

Then...it instantly became a trending topic!

Chapter 863 - "Tree-like Guild Building"

This was the first time that there was such a weird guild.

In the past, there were a lot of small guilds consisting of special ability users with rare abilities such as hackers, exorcists, and so on.

In general, no one could make a guild for personal reasons. The guild had to accommodate a lot of people with similar abilities.

If one wanted to make an organization with various ability users inside, they usually become mercenaries or become a mafia.

Others built organizations of various purposes. But, to create a guild, one had to gather people with the same abilities.

As for this irregular tamer guild...it allows charm ability users to charm monsters and beasts alike without being a tamer!

That's really a unique guild there.

The percentage of charm ability users throughout the country was actually high, because it's a common ability user.

But to say that a charm ability user could charm monsters and beasts, enough to make contracts with them...

That's only exclusive to the Lil boss!

But the Lil boss said that she could share the skill with others as long as they are loyal to her?

Fck! Big news!

In just two days, various social media platforms were full of news about the Irregular Tamer Guild.

The trending ranking also had various hashtags related to this new guild.

#Sloanfamilyguild

#Irregulartamerguild

#the rise of charm ability users

#newguild

And so on.

Many charm ability users from various powerhouses were instantly attracted to the new guild.

Even when they were far away from the guild branches locations, they were all determined to apply.

The Sloan Family even opened online registration to help potential members to register online and only had to visit the guild once!

After that, they could stay in their region and do missions issued by the guild once a week.

They didn't have to go to the guild everyday if there weren't any guild branches around their region.

How good is that??

But of course, new guild members had to stay around the guild location to receive three-month training before they could get their guild identification card.

If not, when they went out to do business in the name of Irregular Tamer Guild, if there's an accident, the guild would bear the blame.

In fact, the guild allowed the members to make money off the abilities they received, but for each transaction, the members had to give a royalty to the guild.

Let's say, around 30% of the whole business transaction itself.

Not to mention that the guild also had members secretly cultivated by the Sloan Family to make money for the Sloan Family.

The Sloan Family would only soar after the guild was established.

In these two days, the number of online and offline applicants reached almost 100.000 people.

Yes, it was 100.000 people!

The Godlif country had a hundred millions of people due to the country's size that was incomparable to the country sizes in Ainsley's previous world.

The percentage of charm ability users among ability users in the Godlif Country could be said as the top ten highest ability types in the Godlif Country.

Well, there were even people from outside of the Godlif Country applying for the guild because there was only one guild like this in the whole world—

Unlike the alchemist guilds and other big guilds with many big headquarters in each country.

Thus, the number of applicants kept growing, and Ainsley's people had to screen the applicants to make sure their identity and background was safe.

After the two-day promotion, Ainsley finally held an official conference press in front of the guild building at the crimson Lily forest

Ever since Ainsley cooperated with the beasts and monsters at the crimson lily forest...

The Sloan Family had developed the forest and made environment-friendly roads leading to the guild building.

The guild building was directly built above the Xocolet Lake, and there were many other smaller buildings outside of the lake range.

Those buildings were dorms and other facilities for the upcoming guild members that came from afar and wanted to stay around the guild.

Other big guilds also provided accommodation for their guild members that didn't have houses or had financial difficulties.

As long as they're useful to the guild, the guild would help them too.

There was no registration fee to become a guild member, and one only had to go through a screening test and such.

Thus, it's undeniable that many potential guild members with no houses would rush to apply to live at these dorms.

Ainsley was currently sitting at the seat placed at the building's terrace.

There was this one long table in front of her with countless microphones and floating cameras placed not far from the baby's position.

From the camera view, one could see the guild building behind Ainsley as clear as day.

The guild building itself mimicked a huge lush tree with countless branches. The 'tree' building wasn't made out of wood, but from outside, it did look like a magical tree.

It was so tall that one could see the entire Crimson Lily Forest from the top floor.

These tree branches also served as balconies and docking places for members with flying-type beasts or monsters to directly enter the building after landing.

Of course, in each 'branch', there was a security spot to ensure not just anyone could enter the guild building.

The main entrance was placed at the bottom of the tree trunk, and it looked like a huge stone gate placed at a random huge tree.

The tree roots went deep into the lake and firmly etched itself to the bottom of the lake, providing another underwater space for members who wanted to tame water or beast monsters.

Unique, right?

Chapter 864 - "Irregular Tamer Guild's Uniqueness"

Yes, there were many water monsters and water beasts at the Xocolet Lake, the magical lake that could give people a chance to awaken their abilities if they drink the water.

As for the map of the whole area...

Looking from above, the guild building was placed at the center of the lake, and there was this huge bridge stretching to the lake bank, all formed by sturdy tree roots.

To avoid monsters attacking those crossing the bridge, there were many barrier tools and breath-concealing items placed on the bridge.

The monsters wouldn't sense there were humans crossing the bridge and go to the building.

The building also had this special effect, allowing it to stand still without being attacked by water monsters.

The camera faithfully captured all of these display details, and those who watched the press conference live stream couldn't help but marvel.

The netizens immediately bombarded the live stream comment area.

[I think this the most unique guild building I've ever seen. And this is not the headquarters yet?]

[Insane. The Sloan Family is really serious when creating this guild.]

[Yes, yes. I'm an alchemist, and somehow, I envy whoever can join this guild in the future. Just look, the buildings alone are so good!]

The road cutting the crimson lily Forest leading to the guild building was also a safe road, free of monsters or beasts' sudden attack.

No one knew how the Sloan Family achieved this state, but this directly showed the power of the new guild.

At the press conference itself, Ainsley explained the details related to the Irregular Tamer Guild and other official information that she had to say.

"The guild will recruit new members once a year, and every year, I will personally create an Inheritance Ceremony to share my ability's unique skill to the newcomers."

That's how Ainsley could save time from enlightening the guild members.

"Of course, the gathering venue will change from time to time, but this year, the venue will be in this forest. Next year, it will be at Pandora Island."

Ainsley told the people that the guild headquarter would be at Pandora Island, and only outstanding guild members could be registered as the headquarter's members.

Since the Pandora Island development was still ongoing, Ainsley had to use the two branch guilds which were those at the Crimson Lily Forest, and the one at the Roid Valley.

The one at the Roid Valley was smaller than the one at Crimson Lily Forest. The building was like the hobbits house, just larger.

Since the landscape was quite unsuitable for large buildings, the one at the Roid Valley was twice smaller than this tree-like building.

Plus, that branch guild specialised in taming reptile-type monsters rather than beasts.

On the other hand, those at the Crimson Lily forest specialised in forest-type monsters and beasts, plus lake water monsters and beasts.

Of course, the majority would want to be registered as the Crimson Lily branch guild members.

Those registered as the Roid Valley branch guild members would only be weak members, the bottom of the pack.

The potential guild members who have applied to be a guild members were also watching the live stream with flushed faces.

Some of them were suddenly proud of the guild they would belong to in the future.

Others were curious about how Ainsley could share her ability's unique skill, allowing them to be as unique as the baby.

A minority of the member's candidates were worried about whether they could be registered as the headquarters members or not.

At least let them be the Crimson Lily branch members, not the Roid Valley!

At the conference, Ainsley also told the netizens that outstanding members could be relocated to register as the headquarter members once the headquarter building was finished.

A lot of people didn't want to live at Pandora Island, but they were also curious and wanted to visit that island.

When these guild members became the headquarter members...they could have a chance to visit Pandora Island!

"The new members will also undergo a three-month training program at Pandora Island, and it will be carried out per batch."

Ainsley calmly applied the same regulation she used for her mafia members to the guild members.

"Every member will have a three-month training camp experience once they become a member. Those who don't join the training camp in a year will be kicked out of the guild."

In short, the training camp is compulsory.

Other big guilds also had the same programs, just like the summer camp programs they created for kids and teens.

Ainsley didn't think of providing a special program for kids and teens just yet, but those under 18 years old didn't need to do this compulsory training until they turned eighteen.

"For now, only guild members around eighteen years old and above will have to join the training camp."

For an hour, Ainsley talked about many things related to the Irregular Tamer Guild, giving the audience a better understanding of this new guild that was suddenly registered as an official guild.

The guild wasn't only registered at the Godlif country, but also at other human countries as well.

In the future, if Ainsley decided to expand beyond the Godlif Country, those who weren't the Godlif country's natives didn't have to go far away to the Godlif country to be a guild member.

"Even though this guild is backed and fully supported by the Sloan Family, the Sloan Family will never drag the guild into the family matters, " Ainsley added once more.

It means that if there were a territorial war or something, she wouldn't force the guild members to come and fight with her.

But, of course, those who volunteer to help would receive a different reward!

Chapter 865 - "The New Guild's Current Development"

Next issue. Regarding a mafia family creating a guild...

In fact, there was no rule that the mafia family couldn't make a guild.

The Meidian Family created a healer guild and became the healer guild's biggest backer in Godlif country.

But in other countries, they had no influence because the so-called guild they built was only influential in the Godlif Country.

Ainsley was different. The Irregular Tamer was so unique that no other charm ability users had this skill.

Plus, Ainsley could make a lot of charm ability users to have this skill, allowing her to build a guild that could be effective worldwide.

One could imagine the Sloan Family's influence in the future wouldn't be limited to the Godlif Country alone.

The Irregular Tamer Guild would be their catalyst to expand further!

The Sloan Family might be an international mafia family that had influences all over the world.

There were many families like this, but Ainsley's family wasn't there just yet.

The Billios Family could be said as one of the 'giant' families worldwide, and the Walter Family was also aiming to be one of these giants.

Of course, there hadn't been any giant families from the mafia society, simply because the mafia society couldn't develop easily in other countries besides the Godlif country.

Thus, the Sloan Family might be the first to be a worldwide giant family belonging to the mafia society!

The audiences had this kind of thought, so how could the other mafia families couldn't think of this?

Instead of being jealous, they actually wished to see the Sloan Family bringing the mafia society to grow further outside of the Godlif country.

At least the mafia council wished that.

The news of Ainsley's official press conference topped the trending ranking on various social media platforms once more.

Those who had charm abilities immediately flocked to register to be the new guild member, while those who didn't kept an eye on these potential guild members.

Many big and small guilds at the Godlif Country also paid attention to the emergence of this new guild.

It has been so long since the country had approved a new guild.

Of course, for the ability user guild society, the emergence of a new guild could be both good and bad.

It was good since they welcomed a new member and could strengthen their guild society. But it's also bad because it means competition.

Fortunately, the new guild's business was too unique and didn't even clash with other guilds' business.

In a sense, they could actually cooperate with this new guild to contract monsters for their guild members.

At this time, the people were waiting for the day the guild officially opened their business and let the members attend the inheritance ceremony.

On the other hand, the Sloan Family was increasingly busy because of the new guild they had just created.

Countless people applied to be guild members, and they had to screen these people to avoid admitting a spy into their guild.

The screening process took three whole days, even longer than the time period allocated for members to register.

In the end, Ainsley accepted 80.000 new guild members but less than 5.000 could live at the dorms and at the two guild branches.

The Crimson Lily Branch Guild provided rooms for nearly 3.000 people while the one at the Roid Valley could only accommodate up to 500 people.

Because of this, there were still a lot of guild members that didn't have houses and needed accommodations.

For the time being, Ainsley stuffed them into the Sloan Family's main territory.

There were a lot of vacant buildings there, and they could wait until the headquarters building at Pandora Island was finished.

The headquarters building could accommodate more than 10.000 people.

The building itself was not big, but there were many apartments built just to accommodate the guild members.

Because of this, the headquarters building area was actually bigger than the Sloan Family's main mansion and even bigger than the Sloan Family base at Pandora Island.

Of course, Ainsley also built many smaller guild branches all around the Godlif country.

For now, she should build the guild buildings at her family territories, such as near the Godfather Mausoleum, and so on.

In the end, Ainsley planned to build three more guild branches, mainly at the prostitution area she had demolished earlier, near the Godfather's mausoleum, and near the Sloan Family's main territory.

But those guild buildings wouldn't be as big as Crimson Lily branch and would only be bigger than the one at Roid Valley.

In almost a week, the guild was established pretty well, and everything had been going on smoothly.

Ainsley had prepared for the new members to register to the Crimson Lily branch first before dividing the members and sending some of the weaker ones to the Roid Valley branch.

Because there were too many new guild members, Ainsley planned this registration thingy to last for a week.

Plus, the day they registered, at night, they would immediately receive Ainsley's inheritance and would be the true guild member.

Time was pressing. Ainsley only had a month to train the new members and brought them to participate in the annual monster and beast tide phenomenon.

Thus, Ainsley asked her people to pick up the most talented members later on and send them to the annual beast and monster tide with her.

At the same time, the plan to create her own elite team was also on the agenda. Ainsley had a better intelligence team now, mainly because she had Martin.

But for an elite team, other than the five buds, she didn't have anyone else.

That's not so good! Other families had their elite teams to protect their heirs and family head, but Ainsley had none.

Chapter 866 - "The Guild Logo"

The five buds shouldn't be Ainsley's elite team but should be leaders of other elite teams.

They should develop more so that Ainsley could hand over the family development to them in the future.

After all, Ainsley would leave the Godlif Country sooner or later.

Then, the family development had to rely on the five buds who could move more freely rather than the 7 elders who were bound to the Sloan Family's main mansion.

Okay, for now, back to the guild development.

Right now, Ainsley was sitting in her office, busy looking at the documents related to her new guild.

"Let's start the on-site registration and inheritance ceremony tomorrow," Ainsley told Elliana and the others as she flipped through the documents.

"We will receive 10,000 members each day, and we should divide them into several batches. One batch should be 1,000 members. How is it?"

Ainsley didn't want to spend too much time at the guild and only wanted to quickly give the guild members the skill inheritance.

Thus, she divided the members into batches and would gather them up at one place before passing down the skill.

"I think an hour for each batch to finish their registration is enough. If we start from 7 o'clock in the morning, excluding lunch break..."

Ainsley silently calculated in her mind and nodded.

"We will finish the whole registration thing at 6 p.m, right before dinner. After the registration is over, I'll gather all the registered members for the day and do the inheritance ceremony."

Elliana and the others didn't really understand about the inheritance ceremony, but since Ainsley had said so, they immediately agreed.

"Good idea, boss." Jevon raised a thumb up for Ainsley before he reported some information.

"We have set up the registration venue at the Crimson Lily branch's guild hall. Registering 50 people at once is not a big problem."

With that, an hour to register 1000 people wasn't a problem.

"The guild identity card will also be issued right on the spot. We have borrowed the technology from the Billios Family."

The member only had to register their fingerprint and iris recognition before the machine automatically created the guild identification card.

Such a high-tech technology, many big guilds had used it for years, and now, the Irregular Tamer Guild would also use the same machine.

And the machine was a product from the Billios Family.

"Hum, that's good. Don't forget to send some patrol guards to guard the Crimson Lily branch. I'm afraid that there will be some troubles here and there, " Ainsley added.

After all, she wasn't sure if all the guild members wouldn't be trouble people.

Even though the guild already created a set of rules and reward system similar to the one at the Sloan Family, the number of people bound by the rule was simply too much.

Ainsley still needed the guards to maintain peace and security.

"Right, for the guild app...is it done? When will we be able to release it and let the guild members use it?"

Ainsley immediately looked at the person in charge of technology.

The Sloan Family had their own IT team and this team was usually responsible for maintaining the family app's security and such.

Now, they were also in charge of the new guild app.

The person in charge immediately stepped up and nodded.

"It will be ready in a week. After all the members have been registered, we can launch the app right away."

And it's easy to create an account to be able to use this guild app.

One only needed the country's identification card plus the guild identification card.

Just input the string of numbers recorded on both cards, and you're done.

The guild app had basically a similar function with the family app, but this one would be used by more people than the family app.

There would be many virtual badges for the members, such as for those registered to Crimson Lily branch, and those registered to the Roid Valley branch or other branches.

They would also have levels and guild contribution points that they could use to claim their bonuses and such.

It wasn't common for big guilds to use this kind of app because they still maintained the old way that the mercenaries usually did.

But the Sloan Family wanted to make a breakthrough in this field.

"Good. Make sure there will be no bugs and malfunction. You can recruit more IT members to work for us if you need more personnel."

Ainsley thanked the person in charge of technology before looking for the person in charge of the guild logistics.

"Is the guild badge ready?"

"It's ready. Here, boss. This is the sample." The person handed a small badge made of light iron to Ainsley and let the baby inspect the goods.

The guild symbol was actually a silhouette of an androgyny person standing in front of a beast and a monster.

Then, the three beings' silhouettes were enveloped by a faint pink heart shape.

The combination of black and pink was actually cute, not to mention that the background was pure white.

Many charm ability users were usually women, so Ainsley didn't think too much when designing such a cute badge.

Even the men wouldn't mind wearing this badge, because charm was really associated with pink hearts.

Then, at the top right of the badge, one could see a small crimson lily silhouette in red. The top left had the Sloan Family symbol, the simplified and mini version.

At the bottom of the badge was faint words written in a nice curly font— Irregular Tamer Guild.

Overall, the badge was really good. Even if one printed the badge on the cloak, it would also look good.

Ainsley liked the design so much!

Chapter 867 - "5 Guild Branches"

The crimson lily symbol on the top right corner was also a good idea to differentiate between guild branches.

Ainsley even saw a valley silhouette on the other badge type, symbolising the Roid Valley branch.

"The design is good. But you will have to make several more versions when there are more guild branches, though."

Ainsley smiled helplessly and thanked the woman in charge of the guild logistics.

The other badge type would have a unique building silhouette of the previous prostitute centre, and it was now called the Butterfly Pagoda.

The entire street had been changed into a commercial street, and the guild branch would be located at the centre of the commercial road.

The building would adopt an ancient china type of tall pagoda, looking unique and a perfect fit for a charm-type guild.

It was classy, pretty, and charming. The badge for the Butterfly Pagoda guild branch would have the silhouette of the 7-story pagoda with small butterflies around it.

The other branch guild that Ainsley prepared was the Godfather's mausoleum.

Since the mausoleum looked like an ancient Greek temple, the badge would also have the building silhouette at the top right corner.

With this, there were at least four guild branches. Plus, one more small guild branch located at the Sloan Family village near the main Sloan Family mansion...

Ainsley decided to name it the Sloan Village branch.

The symbol for this branch was a small hut with a tall mansion shadow behind the hut, symbolizing the Sloan Family mansion.

Five branches and one headquarters. The guild development would be very good.

Although Ainsley had only finished the building for the two branches, and there were still three branches plus one headquarters left, the future looked good.

For now, the edge of the badge itself was all silver, but it was meant for normal members and not senior members.

The senior members all had badges with golden edges, looking more exquisite than the silver-edged badges.

For a moment, Ainsley felt that her people were really creative and understood her thoughts well.

"Thank you for your hard work. We can use these designs. Now, let's move on to other topics..."

Ainsley started to discuss the guild members' registration fee.

The registration was free, but Ainsley still believed that the guild members should still contribute something and not just be ghost members.

"How about getting them to pay a monthly fee? That way, they will have to work for the guild and not just take our resources and lodgings."

After all, even the members who didn't leave at the guild dorms had benefited a lot by simply getting the charm skill from Ainsley.

This charm skill was priceless and no matter how much money they had, if Ainsley didn't give the skill to them, how could they have it?

Ainsley had elevated the status of charm-type ability users, so it's time for these ability users to repay her grace by working hard to expand the guild.

"Let's talk about the monthly fee later. I think I need to appoint the guild leader first and then appoint the vice-guild leader, plus the branch leaders. Five branch heads."

These people should have charm abilities and should be trustworthy, but Ainsley didn't have anyone around her with charm abilities other than herself.

And one more person...

Leroy.

But she didn't want to let Leroy get that special skill and even become the branch head or, even worse, the guild leader.

Thus, Ainsley felt that she should still be the guild leader for the time being until they could find someone to replace her while she worked behind the scenes.

After all, the mafia couldn't become a guild leader because guilds should be neutral.

The guild members could come from any kind of families, but once they joined the same guild under the same banner, they were family.

Thus, the guild leader couldn't be a family head, someone in the government, or a part of the mafia society.

Even being the head of a mercenary group wasn't allowed.

Although guilds usually worked as mercenaries too, but they would never create an official mercenary team and would only be loose mercenaries.

In this way, appointing a guild leader was hard. Usually, the one becoming the guild leader was the founder of the guild at that country.

But after the founder died, if their children wasn't fit to be a guild leader, it could be anyone else inside the guild.

The guilds were also striving to be the best, okay? Even when they're all alchemists, but there was a Godlif Alchemist Guild, and there was another country alchemist guild.

The guild leader was different, and there was still a sense of competition, especially when they would appoint an international guild leader once every decade.

The international guild leader would be the head of all same-type guilds even when these guilds were scattered everywhere.

Every country's headquarters strived to be the best among other headquarters and would surely want a competent guild leader.

Thus, the current Godlif country's guild leaders were all undoubtedly the best.

And the reason why they're so keen to recruit Ainsley was simply because if their guild member was strong, their guild's prestige could defeat other country's guild.

In fact, the summer camp in March wasn't a simple annual summer camp held by the headquarters to gather all the young guild members across the country.

It was an international gathering!

That's why all three guilds insisted on inviting Ainsley. Since their schedule didn't clash with each other, Ainsley decided to attend the international summer camp that only happened once every decade.

This is like a tournament among youngsters to see the future of the affiliated guild.

Alchemist guild summer camp, beast tamer, monster tamer, shaman, just name it.

It's a worldwide tournament!

Chapter 868 - "International Summer Camp"

In this summer camp, there would be teens category and youth category, but the most eye-catching ones would always be the kids category!

The kids's maximum age couldn't exceed 12 years old.

Once they're thirteen years old, they're already considered teens until they're 18.

Then, those who were 18 years old up to 25 years old would be placed in the youth category.

Now, go back to the kids category with zero minimum age and twelve years old as the maximum age.

Everyone who awakened their abilities at the age of 10 or below were all geniuses. No one could argue about this.

The earlier someone awakened their abilities, the more potential they would have, and the more special abilities they would awaken in the future.

Such a good seed, the guild would want to show off their geniuses to others.

The international summer camp became the perfect venue for these geniuses.

Once every decade, the geniuses who had become teens or youth category would also be in the limelight, but those who were still in the kids category would simply be put on altars.

Don't underestimate these old peeps' obsessions with young geniuses!

Indeed, the kids were young and couldn't be compared to the teens or youth category in terms of overall strength.

But even when both types had geniuses who awakened their abilities before ten years old, the kids would always be superior to the teens or youth category.

After all, the younger the ability user, the greater the potential, the brighter the future.

The teens and youth category fell behind in this aspect!

And kids were usually easier to coax.

Other people could lure these geniuses to switch sides while they're still young or make them loyal to their current affiliated guild.

Once the kids grew up, it would be harder.

In other words, the international summer camp wasn't only a place to show off one's future but also to poach talents.

Regarding this international summer camp...

Ainsley even thought that since the big guilds had an annual summer camp to gather all guild members in the same country and even had an international once a decade summer camp...

Maybe her guild should also organise this event. In the future, once the guild had entered other countries, one could imagine the power that the Sloan Family held!

Ainsley was simply ecstatic but she kept her calm and discussed more things related to the guild development before ending the meeting.

Tomorrow, the on-site registration would start, and she would also use the item Zev gave her for the first time.

The skill book that could share her unique charm skill to others.

Ainsley couldn't wait for tomorrow to arrive, but someone wished that tomorrow never came.

When Leroy heard the news of the Irregular Tamer Guild and even knew what was going on, he almost blew his top.

"A unique charm skill that can charm both monsters and beasts! Can even make monsters tie a contract with non-tamers!"

Leroy threw the pillow in his arm to the bed. His chest went up and down as his fair face flushed red from anger.

Yes, Leroy is angry and frustrated. Why? Because he's also a charm ability user, and this guild was a chance for him to make a comeback.

He believed that he could be the best irregular tamer once he joined the guild and receive that unique charm skill.

But the guild was founded by his stinky daughter, Ainsley Sloan!

They had just argued and had a conflict with each other a few days ago.

How could Ainsley be willing to accept him into the guild?

He couldn't even fake his identity because the identity card was there, and the government's law was effective on official guilds like this.

Even mimicry ability user couldn't deceive such registration because a machine would test everyone's abilities.

Since charm was a common ability, the machine could easily detect whether you have a charm ability or not.

If a mimicry ability user with no charm abilities tried to pretend to be a charm ability user, it wouldn't work.

He's a charm ability user, not a mimicry.

He could sneak into the guild by changing his appearance or something, but fingerprints and irises would stay the same.

He couldn't change it!

Unless he had a mimicry ability, he would always be busted.

Seeing his lover frustrated and mad like this, even Ren also felt distressed.

If he knew that Ainsley would build such a good guild suitable for Leroy, he would not let Leroy offend Ainsley a few days ago.

Alas, it's too late. Leroy was too much, and he had deeply offended Ainsley, the one who created the guild and the only one who could pass on the unique skill to others.

"Leroy...let's just forget it. You're already on the right track right now. Aren't you a super popular internet celebrity? You don't need to go back to the Sloan Family or something."

Yes, Leroy was actually a super popular internet celebrity that went with a stage name 'Deestar'.

Deestar was a popular live streamer, an actor, and even a variety show regular.

He's charming, young, and simply amazing.

Because he's also a charm ability user, he's bound to be at the top of the entertainment industry.

Leroy's charm ability might not be as strong as Ainsley, but his unique skill was what Ainsley didn't have.

Transmitting charm through the internet!

Thanks to this skill, Leroy as Deestar became a super popular internet celebrity in only a few months, not even a year yet.

The day he left the Sloan Family, he entered the entertainment industry, and instantly became popular.

Although as an ability user, being an entertainer was something 'humiliating', Leroy was still successful and became rich.

But he's not content.

Chapter 869 - "Leroy Wants To Join The Guild"

With his money when he was a mafia boss, Leroy actually helped Ren to develop his mercenary team to be the best mercenary team in Godlif Country.

It's all thanks to Leroy.

Now, when he became a celebrity, he also contributed a lot to The Glazier Mercenary Team.

Leroy might be useless and had no influence in the world of the strong, but after he left the Sloan Family, the internet and the common people became his home ground.

Even some influential Ability Users who liked celebrities were also his fans.

He had more than fifty million followers on various internet platforms!

He appeared with his original face, but always changed his hair and eye colour to black and purple.

He went on a mysterious yet occasionally gentle persona route.

His identity was tightly concealed, but people knew he already had kids and a husband.

Usually, this would make a negative impact on his career, but Leroy was just too good.

His husband was handsome and had quite a good family background. His twins were all cute, and the family became famous on the internet.

Of course, no one knew that Ren was a mercenary leader and no one knew that Leroy was once a mafia family head.

After all, common people still had a negative stigma of mercenaries and the mafia.

Thus, using his connections with various people in the entertainment industry, he tightly concealed his past.

But...he wasn't satisfied. Leroy had grievances and felt that his success wasn't a success anymore.

Leroy was about to speak when Ren slowly shook his head.

"Leroy, at least you're popular and make a lot of money..."

At Ren's reminder, Leroy slightly calmed down, but he still couldn't let go of his grievance for so many years.

The man walked to Ren, who was sitting on the bed and immediately sat on the man's lap.

Then, he looked up at his husband with reddened eyes, looking like a bullied bunny.

"Ren...you know that I never want to be successful as an entertainer, right? I'm an ability user. My destiny should be in the world of ability users, not in the entertainment industry..."

After all, most people in the entertainment industry were the common people without abilities.

The only ability users who would become an entertainer were charm ability users or those with useless but fancy abilities.

As long as it's enough to make a good show for the common people, these low-level ability users could easily come to the top of the entertainment industry—

Just like him.

Special abilities were also like magic, and those who didn't have 'magic' always loved magic.

Normal ability users wouldn't want to use their abilities just for show.

Who else would satisfy the common people if not the low-level ability users with useless abilities?

In the ability users society, becoming an entertainer was something to be looked down upon, and Leroy, who was once a mafia boss, had a high pride.

He didn't want to be an entertainer if not for helping his new family to thrive.

Ren also never forced Leroy to be an entertainer. It was Leroy himself who made a sacrifice for the family.

Now that he had a chance to be a useful ability user but the chance depended on the daughter he had neglected for quite a time...

Leroy was obviously not content with the current situation.

"Hubby, can you think of a way to make that kiddo accept me into the guild? I'm really a good charm Ability User..."

Leroy hugged Ren's neck as he tried to ask his lover about his opinion.

Right, he believed that Ren could help him give a solution.

Ren actually didn't want to have any dealings with the Sloan Family anymore, but the guild was a neutral zone.

Anyone and everyone could join, as long as they remained neutral and didn't join any powerhouses.

Leroy himself wasn't a part of the Glazier Mercenary group, so it means Leroy was still able to join the Irregular Tamer Guild where he could shine.

"But, Leroy. Have you really thought about it? Once you want to join, you will be bound forever."

Ren paused before explaining.

"The guild has a rule that anyone leaving the guild will lose the special skill they received."

Yes, Ainsley did give this rule because, in the soul oath, one of the soul oath's contents was this.

Once the member left the guild, they would also lose the unique charm skill they received from joining the guild.

It was really fair because they could get that skill all thanks to the guild. Once they left, the guild could also take back the skill.

The soul oath was something mysterious but it was really sacred.

Once someone violated the oath, the soul oath would be triggered, and all conditions included in the soul oath would be fulfilled.

Ainsley's requirement for the guild member was this.

Of course, the most crucial thing was loyalty and prohibiting members from harming each other.

Ainsley also added a clause about the punishment for leaving the guild or betraying the guild in the soul oath.

Leroy didn't know that the rule would be this strict. He thought that once he got the skill, he could leave the guild anytime if he didn't suit the guild.

But now, once he joined, he could only stay. If he didn't, he would lose the newly-gained skill!

Leroy pursed his lips and contemplated for a while before nodding.

"I don't mind this rule. Even if I dislike the Sloan Family and Ainsley, she's still a family. I don't mind joining the guild as a regular guild member and contributing to the guild."

Of course, as someone ambitious, Leroy also dreamed of becoming the branch head or, even better, the Godlif Irregular Tamer's guild leader.

"But hubby, there's no way Ain will let me in. So, is there a way to force her to accept me?"

Leroy still didn't give up on this matter!

Chapter 870 - "Leroy As Deestar"

Ren instantly had a headache over Leroy's wish, but he also knew that Leroy deserved to be successful in the world of ability users rather than in the entertainment industry.

This Irregular Tamer Guild is really an opportunity for Leroy to be useful in the ability user society.

Ren paused for a while, stroked Leroy's back gently as he tried hard to think of a solution.

"Hmmm...can't you post a status on your social media platforms, saying that you also want to join the guild?"

Ren finally blurted out an idea, but Leroy tilted his head, confused.

"I can. But why should I do that? Can that force Ain to accept me?"

"Well...maybe that way, you can attract a lot of people, and your fans will pressure the guild to accept you."

If your idol said that they wanted to join a guild and the guild didn't accept your idol when your idol was clearly good, wouldn't you also feel distressed?

Leroy's 50 million fans would feel the same and would start putting pressure on the guild.

Even if the common people didn't have anything to do with guilds, the common people were still the majority in this world.

Although they're at the bottom of the social ranks, when they banded together to pressure someone or a force, they could be quite terrifying.

After all, ability users couldn't harm ordinary people, and if they did, for whatever reason, it would be seen as a crime.

The government was the one setting up this law.

Well, in reality, many common people still suffer because of the ability users.

In the end, even when there's law, this world still adopts the law of the jungle system.

The strong ones rule the weaker ones.

The government tried to protect the common people simply because they cared about their faces and position.

And they cared about human rights.

Thus, although the Sloan Family was a mafia family and would very likely ignore the law, they still couldn't harm the common people that easily.

Especially when the family head wasn't someone that evil.

Ren believed that Ainsley would step back and accept Leroy into the guild rather than making a conflict with Leroy's fans.

"Right, you can join the guild, but only this once. Don't mention anything about being Ainsley's guardian and such, okay?"

Ren was still worried that Leroy wanted to covet the position as Ainsley's guardian, because that position was the best to control a puppet family head.

Leroy actually still wanted to be Ainsley's guardian and made use of the Sloan Family, but he restrained his desires.

"Okay, okay. As long as I can join the guild, I'll forget everything about the Sloan Family and Ain."

But if he couldn't...it's not too late to go to the court and fight for Ainsley's guardianship.

Yes, it was totally possible! Either by the government's law or by the mafia council's law.

Ainsley still didn't know that Leroy would try extreme measures if she didn't accept him as a guild member.

Right now, the baby was busy with the guild affair when one of the people in charge of public relations suddenly came to her with a wide-screen tablet in his hand.

The man tried to catch up with his breath as he pushed the tablet onto Ainsley's desk.

"B-boss, boss, take a lot at this post. It just went on the trending topic, and it has something to do with our guild!"

Ainsley immediately put down whatever documents she had in her hands and hurriedly looked at the tablet.

The first thing she saw was this one sentence written in bold ink.

"The Popular Celebrity Deestar Expresses His Wish to Join The Newly-founded Irregular Tamer Guild!"

This news became the number one trending topic in various platforms with hashtags such as:

#Deestar joining a guild

#Deestar wants to be an irregular tamer

#Deestar's debut in ability user society?

#Irregular Tamer Guild, heaven for every charm-type ability user.

Well, the most eye-catching tag was the one about Deestar wanting to be a member of the Irregular Tamer guild.

Ainsley had been in this world for almost a year, but because she had always been busy with family matters, she didn't know anything about the entertainment industry.

So...who is this Deestar?

Why did her people look so flustered?

"If there's nothing wrong about this celebrity, he can join anytime. So, what's the problem here?" Ainsley tilted her head and asked the public relations staff.

The staff wiped his forehead with the back of his palm as he smiled stiffly at Ainsley, this little ignorant boss.

"The problem is...Deestar seems to be your father, boss. He's Leroy..."

Ainsley almost bit her tongue at this sudden news. The baby looked at the staff in disbelief as she snatched the tablet and clicked on the number one hashtag.

"Deestar is my father? My cheap, scum father? Is it possible?!" Ainsley mumbled as she read the hashtag's topic and after a few minutes, she was stunned.

She's stunned because she saw Leroy's picture as Deestar.

Although the man changed his vibe, his hair color and even his eye color, Ainsley could still recognise him as her cheap dad.

At that moment, Ainsley could only think of one word.

Sh*t!

She didn't think that her cheap father would actually be a famous celebrity!

The heck. If he's famous, why would he want to meddle with the Sloan Family matters?

He's already rich! He didn't need the Sloan Family anymore!

Ainsley didn't know and couldn't understand Leroy's mindset anymore but now, she had to focus on this trouble.

"Say...if we don't respond to this man or reject him right away...will his fans make trouble with us?"

That's what Ainsley didn't want to happen!
