

Always Been Yours Chapter 626

Always Been Yours (Tessa and Nicholas)

Chapter 626

Chapter 626

As soon as this popped up in Nicholas' mind, he brought up the matter with a stern tone "I know this is the band's first public appearance, and I also know you value this opportunity greatly. But I'm still going to remind you of the same thing. I support you in chasing your dreams, but you can't make me worry for you."

"Don't worry. I know how far to go and when to stop. I promise I won't wear myself out."

Tessa smiled sweetly as she could hear the unspoken concern between his words.

However, Nicholas was very much worried about her sense of moderation.

"I will check with Kylie about your situation at all times. If I find out that you're not taking care of yourself, watch how I will deal with you when I go over."

"Am I worrying you that much?" Tessa was amused at his threatening tone. Even so, she felt a sense of warmth in her heart. She knew Nicholas paid so much attention to her health because he cared deeply for her.

He merely gave her the side eye as he said faintly, "Says someone guilty of wearing herself out."

For a moment, Tessa couldn't refute him. So, she smiled placatingly as she said, "I simply think I can develop more as an individual, but I can also prevent myself from overthinking when I keep myself busy."

As Nicholas looked at her, trying to gloss over her past mistakes, his originally solemn face finally showed a faint smile.

Therefore, she seized the opportunity and hurriedly changed the topic. "Is Greg okay? I haven't found the right time to call him these days. I miss him so much."

"Greg misses you very much too. He talks about going to look for you every day."

When she brought Gregory up, he showed a helpless expression. "He has been coming up with ideas to torment me every day to visit you."

When Tessa heard this, she knew that this father and son duo was having a battle of wits and courage back home.

As she recalled the scenes where these two fought in the past, she held back her laughter and persuaded him, "Greg is still young. You don't have to be too serious with him. As long as we explain things to him clearly, he'll understand."

"I know." Nicholas nodded in agreement. "I told him that he'll only distract you if he comes to find you now, and you won't be able to fulfill your dream well because of that. He started behaving himself once he heard that."

Tessa felt that she was the luckiest woman alive to have Nicholas and Gregory in her life upon hearing his words.

The two continued their talk for a while before he started urging her to rest.

After all, it was already late at night in Vienna at this hour.

Well then. I'll be turning in. Good night." Tessa was indeed a little tired, so she ended the video call and went to bed without protest.

As Nicholas kept his phone away, he was prepared to continue his work. However, the phone that he had just placed on the table rang after a little while. It was a call from Janet's assistant.

"President Sawyer, Miss Brenner is awake."

Janet was finally awake after being in a coma for a week.

Nicholas nodded upon hearing the news. "I got it. I'll be heading over now."

After he finished speaking, he hung up the phone and asked Edward to get the car ready as they would make a trip to the hospital.

When he arrived at the hospital, he learned that Janet had been transferred from the intensive care unit to a VIP ward.

In the ward, a bright smile immediately appeared on Janet's face when she saw Nicholas rushing over.

"You're here."

Nicholas nodded lightly as he regarded the frail woman on the hospital bed. "How do you feel?"

as a

"I feel fine. It's just that my wound is in pain, and my whole body aches." There was a whiny tone in Janet's last two sentences.

When that tone was paired up with her sickly pale demeanor, people couldn't help but sympathize with her.

However, it was a pity that Nicholas was indifferent toward her. After all, he only ever showed his gentleness to Tessa.

"I learned what happened this time from Kaiden. Considering your capability, you shouldn't have made such a low-level mistake."

As Janet looked at the man who was talking about this mission with a serious demeanor, the smile on her face stiffened.

That was because she didn't expect such a scene to play out before her.

Doesn't he care when he sees me in such an uncomfortable state? Even an average person should at least express a few words of concern. But this man is behaving so businesslike and talking about the reason for my mistake in the mission. Did he really not hear me? Or was he pretending not to?

When her train of thought went there, she clutched the bedsheet under her tightly and looked at

Nicholas inquiringly.

It was a pity that the man's handsome and charming face was as expressionless as always, so she couldn't read him at all.

Always Been Yours Chapter 627

Always Been Yours (Tessa and Nicholas)

Chapter 627

Chapter 627

Eventually, Janet had no choice and could only suppress the discomfort in her heart.

She bit her lips as she muttered, "I was careless about the mission this time. I thought I had cornered Blood Eagle to a dead end, and he had no way to resist my attack. I didn't expect that he would have so many tactics up his sleeves."

Nicholas frowned as he reprimanded her, "Didn't I teach you guys before not to underestimate the ability of any enemy even if they seemed cornered?"

Meanwhile, Janet had an entranced look as she looked at the ruthless man who overlapped with the image in her memory.

Fortunately, she promptly snapped back to her senses. Then, she lowered her eyes and said, "At that time, I just wanted to end this mission as soon as possible and didn't think much."

As soon as she finished saying that, she paused for a while. The disappointment in her tone earlier disappeared, and she looked at Nicholas with bright eyes. "Although I accidentally let myself fall into the trap, I think it's worth it in exchange for your concern." Unfortunately, Nicholas gave her a cold look before he replied indifferently, "I did nothing. It's the nurse who takes care of you."

Janet felt sadness welling deep in her heart at that moment while listening to the man's alienating words. Therefore, she bit her lower lip and insisted. "But I heard Kaiden say that you're helping take care of me in the hospital. So, I must thank you properly when I get better."

"That won't be necessary. My former superior, who is also your current superior, Mr. Spurse, told me to take care of you, so I'm just doing as told." Nicholas rejected her gratitude mercilessly.

Instantly, Janet's bright eyes dimmed in disappointment.

It turns out that he did all these simply because Mr. Spurse asked him to? I still think that I'm somehow special to him. Guess it's just my wishful thinking again. What should I do? I still don't want to let go of my feelings for him.

At that thought, Janet's eyes went half-lidded as she was deep in thought, and her long, thick eyelashes concealed all the emotions in her eyes.

Forget it! I won't let go since I can't bring myself to do so. Besides, I'll stay here for a long time because of my injury. I have the opportunity to get along well with Nicholas. Moreover, I don't think I'll be any worse than that woman Tessa Reinhart. I believe even if Nicholas fell in love with someone else, it should be a temporary interest. I am the only woman who suits Nicholas the most!

Meanwhile, Nicholas was unaware of Janet's thoughts.

"Since you're fine, I'll inform Mr. Spurse." As soon as he finished speaking, he turned around and went to the balcony.

As she regarded the man standing straight-backed on the balcony, she could no longer hide the love in her eyes. Instead, she stared at the man fondly.

Nicholas seemed aware of her intense gaze as he frowned and turned his head back. Janet was startled by his abrupt actions. It was as if she did not expect Nicholas to turn around suddenly. However, she quickly suppressed the adoration in her eyes and showed an alluring smile to Nicholas.

Unmoved, Nicholas held the phone and turned around. Then, he said indifferently, "Mr. Spurse, Janet is out of danger now. She's fine."

"That is good news! Thank goodness that she's fine." Nicholas' former superior, Cole Spurse, breathed a sigh of relief on the other end of the phone.

Nicholas narrowed his eyes while looking at the sky and said coldly, "Mr. Spurse, when are you going to send someone to pick her up?"

"I'm afraid I can't do that at the moment."

"Did something happen?"

"Janet blew her cover in this mission, so she can't return for the time being. I have already sent someone to deal with this matter, but I still have to trouble you for a while and arrange for her recovery before things get better. I will send someone to pick her up when the time is right."

Nicholas furrowed his brows tightly when he heard that she would be imposing on him longer. He never liked trouble, yet he eventually agreed after thinking about how Cole took care of him in the past.

However, he had no intention to take care of Janet personally despite agreeing to Cole's request.

After he hung up, he turned around and returned to the ward.

When she saw this, she played dumb and inquired, "What did Mr. Spurse say? When will he arrange for someone to come and pick me up?",

"Your identity has been exposed, so he won't be arranging for someone to pick you up for the time being."

Nicholas relayed Cole's words concisely. Then, he revealed his plan to her. "I'll arrange for the servants at home to take care of you while you are in your resting period."

Janet would be lying if she said she was not disappointed after hearing that.

I

At first, she thought it was her chance when she heard that Cole had asked Nicholas to take care of her. Alas, she didn't expect that she had celebrated her fortune too soon.

Always Been Yours Chapter 628

Always Been Yours (Tessa and Nicholas)

Chapter 628

Chapter 628

That's correct. How could such a high and mighty person like Nicholas care for someone? On top of that, he's also managing such a big corporation, so he should always be extremely busy.

Through this method, Janet found all sorts of excuses to comfort herself.

"Then, I'll be imposing on you for now."

She innocently stared at Nicholas with bright eyes unlike her usual self, but this all meant nothing to him.

This was because apart from Tessa, he felt nothing toward other women.

He nodded dispassionately, then sat for a while before leaving.

During this period, Janet kept bringing up all sorts of topics to try to converse with Nicholas. She even mentioned the past missions, as one could say that ever since he left the army, she had been recalling their days of risking their lives together to calm her lovesick heart down.

"I was young and rash back then, causing us to almost fail the missions multiple times.

Yet, you would always help me out and make things work in the end. Otherwise, I wouldn't even be alive now."

She tried using their common past to bridge the gap between them.

Unfortunately, it did not seem to have much of an effect.

Throughout the process, Nicholas looked at her emotionlessly as if he was listening to another person's story.

In the afternoon, a thirty-something-year-old woman came to Janet's ward.

The woman introduced herself while standing beside the bed politely, "Hello, Miss Brenner. The Master has sent me to take care of you."

As Janet regarded the honest servant, it gave her an idea. Then, she smiled gently.

"How should I address you?"

"Miss Brennet, you can just call me Sally."

"Sally. What a nice name. I'll be in your care in the days to come."

Sally, who looked at the humble Janet, had a favorable impression of her as her smile became much more sincere. "I'm just doing my job."

Janet knew she had succeeded once she noticed the change in the servant's attitude.

She was only acting genially in order to form a favorable relationship with this servant.

This was merely a step to the right direction in her plan to pursue Nicholas.

Next up, she wanted to take the opportunity to obtain any information she could about Tessa from Sally.

After all, Kaiden had only investigated who that woman was. As for her daily life, how she was getting along with Nicholas, and how she appeared in his life to be with him, nothing was known since Kaiden was unable to find out these details.

Yet, these were the things Janet was most concerned about.

In Vienna, Tessa had reduced the number of times she had communicated with Nicholas.

One was because of her refusal to allow him to sacrifice his rest for her and the other was because the amount of practice had increased to the point where she almost had no time to think about other things.

Even though they were communicating less now, she still knew that their hearts were linked with each other.

And just like that, time went by and the weather gradually turned chilly to signify the arrival of winter.

Tessa, who was experiencing her first winter abroad, was not accustomed to the current weather.

One day, she woke up only to find herself dizzy and in discomfort.

"Am I having a fever again?" she mumbled as she touched her forehead.

Even though she was in discomfort, she still forced herself to go down and planned to take some Tylenol.

In the living room, the butler immediately asked worryingly when he saw Tessa appearing with a pale face. "Miss Tessa, you don't look too good. Are you sick?"

"I think I have a slight fever."

Tessa did not hide this from Kylie. "Could you please get two antipyretics for me?"

Kylie nodded and immediately went ahead to grab the medication while calling

Nicholas. "Master Nicholas, Miss Tessa has fallen sick."
At this moment, Nicholas was in the hospital visiting Janet.
When he heard what Kylie said, his cold expression instantly turned into one of concern.
"What happened?" he asked while walking to the balcony.
Janet only stared in a daze at the man's back, as she had never seen him in a panic before.
Meanwhile, he had already anxiously made a video call to Tessa.

Always Been Yours Chapter 629

Chapter 629 His Worry and Her Reluctance

When Nicholas saw the sickly woman on his phone, it made him want to rush over to Tessa's side right that moment.

"I'm going to tell Edward to book the fastest flight over there right now," he was about to hang up after saying that.

Fortunately, Tessa managed to stop him. "You don't need to come. It's just a fever. I'll be fine after taking some medicine."

Nicholas frowned severely as he replied, "I don't feel at ease knowing that you're sick on top of being alone."

"But, you'll be exhausted with so many things to do on top of you flying around. I don't want to see you being so tired. It worries me as well."

Tessa then comforted him through the phone. "Don't worry. I'll be fine. Besides, I'm not as fragile as you think I am. There's also Kylie around to look after me. So, it's not a big deal."

Nicholas stood on the balcony as he held his phone tightly in agitation.

Because of the close distance, Janet could hear some of the conversations, even though she was sitting on the bed.

She could only look at the side of Nicholas with a gaping mouth, as she had never seen the man use such concern and gentleness to talk to anyone before.

Yet, she was witnessing it now, only for it to be directed toward another woman.

It turns out Nicholas has this caring side to him...

Janet had to admit that she felt a fit of jealousy like never before toward the woman called Tessa!

She involuntarily gripped the bedsheets while closing her eyes as she hid all her emotions under her gaze.

Then, after a while, Nicholas hung up and reentered the ward, during which she had already regained her composure.

As she looked at the prideful man, she teased, "Wasn't that your fiancée? What happened to her?"

"She has a fever."

Nicholas nodded and replied, but the worry in his voice was apparent to her.

Even though Janet tightly gripped her bedsheets upon noticing this, she still acted like she was concerned. "Is she ok? If it's serious, then you should look after her. I'll be fine here."

"She refused," Nicholas seemed a bit frustrated upon saying this.

Janet secretly breathed a sigh of relief when she heard that little tidbit of information.

She was afraid that Nicholas might take her up on her suggestion and really go to that woman.

Although she had such thoughts, she still kept up her facade and said, "Seems like you don't understand women that well. You should know that we like to say the opposite of what we really feel. Especially when we're sick, almost every woman is at their weakest and needs someone to accompany them."

"If I were in her shoes, I would happily agree to you taking care of me."

Nicholas also thought that Tessa was a bit too independent and tough, as she had left this fiancé of hers feeling a bit useless in his role at times.

Although Janet could feel the jealousy in her surging, she still hid her true feelings.

"Then, are you sure it'll be fine if you don't go?"

"It'll be fine. She's a tough woman. It's just that I'm a bit concerned." Nicholas slightly shook his head.

Janet felt a bit stunned as she observed the man's expressions.

"I never thought that one day, you would care for a person so much."

With an inexplicable expression, she looked at Nicholas with a bitterness she could not express inside.

Yet, he did not notice her weird gaze as he nodded. "I never thought I would feel like this either."

As he didn't want to continue on this topic with an outsider, he changed the subject. "How are you recovering?"

Janet only smiled bitterly upon seeing the man swiftly changing the subject. "It's recovering fine, I guess. After all, inflammation is a given since the wound wasn't a small one."

"But, the doctor had injected a dose of anti-inflammatory medicine, saying they would observe me for two more days."

Nicholas nodded before sitting on the sofa, looking like he was texting someone.

Janet noticed his gentle gaze and knew that he must be chatting with Tessa without even needing to clarify her guess.

But, she was wrong.

Nicholas was not chatting with Tessa, as she needed rest after taking her medicine.

He was actually looking through the photos of him and Tessa as he held the phone.

Unfortunately, Janet didn't want him to ignore her like that, so she tried to initiate another conversation again.

"Nicholas, the team had always felt you leaving was a huge loss."

As she knew nothing about business, her conversations were mainly about the squad they were in back when Nicholas served in the military.

Always Been Yours Chapter 630

Chapter 630 Jealousy and Determination

Yet, no matter what she said, Nicholas was still as emotionless as ever, which highly frustrated her.

Does this mean that all our experiences of life or death are inferior to a woman he had barely known for a year?

Sadly, Nicholas couldn't hear her inner thoughts. Even if he did, he probably wouldn't care.

After he sat around for a while, he saw that he had visited the appropriate amount of time, so he excused himself.

"I have some things I need to deal with. I'll visit you another day."

Janet's face turned gloomy as she watched the man disappear from her ward without hesitation.

She gripped the sheets tightly as if she were about to rip them apart.

Why, why did things turn out like this?

She couldn't accept Nicholas giving his love to another person.

His affections should have been mine!

So, she ground her teeth as she growled, "Tessa Reinhart, how dare you take away what's mine? Who gave you the right to do so?!"

...

At the villa in Vienna, Tessa repeatedly sneezed as she sat on the bed.

"Strange. Who is cursing me behind my back?" She mumbled.

Then her phone rang; when she scrambled for it, she saw that the caller was Hathaway.

"Tessa, why didn't you come to the orchestra today? Did something happen?"

It turned out that since Tessa didn't apply for leave and didn't attend today's practice session, it has made Hathaway worried for her usually diligent student.

Tessa reassured her when she noticed the concern in her teacher's tone. "I'm fine. It's just a small fever. I'm sorry for worrying you and forgetting to apply for a leave."

But, she never thought that her words only caused Hathaway to fret even more.

"You have a fever? Is it serious? Did you go to the doctor?"

Before Tessa could reply, Hathaway cut her off anxiously, "You know what, I'll find you now. Send me your location."

Then, she immediately hung up the phone after that.

Meanwhile, Tessa was touched by her teacher's worry as she placed her phone aside.

She knew that her teacher doted on her a lot.

As she thought of that, she immediately sent her location to Hathaway.

On the other side, Hathaway had received the location and drove there using the GPS.

Kathleen was in the passenger seat as she accompanied her mother.

The moment she discovered that Tessa had fallen ill, she tagged along with fake intentions.

They didn't take long to reach the villa Tessa had been staying in Vienna.

As soon as the two got out of the car, Kathleen looked at the luxurious manor before her with envy since not just anybody could afford a place like this here.

Tessa is lacking in every way compared to me. So, what gives her the right to live in such a lovely place?!

Hathaway did not know her daughter's jealousy-fueled thoughts.

Similarly, she was also a bit shocked that Tessa was living in a place like this, but she came to terms with it after remembering Tessa's mysterious fiancé.

Tessa immediately had the butler guide them to the living room when they arrived. Kylie did as ordered, as Hathaway and her daughter were promptly seated opposite Tessa.

A servant then placed a tray of coffee and fruits before leaving them to their privacy.

After Hathaway took a sip of the coffee, she asked Tessa about her condition.

"How are you feeling now?"

"I've taken my medicine, so I feel much better now. So, you don't need to be so concerned, teacher," Tessa smiled and replied.

On the other hand, Kathleen was not paying any attention to their conversation.

As she scrutinized the lavish decor, she couldn't help but mutter petulantly, "Your fiancé really does treat you so well, Tessa. You've struck the jackpot by being with him. Even if you don't work, you would never have to worry about your expenses."

Her words made Tessa frown as she thought Kathleen's comment was inappropriate.

"A person's value should be determined and created by oneself instead of relying on your significant other."

Even as she spoke, the smile on her face was less genuine than before.

Kathleen pouted as she rebuked, "That sounds nice and all, but didn't you get with Mr. Sawyer because of his money?"

"Only useless people would think of leeching off others. If I really wanted money, I could earn it by myself too," Tessa retorted back with an austere expression that made Kathleen's face turn rather unsightly for polite company.

She thought that Tessa was secretly hinting that she was useless.

But, before she could open her mouth, Tessa voiced again, "Besides, with my fiancé being such a talented person, if I wasn't outstanding enough, how can I match up to him? I would feel pressured just by standing next to him."

Always Been Yours Chapter 631

Chapter 631 Outburst

Kathleen couldn't retort at the well-thought-out argument.

On the other hand, Hathaway, who was at the side, readily agreed with Tessa's words.

She encouraged her as she felt that Tessa was an opinionated young woman. "Mr. Sawyer is indeed a remarkable man, but you're not too bad yourself, so don't put yourself down. In the future, you might achieve even more than I have."

When Kathleen heard her mother's words, she felt even more uncomfortable.

Her mother had never praised her like this, so why did her mother praise Tessa instead?

Even though she was fuming inside, she didn't say anything horrible throughout the conversation.

Later that day, Tessa wanted her teacher to stay for dinner.

"It's not every day you visit me, so please stay for dinner tonight."

"It's okay. I still have some matters with the orchestra to attend to. Now that I know you're okay, I should be going back." Hathaway shook her head and declined the kind offer.

Tessa couldn't insist on the matter when she heard that Hathaway had business to attend to, so she could only see them off.

Once in the car, Kathleen's smile immediately disappeared.

Hathaway noticed the change in Kathleen's emotions, and she couldn't help but look at Kathleen, asking in a puzzled tone, "What's wrong?"

"What's wrong? Fine, let me ask you. What do you mean by that? Who's your daughter, me or Tessa?" Kathleen couldn't suppress the fury inside her anymore as she questioned Hathaway with an angry look in her eyes.

Hathaway frowned, upset by her barbed words. "What's the matter with you this time?"

"Hah, that again. Every time I fight with Tessa, you always take her side. Now I'm really wondering if you're my mother." Furious and wronged, Kathleen looked at Hathaway. "You always say that I'm hostile toward Tessa, but have you ever wondered why I behave like that toward her?"

"Isn't it because of Scott?" Hathaway didn't even have to think before giving her answer.

Kathleen screamed, unable to control her rage anymore, "Scott is one of the reasons, but you're the fuse that started it! It's you!"

With a screech, Hathaway hastily stepped on the brakes at her outburst.

Before she could say anything, Kathleen glared at her with red-rimmed eyes, accusing her, "I don't care if other people love and support Tessa, but why did you do it too? You're supposed to be my mommy! Am I worse than Tessa in your eyes? Don't you know how others look at me when you do this? They will also think that I'm inferior to her!"

Hathaway was stunned at those accusations.

She never thought that her daughter would think of her like this, nor did she expect Kathleen to be hostile toward Tessa partly because of her.

"Kathleen, you misunderstood me. I never had that intention." She tried to explain, but Kathleen was so furious that she couldn't listen to anything Hathaway had to say.

In the end, the two parted ways unhappily.

As for Tessa, she knew nothing about the argument that had happened between the mother and daughter.

She rested at home for a whole day, and her fever had receded in the evening.

Just then, Mona called in to visit.

“Tessa, your house is huge.” Mona gazed at her surroundings as soon as she entered the manor, gasping in awe.

Unlike Kathleen’s jealousy, she genuinely admired the place.

The two chatted for a while in the living room; then, the butler walked over to them respectfully. “Miss Tessa, dinner is ready.”

Tessa nodded, then took Mona to the dining room.

Mona was amazed at the luxurious selection of food at the table.

“Tessa, your chef makes such delicious meals! They’re even better than the chefs in my brother’s restaurant.”

At the side, the butler heard her words, so he smiled as he introduced, “This meal is made by a nutritionist Master Nicholas hired especially for Miss Tessa. Every dish is made carefully, so I can guarantee that it’s delicious.”

When Mona heard that, her eyes shone even brighter. “Tessa, can I come over every day for meals?”

Tessa chuckled and agreed amicably when she saw the girl’s eagerness. “Sure. You’re welcome anytime.”

After the meal, Mona stayed with Tessa for a while longer before leaving.

Just then, Tessa received another video call from Nicholas.

“Are you feeling better?”

“Much better.”

Chapter 632 Discharged

Tessa felt warm inside as she relished the man’s love and care for her.

The two chatted sweetly for a while, then Nicholas urged Tessa to rest.

After the call ended, she took her medicine and slept.

...

When Tessa woke up the following day, she recovered, and her fever had also gone down.

When Nicholas knew of it, he worriedly reminded her again, "Take good care of yourself. Don't make me worry so much."

"Don't worry, I'll take care of myself," Tessa responded with a smile.

The two talked for a while, then ended the call.

Later in the day, Tessa went to the orchestra, carrying her violin case on her back.

When the other members saw her, they went up to her in concern. "Tessa, you're here. Are you feeling better?"

"I'm feeling much better. Thank you for your concern." Tessa thanked them one by one.

In that period, Hathaway also came over to have a look, worried.

When she saw that Tessa was in great spirits, she encouraged the other members to practice well.

In the two weeks that followed, she spent almost entire days practicing.

This was the orchestra's first performance in public, so everyone treated it seriously and practiced with all their hearts.

They would take a long time to fix even the slightest mistake so they wouldn't repeat the same mistakes.

...

Meanwhile, in the General Hospital back home.

Janet had been hospitalized for almost a month, and she had recovered considerably.

Even though her wounds were still on the mend, her life wasn't in danger anymore.

Because of this, Janet asked to be discharged, but the doctor actively discouraged that course of action.

"Miss Brenner, you're really not in the condition to be discharged. Even though your life is not in danger, your wounds haven't healed yet, so they might get infected."

"I'll pay extra attention so that my wounds won't get infected."

Janet insisted on leaving, so the hospital had no choice but to contact Nicholas.

"Got it. I'll send someone over to deal with this."

With that, Nicholas hung up immediately, then sent Edward to the hospital.

When Janet knew that the hospital had contacted Nicholas, she waited expectantly in her ward.

Now that she thought about it, she hadn't seen him in a long while.

Also, she actually wanted to be discharged because he didn't come to the hospital often.

If he didn't make his appearance, she had no way of getting close to this man.

Also, now that she couldn't move freely, Nicholas had promised Cole to take care of her. He would definitely let her stay in his home if she got discharged. Then, she could have more chances to get close to him.

She had planned everything carefully, but sometimes things just didn't go according to plan.

After Edward arrived at the hospital, he immediately went to the ward to see Janet.

When Janet saw that the visitor wasn't Nicholas, there was an unspeakable disappointment and sorrow in her heart.

Her discharge from the hospital was a huge event, but Nicholas only sent an assistant over. This man really didn't care about her... or was he just busy?

In the end, she couldn't hold it in anymore as she asked, "Mr. Jackson, is Nicholas usually busy?"

Edward didn't know what Janet was thinking, so he nodded and said, "President Sawyer is busy every day."

Janet felt much better after hearing that and insisted even more on getting discharged.

With Janet like that, Edward conveyed her wishes to Nicholas.

"Since she wants to get discharged, just do as she wishes."

After ending the call, Edward did as Nicholas instructed.

After some negotiation, the hospital agreed to let Janet out, and the doctor would regularly visit the Sawyer Residence for checkups.

As for her accommodation, Nicholas had it arranged as well. It wasn't in Dynasty Gardens but a private villa nearby.

He would send servants and chefs to take care of Janet's everyday life.

After they got the procedures over and done with, Janet followed Sally out of the hospital.

Half an hour later, when Janet saw the exquisite and lavish manor in front of her, her eyes were filled with elation.

"Is this where Nicholas lives?"

"No, Master Nicholas lives elsewhere." Sally looked at Janet awkwardly.

She had taken care of Janet for some time, so she could more or less guess what this Miss Brenner was thinking.