Always Been Yours Chapter 992

Chapter 992 Help is Here

Kieran didn't give a damn whether he had upset his abductor and immediately demanded, "Who sent you? Are you here for money or revenge?"

It wasn't a strange question to ask at all. The Sawyer Family was prominent in the business world. Many people were envious of them, seeing them as a thorn in their lives.

Even so, the man continued to ignore Kieran. At this point, he could feel his blood boil in fury. "Did you think I won't find out just because you keep your mouth shut? I'll find out sooner or later!" He snorted.

Even after all that, the man still remained indifferent as he turned away to leave. Kieran's face was as black as pitch when he saw this.

"Hey, did I allow you to leave? I'm hungry. Give me something to eat."

The man stopped in his steps for a moment before leaving without even glancing back.

Nonetheless, he returned with a lunch box in his hand after a while.

Then, the man squatted in front of Kieran as if he were going to feed Kieran.

Unexpectedly, Kieran tilted his head and said snobbishly, "I don't want you to feed me. Untie the ropes and let me eat myself."

This seemed to be the tipping point for the man as he stared straight at Kieran and finally reacted.

"Master Kieran, you should humble yourself a little."

After he said that, he reached out, ready to feed Kieran again.

Yet, Kieran still refused to eat. Instead, he sneered as he raised his chin, speaking in an arrogant tone, "Are you telling me to be humble around you?"

As he said this, he reached out with his tied hand to press the watch on his wrist behind his back.

He had modified this watch to allow distress signals to be sent. It was also the trump card that he had all these while.

At the same time, Tobias, who had been waiting for an update, finally received the distress signal from Kieran.

He immediately called his assistant and instructed, "Go and check where this signal is coming from."

"All right, Mr. Sawyer."

The assistant knew it was a distress signal from Kieran, so he dared not delay as he immediately sent the address to be decoded.

It didn't take long before the IT department located where the signal was sent from.

As soon as the assistant got the results, he returned to the chairman's office immediately. "Mr. Sawyer, we've found the coordinates of the signal. It's from an abandoned food factory in the suburbs."

"Prepare the car. Send the coordinates to the police and get them to meet us there!"

As soon as Tobias said that, he rushed out of the office.

Half an hour later, the two parties met on the outskirts of town.

There was a fierce and frightening look in Tobias' eyes as he looked at the abandoned food factory situated not far away.

At this time, a police officer in charge of the case hurried over and spoke respectfully, "Mr. Sawyer, I'm afraid it might be chaotic during the rescue. It would be best for you to just wait here for the news."

Tobias did not refuse.

An old man like him would be of no help as well.

This was also coupled with his trust in his men and the police force.

Regardless, he seemed to have thought of something and explained, "The kidnappers shouldn't know that we're here. I hope you can rescue Kieran without alerting them. I don't want any accidents to happen throughout the rescue."

"Rest assured, Mr. Sawyer. I won't let anything happen to the vice president."

The owner of the voice was Kieran's assistant, who spoke gravely.

He felt incredibly guilty about what had happened to his boss.

Kieran wouldn't have been kidnapped if it weren't for his negligence.

Just as he was about to drown himself in guilt, the lead police officer walked over.

"Sir, we will split the team into two. We will first approach the factory and survey the surrounding area to get a feel of the other party's numbers. It is only then that we decide our next move. This is so they wouldn't be forced to hurt Master Kieran in any way."

Kieran's assistant naturally agreed with this plan.

After all, he was worried that once the kidnappers found out, Kieran might be in danger.

Just like that, a group of people began to lurk toward the food factor.

Inside, Kieran wasn't just sitting idly. Instead, he kept provoking the kidnappers in various ways.

He knew that these kidnappers wouldn't dare to do anything to him.

"Yo, I need to pee."

The same man walked in after hearing the voice.

He stared at Kieran for a few seconds and warned, "Master Kieran, you better not be plotting anything else."

After he warned Kieran, the man still brought him out to the toilet.

Little did they know that this alerted the police force outside the building, who immediately turned back and reported their findings.

Always Been Yours Chapter 993

Saving Kieran

Edward and the police officer received the news simultaneously that there were not more than ten kidnappers in the area. However, Edward was still worried, "Did you manage to see Vice President Sawyer?"

"Yes," his subordinate replied while nodding his head. Then, he added, "How is he? Is he hurt?"

"It was too dark, and I couldn't see him clearly. But judging from his movements, it looks like he's fine." Edward breathed a sigh of relief at those words.

At that moment, a police officer's voice came through the walkie-talkie, "We've cleared out the scene, Mr. Jackson. Should we go in together in about a minute to save Master Kieran?"

"Yes, but be careful not to let the kidnappers harm Vice President Sawyer," Edward ordered before switching off the walkie-talkie and signaling to his men to get ready for the rescue.

In the dark of the night, a group of ten agile men quietly approached the food factory. It was still and silent, but the air was humid, hinting at the storm that was coming.

The kidnappers in the food factory did not realize their idle time was about to end in a flurry of movement.

It wasn't until the police, and Edward's men suddenly burst in that they realized they had been had. "Don't move! Police!"

The kidnappers were rightfully frightened as they laid their terrified eyes on the police that came out of nowhere, and a group of burly bodyguards.

"Run! The police are here!" Someone from the kidnappers' group shouted, and the rest of the kidnappers turned around to run. They didn't even try to resist.

The police and Edward were taken aback at their reaction, but they responded quickly.

"Mr. Jackson, I'll go after them. You should check on Master Kieran."

The lead police officer told Edward and went with the other officers after the kidnappers.

In the warehouse, Kieran had heard the commotion outside and sat on the floor without a care in the world. Edward burst through the door with his men and saw the unscathed Kieran before he heaved a huge sigh of relief.

He strode up to Kieran to untie him and apologized, "I'm sorry, Vice President Sawyer. My negligence had caused this to happen."

Then, as Kieran regained his freedom, he massaged his wrists and replied darkly, "It's not your fault. You wouldn't be able to prevent this no matter what because the other party didn't abduct me in broad daylight."

Edward nodded as he felt the worry and guilt within him loosen at Kieran's reassurance.

Even though Kieran was usually laid-back, he was still sensible. So it seemed like Edward could keep his job.

Just as he was overthinking matters, Kieran's dark voice rang in his ear again. "Managed to catch the kidnappers?"

"The police are on them. I've also sent a few of our men to help. They can't run away." Indeed, Edward was right. None of the kidnappers escaped as they were all captured.

Kieran's eyes landed on the man who had warned him previously, and he walked over with a gloomy look before kicking him.

The man fell to the floor as fear filled his eyes.

However, a leg pressed against his chest before he could get up, and a cold voice rang above him. "So, who was it that wanted me kidnapped? What's your objective?" Kieran bent down and interrogated the man.

The man was scared stiff but still kept his silence.

Kieran narrowed his eyes dangerously. "Huh. You're quite a professional. Do you think I can't do anything if you don't speak?" he threatened as he stepped harder against the man's chest.

Despite feeling that these men did not have ill intentions toward him and did not dare hurt him during the kidnap, Kieran still needed to find out who it was since he wasn't exactly a nice person.

The man on the ground grimaced in pain and felt like his ribs were going to break. When he looked up, he saw Kieran smiling, but his agony only worsened.

At that moment, he was terrified that his whole body trembled. He had a feeling if he did not tell the truth, Kieran would torture him to no end.

At last, the man pleaded. It was unclear if he was genuinely afraid or because he did not want to be tortured. "I'll say it. I'll confess! Please let me go."

Thus, Kieran looked down at the man crying bitter tears as he removed his feet from the pathetic man's chest and coldly ordered, "Who sent you here? What did he want?"

Remember This Lesson

"I don't know who's behind this, Master Kieran. We just had to follow the orders." The man did not dare hide anything and told him truthfully.

Unfortunately, Kieran did not believe a word and thought he was lying. "You don't know? Then how did you receive the money? You think I have a good temper, huh?" He stepped on the man's chest harshly.

A shriek escaped the man's lips as he pleaded. "Please, Master Kieran. I really don't know. He contacted us online and said we just needed to kidnap you, but we can't hurt you."

Kieran was puzzled when he heard such a bizarre explanation. Can't hurt me? What's the point of kidnapping me, then?

Kieran looked at the wimpy man below him and figured he wouldn't dare lie to him and stopped interrogating him.

"Bring these people back with you for the investigation. I need to know who it is behind the scenes." He passed the cowardly man to the police.

The leading officer nodded and promised, "Rest assured, Master Kieran. We will get to the bottom of this."

Kieran just nodded and met up with his father, with Edward tailing beside him.

Tobias was relieved seeing that Kieran had returned without a scratch. But, even though he knew that Kieran could handle himself, as a father, he was still worried.

In the Sawyer Residence, Stefania was terrified. When she saw Kieran return home in one piece, she ran into his arms to give him a bear hug.

"You got me so worried! Thank god you're okay." She embraced Kieran tightly as she cried.

As Kieran had never seen his mother in this state, he was at a loss on what to do to comfort her. "Don't cry. Look. I'm back safe and sound."

"You rascal! How could you make me worry?"

After she took some time to compose herself, she suddenly hit Kieran on the shoulder with teary eyes that were still angry.

That unexpected smack made him grimace as his mother's mood swings immediately disheartened him.

"What happened to you comforting me? Why did you suddenly hit me? Come on. I just escaped from a dangerous situation. Am I not your son?" He looked at Stefania sadly.

However, she only gave him another slap. "How I wish you weren't my biological son! Your brother is so smart, but you are so dumb and got kidnapped. Nicholas had never let himself be in such dangerous situations!"

"How could I compare to Nicholas?"

Kieran was in low spirits and asked for Tobias' help. "Dad, help me."

Tobias merely looked at him with eyes that basically said, 'you're on your own, son'.

Once Kieran saw that look, he was heartbroken. So I must be adopted. There's no way I'm their biological son.

As if he heard Kieran's inner thoughts, Tobias questioned, "I'm also suspecting if you truly are my son. How could you be so dumb?"

With that, he ignored Kieran and turned around to call Nicholas to share the good news.

On the other hand, Nicholas was at the airport when he received the call. Even though Tobias asked him not to return, he was still worried.

He had also discussed this with Tessa, who supported his decision to make a trip back to Xerthania.

In her words, Kieran was his brother. He could not just stand idly by when Kieran was in danger.

As for her and Gregory, they had decided to stay in Vienna since they were unsure of the situation back in the country. So, it was best that they waited not to complicate things.

When the phone connected, Tobias' voice came through before Nicholas could ask for an update.

"We've found Kieran. Don't worry." Then, he proceeded to recount what happened.

At the same time, Nicholas could hear Stefania's irate lecture and Kieran's groveling in the background.

"Let's see if you dare to drink yourself to the ground next time. You're lucky that person didn't hurt you. But, if it was someone with malicious intentions, do you think you could wait until your father found you before getting killed?"

"Gosh, Mom. Please. Stop hitting me. Sorry. I admit I'm at fault."

"Ha! Apologizing isn't enough, young man. I'll make sure you remember this lesson today!" After that, the chaotic sounds of Kieran running away as he pleaded for his life ensued.

When Nicholas heard his brother calling for help in vain, he finally let out the breath he was holding as he felt the worry dissipate into genuine relief.
