

"Ouch, it hurts," Dae Hyun moaned as the pressure from Soo Yin's hand made his wound hurt.

"Don't be so harsh. Do you want your husband's face to look ugly?" grumbled Dae Hyun who kept complaining.

"Let it be ugly. It's your fault that you are old but still childish. Don't you have any shame for students anymore for causing trouble?" Soo Yin couldn't help but let out all the thoughts that were on her mind.

"It' was his fault for talking nonsense. He said if you are his girlfriend, of course I was very angry," said Dae Hyun while grimacing in pain.

"So it was only because of that that you two fought?" Soo Yin stopped her wiping. She gaped because she didn't expect her husband to be so narrow-minded.

"Dae Hyun, can't you hold your anger? Should you get emotional just because what he said which might just be a joke?" Soo Yin pinched the space between her eyebrows. Just because of a trivial matter but they crossed the limit.

Dae Hyun admitted that he was immediately carried away by emotions.

"Honey, I'm sorry." Dae Hyun tightly gripped Soo Yin's fingers with a sad look. Admitted that his actions today were inappropriate.

"After this, apologize to him. I don't want any misunderstandings between you two," spoke Soo Yin with a heavy sigh.

"No, I don't want to do it," Dae Hyun said coldly. Thought it wasn't his fault so he wouldn't apologize.

"Why are you being so stubborn? What's wrong with just apologizing? Is that too much for you?" said Soo Yin as her chest was rising and falling while rubbing her face angrily.

"I am your husband, but why are you defending him? You should have defended me," Dae Hyun said with a darkened face.

"I don't want to defend any of you. I just want your relationship to be fine. Besides, what's wrong with just saying sorry?" Soo Yin started to get angry because her husband's selfish nature had started to recur.

"Let him apologize. If he didn't provoke my anger, maybe I wouldn't have punched him," said Dae Hyun with a stubborn nature.

Soo Yin inhaled the air from her nose then let it out from her mouth. Tried to calm her emotions. Didn't want to let herself get into a fight with Dae Hyun. At times like this she should be more mature.

"We'll talk later. Let's treat your wound first," said Soo Yin as she reached for the ointment to treat the bruises. Now she started to apply the ointment on Dae Hyun's injured face more gently.

Dae Hyun kept looking at Soo Yin's face. Observed every curve of her thin pink lips. Her eyelashes were curly. He really can't feel bored even though every night he was always watching her face.

Soo Yin was starting to get annoyed and uncomfortable because Dae Hyun had been looking at her for a long time without batting an eye.

"Can't you look the other way?" said Soo Yin with a flushed face even though she was used to dealing with her husband. She also didn't know of why sometimes she was still nervous and embarrassed when she looked at him face to face.

"Why should I looking the other way? I prefer to look at you," said Dae Hyun casually without taking his eyes off.

"Aren't you tired of looking at me all the time?" grumbled Soo Yin who was applying cream around her husband's eyelids.

"No, I will never be bored," said Dae Hyun briefly as he watched Soo Yin's tiny lips move. If only his lips didn't hurt because of the slight tear, he would have crushed them until he was satisfied.

"Keep those pervert thoughts out of your mind," said Soo Yin, who could already guess what her husband was thinking.

"Looks like you can read my mind now." Dae Hyun deliberately wrapped his arms around Soo Yin's waist so that Soo Yin's body reflexively stuck to him and their lips were also pressed.

Soo Yin widened her eyes, immediately distanced herself, afraid that a nurse would suddenly enter. But Dae Hyun just hugged her tighter.

"Stay in this position for a while," Dae Hyun pleaded. Finally, after Jo Yeon Ho returned to the UN Village, they had the opportunity to be alone in peace without any feeling of fear.

"This is in a public place, don't do things," said Soo Yin.

"No, I just want to calm my heart for a moment so I don't get emotional," whispered Dae Hyun with his eyes closed as he was resting his chin on his wife's shoulder.

Check....

A female nurse entered without knocking on the door so she was quite surprised by what she saw.

"Sorry," said the nurse who was still a teenager and then closed the door tightly again. At first, she intended to check on Dae Hyun's condition.

"Dae Hyun, stay away." Soo Yin immediately pushed Dae Hyun's body away.

"Leave it like this, we are husband and wife after all," said Dae Hyun lightly without caring if anyone saw that.

"Instead, because we're husband and wife ... don't do anything that goes too far in a public place. It's like there's no other private place," Soo Yin grumbled as she pursed her lips.

"Okay." Dae Hyun loosened his embrace reluctantly.

"Why were you in front of the campus? Aren't you supposed to be in the UN Village?" Soo Yin asked because Dae Hyun said he couldn't pick her up.

"Hmmm, I was only there for a while because I had much more important business. I wanted to surprise you but I failed."

"What surprise?" Soo Yin raised an eyebrow.

"I want to take you somewhere."

"Where to?" asked Soo Yin curiously.

"You'll find out later." Dae Hyun smiled a meaningful smile.

Knock ... knock...

"May I come in?" Hyo Rin's voice was heard along with a knock on the door from outside.

"Come in," said Soo Yin who immediately pushed Dae Hyun's body so that he fell onto the bed.

Soo Yin put the basin on the nightstand then took medicine to treat the wound at the corner of Dae Hyun's lips.

"Why did you take so long.. I thought you both fainted because you haven't come out," said Hyo Rin.