

BLACK PLAIN 69

Chapter 69: Capturing Gul

At this time, the four teams of the Black Plain Army were spread in the south, north, west, and east directions, from the east entrance of the Yellow City. They were only a few hundred meters away from each other, but Gul's group would not have noticed them.

That's because Minos' teams were much weaker than them, so these outlaws would only underestimate them. From their perspective, nobody like that would have the courage to attack them.

As for the moment, the attack began, Minos and his groups were waiting for the bandits to be surrounded by them. Only then they would attack them with full force.

At this point, Gul's group was finally reaching the eastern entrance to the city when they began to slow their carriages. They realized that the gates were closed, which was not normal.

Lydo, who was in front of one of the carriages, said it out loud. "Ehh, what happened? Dugal would not allow that muscular idiot to do something stupid."

"Let's get a little closer and see what happened." Chief Gul said calmly. He wasn't too worried about it, for him, it must be something small...

Meanwhile, in the cell that was being carried by the bandits' last carriage, the mother fox suddenly raised her head for a second and then lay down there again. 'It seems that these humans are surrounded. I hope that you all die...' She thought about it after realizing the surroundings where they were.

She had already recovered a bit in that little more than a day of travel. Despite still having many open wounds, she had already stopped bleeding, and the swelling in her eyes had already decreased a lot, to the point of her being able to see again.

A few seconds passed, and finally, the group of Minos took the initiative to start the attack. A horn sound sounded in the air, and the four groups began to move towards the three carriages.

Minos, Ruth, and Dillian were in the group that came directly from the Yellow City entrance gate. Meanwhile, Elen and Eduard watched the impending battle from above one of the city walls.

Although Minos did not ask for their help, as allies, they were here to provide support if the need arose.

As the four groups of Minos approached to attack, the three carriages suddenly stopped. "Chief Gul, it looks like we're being ambushed." One of the bandits screamed.

Upon hearing this, Gul got out of the carriage that came in the middle of the caravan and probed the enemy group. "Hmph, most of them are at most at level 40. How audacious, it looks like we have to teach these insects a lesson."

"There are only those two, who are at levels 45 and 47, that we need to be careful about. Leave the two of them with me." Gul said, looking at the direction of Ruth and Dillian. He had no way of knowing that Dillian was not a fighter, just because of his level. So, Gul thought he was one of the warriors on the enemy side.

Soon after, the seven men who were on the side of the bandits all got out of their carriages and prepared to fight.

Seeing this, Minos couldn't help looking at the cell where the nine-tailed fox was and smiling.

"Hahaha, it looks like this fox beat up this group. Three of them must have died, and looking at the rest, I can see that it was an uphill battle. This is good. It makes it easier for us." Minos said out loud.

And in fact, they had prepared to face ten enemies, but there were only six of them with fighting conditions in practice. The seventh thug didn't have a leg, so even Minos could handle him alone.

When all the groups were close to each other, Minos said aloud. "Attack!!!"

Hammering the World!

Demon Court!

Blood sword!

Smashing the Air!

Iron fists!

Whoosh!

Boom!

The group of dozens of soldiers activated their respective attack techniques, sending many blows in the direction of the bandit group.

Almost instantly, the local terrain was flooded with many lights and spiritual energy figures of varying colors and shapes running through the air towards the group of bandits!

At the same time, Gul's group began to prepare for the fight, activating their defensive techniques with everything they had.

After all, they could not take lightly all these attacks coming towards them. Even though they were of higher levels, they were only seven people, while the enemy group had 54 cultivators attacking them!

At this point, Ruth finally started to move, heading towards the bandit boss, who was also coming towards her and Dillian.

Seeing this, Gul thought with a smile on his face. 'Hahaha, what does this little girl think she's doing? Does she think she can fight me alone?'

Instant Steps!

Fists of Pain!

Ruth then activated two Silver-grade techniques and attacked with everything she had.

Seeing this, Gul stopped underestimating the black-haired girl and then activated his own defense while feeling a sense of fear growing in his heart. 'Shit! What kind of technique is this?' He thought while trying to deviate with all he had.

However, Ruth's speed was very fast, and he could not dodge the attack that was coming at him!

Boom!

Pow!

Several sounds of battle rang out in the vicinity of the ambush while another 60 people were actively fighting. Time began to pass, and the bandits were increasingly disadvantaged for Minos' soldiers.

Meanwhile, Gul had just been punched in the stomach and sent flying in the opposite direction from where he was. 'Ahh, what the fuck...' He thought to himself as he tried to hold himself together to not to collapse in front of enemies.

"AHH!"

Suddenly someone let out a loud cry and shortly thereafter died. This was the thug who had lost one of his legs. He had defended himself all this time, but his spiritual energy was finally gone. After that, he died after receiving two blows from Minos' soldiers.

While the fight was going on, viewers had different reactions. Elen and Eduard were taking the opportunity to see Minos' military capabilities and observing Ruth's great power.

Minos and Dillian, on the other hand, were evaluating the performance of the soldiers of the Black Plain Army.

The mother fox also enjoyed the enemies that had kidnapped her by being destroyed right in front of her. But she was not completely happy, no, because probably her future would remain the same, in the hands of these other people...

Time passed, and the fights were slowly ending. The six bandits that Minos' soldiers were facing had already died, leaving only Chief Gul.

Chief Gul was still conscious because Ruth had been holding on since he was already badly hurt and with almost no spiritual energy left.

At this point, Gul said in an irritated voice. "Miserable, kill me soon!" He was furious that the enemy side despised him in the middle of a battle!

As to why this group had attacked him, well, it didn't matter. As an experienced thug, Gul had done similar things in the past. As long as you have the power, you can do whatever you want. That's what Gul believed.

So, if they wanted the Yellow City and had the strength to take it, there was no need for an argument for Gul. He had already done it himself in that same city. But he could not stand the fact that these enemies were not tempted to kill him, as if he were a harmless worm!

Minos said out loud at this point, looking at where Ruth was. "Ruth, knock him out."

Upon hearing this, Ruth quickly made her move, using a small amount of force to bring down the bandit Gul. After that, the battle was finally over, and Gul's capture had been successfully carried out.

"Okay, guys, that was a good fight. Collect the items left by these seven thugs and then pass on a report to grandpa Dillian." Minos said with a smile on his face as he walked to the last of the three carriages in this location.

He wanted to see this nine-tailed fox up close. After all, it was much better to see the whole thing with your own eyes than for a memory. Minos then said. "Grandpa Dillian, come with me. I think that fox will need your help."

"Hmm, all right, young master." The butler said as he walked side by side with Minos.

When the two arrived at the side of the cell, where the big fox was, Minos and Dillian saw how injured the poor mother was. She also hadn't seemed to drink water in days, looking completely dehydrated.

'Ah! She lost one of her paws...' Dillian sighed briefly when he saw the situation of the fox.

Unlike Minos, he did not know about the magnificent changes made when someone reached level 70. Therefore, seeing that this beast did not have one of her paws was like seeing someone crippled!

But Minos didn't care about that. As long as she continued to get stronger, that would naturally be resolved.

Minos then crouched down and looked into the mother fox's eyes and said. "I would like to introduce myself, my name is Minos Stuart, but you can only call me Minos. May I know what is the name of this magnificent nine-tailed fox?"

Upon hearing this, the mother fox looked at Minos with a shocked look in her eyes.
