

CEO's Unexpected Wife by Charlie

Chapter 17

Chapter 17

Rachel was a little surprised, "Lakey Group is the second-largest investor of this show. You shouldn't refuse their requirement, should you?"

"So I rigged the casting and gave the role to that model." Tim sighed helplessly.

June slowly sat up straight, "Then why this role belongs to Elaine now?"

Tim smiled mysteriously and said in a low voice, "Because later, the No.1 investor, ZC Entertainment, asked Elaine for this role!"

It was exactly what he wanted!

Rachel was astonished, "What the hell! The two investors didn't interfere with the main characters but wanted the role of Barbie Saffel!"

June narrowed her seductive eyes, "The male and female main characters have been casting long ago. They won't interfere. But ZC Entertainment calls on a rookie to play a role, this girl's background won't be simple."

She knew Thomas, the boss of ZC Entertainment. If this girl could take the role, she was probably one of his recent lovers.

But it had nothing to do with her. She was only focusing on Thomas's good friend, Issac, who was her dream lover.

Just as Elaine had hailed a taxi outside the hotel, her phone rang.

After glancing at the caller ID, Elaine raised her eyebrows in confusion, "Hello."

"Are you busy now?" A calm male voice came from the other side of the phone.

Elaine said, "I just finished. What is it?"

Issac said, "I need your help. Where are you now? I'll pick you up."

Elaine said, "For what? I'm at the YJ Hotel now."

"Well, wait for me at the entrance. I'll be there in ten minutes."

The phone was hung up.

Elaine put away her phone in a puzzled and waited at the entrance.

Ten minutes later, a familiar gray Audi drove in her sight.

Elaine walked over. The window in the back seat was slowly opened, and the man in the car said, "Get in the car."

Elaine walked to the other side of the back seat, opened the door, and got into the car.

Soon, the car quickly drove away from the YJ Hotel.

Agorgeous figure was coming out of the hotel. She was stunned after she accidentally caught sight of the Audi.

Did she see it right? That car seemed to be driven by Issac's assistant! When Issac went out privately, he would change to this low-key Audi.

If it was Issac, how could he be here?

"Miss Jasmine, it's time to go."

The assistant's voice pulled her thoughts back.

"I'm coming."

"Mr. Tort, what are you asking me to help you?"

In the quiet car, Elaine couldn't help but ask.

Mr. Tort? She called him so distantly...

Issac frowned. He put down the contract in his hand and looked sidelong at the woman beside him, "I'm going to attend a charity auction party tonight. I need you to be my companion."

Elaine widened her eyes in disbelief, "You want me to be your companion? Can't you find anyone else?"

"You don't want to go with me?" Issac frowned even deeper, and his charming slanted eyes exuded a dangerous aura, "It's rare for someone like you who push husband out to another woman."

Hearing his words, Elaine's face blushed immediately. Even Ian almost didn't steady the steering wheel.

Husband?

Before Elaine could refute, Issac continued, "I've helped you before. Can't you help me this time?"

Elaine pouted and said shyly, "But... I've never been to any banquet. I might embarrass you. Are you sure you want me to go with you?"

She was worried about this.

Issac's mood turned bright, and his frown slowly relaxed.

"I'm sure. Don't worry. You won't embarrass me. I'm in charge of everything."

There was convincing magic in the man's words, which unconsciously gave Elaine a sense of stability.

Seeing that she had no objections, Issac moved up the corner of his mouth slightly and said to her, "Go to HOPE"

"Yes!"

After a while, the Audi stopped at a luxury fashion store. Four salesgirls came over soon.

Only then did Elaine realize that the HOPE that Issac just said was the most famous clothing brand.

Here was the place where socialites and rich ladies came! The price she was worth even couldn't afford a shirt's cuff!

"Let's go."

Seeing that Elaine was in a daze, Issac chuckled and rubbed her head. Then he opened the door and got out of the car himself.

Elaine came to her senses and quickly unbuckled her seat belt. Just then, Issac had walked around to open the door for her, "Let's go."

Elaine stuck on the seat timidly, unwilling to get out of the car, "Well, what are we doing here?"

"Choose your dress for tonight." He answered lightly as if he was going into an ordinary clothing store.

Elaine glanced at the four salesgirls standing outside the car, then she asked Issac to come closer.

Issac stepped forward and bent down slightly, "What's wrong?"

Elaine looked embarrassed and lowered her voice, "How about the dress I'm wearing now? I think it's good."

As soon as she finished speaking, she regretted it.

Because after hearing her words, Issac sized her up boldly, making her feel a little awkward.

Perhaps he had sensed that she was being uncomfortable by his gaze, he smiled, "It's good, but you need the best dress for tonight's banquet. Don't worry about it. I will take charge of everything for you. You just have to take care of yourself."

With that, he grabbed her wrist and easily pulled her out of the back seat.

The four salesgirls walked forward enthusiastically, "Please come with us, sir and madam."

"Okay."
