

CEO's Unexpected Wife by Charlie

Chapter 6

Chapter 6

Chris had really disappointed her. She had thought that he was the sunshine that would light up the darkness in her heart and warm her all the time. Now it seemed that he was just a light bulb with a limited life span.

Crystal sneered, "Really? I hope you would keep your words! I don't want to see you pester Chris again."

She wanted Elaine to completely give up Elaine!

"Don't worry!"

"Kelly, let's go."

After saying that, Elaine picked up their bags with one hand and held Kelly's wrist with the other, and went toward the door.

At the same time, two well-dressed girls came in and walked quickly in the direction of Crystal, "Crystal! I'm sorry we're late."

Kelly frowned slightly and looked back thoughtfully.

After leaving Relaxing Bar, Kelly accompanied Elaine to the school. Both of them had their own thoughts, and neither of them spoke.

Just as they reached the school gate, Elaine turned around and was about to say goodbye to Kelly, who had been silent, suddenly grabbed her wrist and said excitedly as if she had discovered something surprising, "Hey! Elaine, know who that mistress is!"

Elaine froze slightly and then she forced a smile. "Who she is has nothing to do with me," she said.

"She's a new model of Phoenix Shadow Media! No wonder she looks so familiar. Her pictures are on the billboards hanging outside those buildings in B City!"

At this point, Kelly took out her phone and searched for Crystal, then there appeared all kinds of photos and gossip.

"I wonder how she hooked up with Chris, a rich man. She had a lot of opportunities to attend those high-end occasions! This kind of woman needs some rich men to support her so that she won't be the has-been star." Kelly gritted her teeth as she stared at the news.

Elaine put away her sad expression and patted Kelly on the shoulder casually. "Well, forget it. I don't want to get involved with them anyway. I am going back to the dormitory. You should go back to the studio."

Looking at her like this, Kelly sighed sadly, "I'll go back. If you're in a bad mood or need any help, you must come to me."

"Okay, I see." Elaine smiled and nodded.

Kelly had been her best friend since primary school. They knew each other very well. Fortunately, she was there when Elaine was most disappointed.

Back in the quiet dormitory, Elaine sat in front of the computer in a depressed mood and began to look for a part time job suitable for her on various recruitment websites.

Although she hadn't graduated yet, she began to worry because many of her classmates had been chosen by entertainment companies.

There came the sound of opening the door.

The door of the dormitory was suddenly pushed open.

A beautiful figure gracefully walked in. When she saw Elaine at the desk, she covered her mouth in surprise, "Eh? Elaine, you are here."

Elaine looked away from the computer and smiled at her, "Well, Eva, you're back."

"Yes, I thought there was no one in the dormitory."

As Eva, Elaine's roommate, spoke, she closed the door and slowly walked behind Elaine. She winked at Elaine and said, "Elaine, where did you go the night before yesterday? Why didn't you come back? Did you go out with your..."

Everyone in the dormitory knew that Elaine's boyfriend was Chris, whose family was a little rich in B City. In addition, every day after class, Chris drove a sports car to pick Elaine up for a date, so most girls in school envied or hated her over time.

Elaine was stunned slightly, and she lowered her eyes to hide the sadness in them. "No, I happened to be busy that day, so I stayed at my friend's house for the night."

After receiving the answer, Eva shrugged sullenly and joked, "Well, I was happy for you. I thought you finally got through."

Elaine smiled awkwardly and continued to focus on the computer's recruitment page.

It was indeed over but the other party was not Chris.

It was at noon.

After having dinner in the canteen, as soon as Elaine and Eva stepped into the dormitory building, they heard the housekeeper shouting. "Miss Curd, come here. There's something for you."

"Huh? Mine?"

She hadn't bought anything recently...

When they entered the registration room of the housekeeper and saw what was inside, they were immediately shocked.

In the corner of the registration room, there were all kinds of branded shopping bags and a huge bouquet of roses.

Elaine calmed down, pointed at the pile of things, and asked, "Madam, are you sure these are mine?"

"Of course. It was your boyfriend who sent them here. I know him. Take these things away. I can't afford to lose them."

Eva picked up a shopping bag casually. When she saw a new limited edition perfume from a famous brand inside, she patted Elaine on the shoulder excitedly. "Damn it! Elaine, your boyfriend is really rich!"

Elaine became serious in an instant, and she said softly, "Help me throw them away."

There was no fluctuation in her tone, and it was hard to guess how she was feeling now.

Hearing this, Eva put the bag back awkwardly.

Did they have a quarrel?

In the past, no matter how hard they quarreled, Elaine never said she would throw away the things that Chris had sent over. It seemed that this time it was a little serious!

"Baby, what's wrong with you?" Eva asked cautiously.

"I'm fine."

Elaine pursed her lips and then looked at the housekeeper. "Forget it. Please let him take these things away next time you see him," she said.

If she threw them away and he came back, wouldn't she be the one to suffer?

"So you don't want the dessert Chris bought for you?" Eva pointed to a beautifully wrapped box and tried to persuade her to accept Chris's kindness.

"I don't want his food. You can eat it if you like."

After saying this, Elaine turned to leave the registration room.

The housekeeper looked at Eva doubtfully and said, "What's wrong? Are the little couples fighting?"

Eva glanced at the luxuries piled up in the corner and helplessly spread out her hands, "I'm not sure. This is her personal matter."