

Chapter 124

"Do you want it?" Leon smiled at her, "I'll give it to you if you kiss me."

Alyssa thought that Leon had just whispered in her ear that he had bought her two bunnies. She came up to him and kissed him gently on the face. Looking at Alyssa with an expectant look on her face, he moved over and kissed her face. Soon they wrapped their arms around each other.

Two hours later.

Alyssa leaned against Leon, hugging his neck wearily.

Her slender body was revealed. The red nail polish on her toes was extremely seductive.

"I did what you said. You tell me where the bunnies are. Is it true that there are bunnies?"

"I'll show you tomorrow."

"No, you take me to see them right now."

Alyssa wanted to see the bunny right now.

When they went to grandpa's house last time, she saw the child next door holding a bunny. Alyssa asked for the bunny at that time. But when they went to the pet store, it was closed.

Then this thing was over. She didn't expect Leon to buy her two bunnies today.

Now that he had told her, she couldn't wait to see the bunnies. She wanted to know if the bunnies Leon bought were as cute as the long-eared bunny she saw that day.

Looking at Alyssa's anxious look, Leon couldn't help but laugh out loud.

"No laughing! You have to take me to see the bunnies right now. I just love the bunny last time."

Leon had to take Alyssa to see the bunnies.

He had bought the bunnies before. He had planned to buy two bunnies for her for a long time, but he hadn't had time.

He saw the rabbits for sale in the pet store today when he was dropping off a client. He didn't like animals very much, but those rabbits were very cute. He just took one look at them and wanted to give two bunnies to Alyssa.

So, he did. He personally got out of the car and bought two bunnies, a small cage and some rabbit food, ready to surprise Alyssa.

The preparations were done. Naturally, he had to give her what he bought for her.

Leon took Alyssa to the next room.

Upon entering the door, Alyssa saw two bunnies in a cage. They were only about the size of a palm together. The small cage held them. Two little fluffy heads leaned together, so cute.

She opened the cage to get the two bunnies out, but they refused to come out. They were locked in the cage like two poor little things.

Alyssa tried to coax them out with the vegetable leaves next to her, but they wouldn't come out. There was nothing she could do. Looking at the two timid bunnies, Alyssa said, "Why don't you come out?"

Her voice was not loud, but Leon could hear her.

Watching Alyssa talking to the two bunnies, he felt on the one hand that Alyssa was no smarter than the bunnies, and on the other hand, that Alyssa was as cute as the bunnies.

Alyssa didn't notice Leon and turned her head and saw the rabbit food in the corner.

She put the rabbit food in front of the bunnies.

The two cute bunnies immediately ran to Alyssa.

Their tiny mouths came up to Alyssa's hand. Then, they stuck out their pink tongues and licked the rabbit food in Alyssa's hand. Probably because the two bunnies were still too small to eat much, despite their aggressive eating, they didn't eat much.

Leon thought Alyssa was very patient.

Alyssa kept her hands up and felt a little tired, so she put her hands down. But when she looked down, she saw the two red-eyed bunnies looking at her. She suddenly felt a little reluctant. So she continued to hold her hands up and feed them again.

The two bunnies lowered their heads and sniffed around. When they saw the rabbit food in her hand, they immediately twisted their little tails and came over and continued to eat the food in her hand.

Alyssa tried to put the rabbit food into the food box in the cage, but the two bunnies not only did not look at the food box but also stared at Alyssa.

Alyssa smiled.

At that moment, she noticed that Leon had been staring at her blankly. His gaze was surprisingly more serious than his usual eyes at work.

"What are their names?" Alyssa finally seemed to remember this important thing. She turned her head to look at Leon, only to find that Leon had been staring at her, "What are you looking at me for?"

It seemed like Leon had been staring at her a lot since Ella's birthday party.

He seemed to think that something was wrong with her. But she had checked herself, and she still looked the same.

Alyssa heard a small noise. She turned her head and sure enough, she saw the bunnies looking at her.

The two bunnies looked at her together. She hurriedly took out the rabbit food. They ate happily. It seemed that they probably hadn't had enough.

"I haven't named them yet. I just bought them back. Why don't you give them names!"

It would be better to leave this to Alyssa. The names she gave them should sound better.

Hearing Leon's words, Alyssa nodded, "This bunny is white and pretty, let's call it Snow, and this one is Yummy."

Alyssa quickly came up with the names.

Leon took a look at the white and cute rabbit Alyssa said. It had white fur, which was worthy of the name Snow.

As for Yummy, although this name was not as good as Snow, its round eyes also looked very cute. And, it was obviously more energetic than Snow. The name Yummy suited it very well.

"Do these two names sound good?" Alyssa found Leon staring at her again.

She thought that perhaps she hadn't named them to his satisfaction, but she felt that something else was going on.

He didn't even care to name these two bunnies, so how could he possibly mind if they were good names?

Besides, men were careless. How would he care if she got them good names or not!

Alyssa thought it would be better for him to say what he had to say. The two bunnies finally had enough and rolled off to sleep.

She went to wash her hands. When she came out of the bathroom, she saw Leon staring at her.

This feeling of being stared at was strange. So, she asked directly, "Is there something you want to tell me? Is it about us or something else?"

"Nothing." After being seen through, Leon pretended that nothing was wrong and turned around to leave.

Seeing Leon leaving, Alyssa immediately concluded that he had something to say. She ran over to stop him, "Be honest. What I hate most is not telling the truth."

To be continued