

Chapter 126

Alyssa was suddenly a little nervous. Did Leon go nuts?

She was about to move when her body was pressed down. She felt the man behind her slowly approaching her. He whispered in her ear, "Don't move! You're different now. From tomorrow, you should rest at home and not go to class. You've decided to pursue postgraduate studies, haven't you?"

"I still have to go to school. There are still some classes in the second half of the year that are not finished."

"Then you'll go if you need to. Don't leave home without having to."

Alyssa turned her head to look at Leon, who suddenly came up to her and kissed her on the cheek.

Alyssa froze for a moment as she was kissed. She looked at Leon and was a bit lost for words. He was completely different from before. Such a change made her a little confused.

"Leon, are you okay? Are you happy?"

"Yeah," Leon said softly in her ear. Then he added, "Get some rest early. You need to rest now."

Once women were pregnant, they should rest more.

Leon didn't know anything. He just wanted Alyssa not to get tired.

Alyssa was pregnant for the first time and still hadn't figured out what was going on. However, everything went well so far. If Leon hadn't said she might be pregnant, she really wouldn't have known anything about it.

There shouldn't be any problems after that.

Alyssa was very calm. She watched Leon keep staring at her and felt his nervousness.

"You close your eyes and take a deep breath."

Leon did as he was told.

In the night, Alyssa could see Leon closing his eyes and relaxing.

She closed her eyes too and whispered, "I feel good now. You're overreacting. I'm fine."

"Are you sure?"

"Yes. There are pregnant graduate students studying at school, too. Although I don't approve of early marriage and early pregnancy, since I'm already pregnant, I will take good care of myself."

Leon frowned, "If you don't approve it, why are you still on medication?"

Her lie was exposed. Alyssa was at a loss for words. She opened one eye. When she saw that Leon's eyes were still closed, for the first time, she found Leon a little cute.

She moved over and kissed his face, then came up to his ear and whispered, "Because it's our baby."

Alyssa was a little shy.

Leon didn't hear her clearly. He just thought that her voice was a bit small. He opened his eyes and moved closer to Alyssa. The smell of her body entered his nose. It was still that sweet smell.

"What did you just say?"

"Forget it. I won't say it again."

"Say it!"

Leon's voice was a little stern.

Hearing Leon's stern voice, Alyssa was suddenly a little scared. But soon Leon took her in his arms and whispered in her ear, "Did I scare you? I just didn't hear what you just said. What did you just say? Can you tell me?"

Alyssa, worried that Leon wouldn't hear her, simply came up to his ear and repeated what she had just said at a volume they could both hear.

Leon took Alyssa's hand and didn't let go for a long time.

The next day.

Alyssa drove Leon to work with a pair of dark circles under her eyes.

Seeing Alyssa's heavy dark circles under her eyes, Leon asked, "Can you still drive?"

"There's nothing I can't do yet."

She could do anything.

She could study and work and get married and have babies and take care of her husband.

"How about you stay home and take a day off today?" Leon could see Alyssa's determination, but he said, "Your body is the most important thing. Your eyes are as black as a panda's."

"As long as you don't grab my hand at night to keep me from sleeping. Last night, you kept grabbing my hand and wouldn't let me sleep. You had no idea how worried I was. Later, when I saw you sleeping, I was relieved."

"Hmm ..." Leon answered and then paused, "I just really wanted to hold your hand yesterday."

"Really?" Although it was a little late for him to say that, it still sounded good.

At the thought that Leon kept holding her hand because he didn't want to be separated from her, she felt nothing but warmth. The pain she hadn't slept through last night suddenly disappeared.

The car started quickly. Leon was in the passenger seat. The light at the intersection ahead turned red, and Alyssa stopped steadily.

"Why do I feel like every time we get here, we hit a red light?"

"There's nothing wrong with a red light."

Leon noticed this too. It seemed like every time they got here, they hit a red light.

At that moment, he noticed Alyssa looking out the window. He looked in Alyssa's direction and saw nothing. So, he asked, "What's wrong?"

"Nothing. I think I just saw Emily. Maybe I didn't sleep well yesterday, so I didn't see what I think."

Emily should be in C City right now. How could she be here?

She must be wrong.

The other cars had already driven away. She hurriedly started the car and passed the green light smoothly.

After arriving at Hunter Group and watching Leon's back disappear, Alyssa drove away.

On the way, she kept thinking about a question. Reasonably speaking, she should not be wrong.

What she saw just now seemed to be Emily.

She had seen Emily at school too many times before. She was familiar with her figure, so she should not be wrong.

But that figure passed by in a flash. She didn't see the front of that person clearly, and she indeed couldn't say for sure that it was Emily.

Alyssa thought about this while driving. As a result, she almost hit the car in front of her. Realizing that she was distracted, she hurriedly focused on driving.

After Alyssa left, Leon immediately called his bodyguard to check Emily's location.

Just now Alyssa was right. The figure that suddenly appeared was indeed Emily.

He could not be wrong.

But Emily should be in C City at this time, not here.

Alyssa was very sensitive. When he didn't notice that Audrey was up to something, she had already sensed that woman's bad intentions.

Sometimes women's intuition couldn't be underestimated.

He immediately called his bodyguard and asked him to check Emily's whereabouts.

He would find out where Emily was as soon as possible.

An hour later, Leon received a call from his bodyguard. Emily was indeed no longer in C City. Two days ago, Emily said she had a family matter and had to take some time off to go home.

The supervisor of C City naturally didn't ask much. It was just an ordinary leave of absence. There was no need to notify the headquarters, so no one knew that Emily was back.