Chapter 1261 Avenging My Son

Gideon and the rest stormed out of the Smith's family home.

A black SUV appeared and blocked them from going any further.

Then, a middle-aged man in a black suit came down from the car.

When Gideon and the rest saw him, they were startled. This man was Jedediah Lanius, the personal bodyguard of Tristan Westwood. The latter was a recently retired Major General in the Eastern Naval Forces.

He was only several ranks lower than the prime minister!

Gideon and the rest greeted him hurriedly, "Mr. Lanius, why are you here?"

Jedediah replied, "Sir wants to meet you."

Major General Tristan Westwood wants to see us?

Upon hearing his words, Gideon and the rest did not dare to delay any further. They swiftly followed Jedediah to City Guesthouse. They met Tristan, who was clothed in black inside the Peony Hall.

Gideon and the rest saluted before they asked, "Major General Westwood, may I know why you have summoned us here today? Is there anything you need from us?"

Tristan muttered, "Has your plan to enter the military pharmaceutical industry through marrying with the Smiths failed?"

With an embarrassed expression, Gideon mumbled, "Major General Westwood..."

The man waved his hands. "I've retired. You can just call me Mr. Westwood."

Gideon swiftly changed the term of address, "Alright, Mr. Westwood. May I know how you found out about my dealings with the Smith Family?"

Tristan coldly replied, "I'm sure you've heard of my illegitimate son."

Indeed, Gideon and the rest had heard of him; most people in Brimmopolis knew that Tristan had an illegitimate son, Elijah Pierce. Throughout many years, Tristan had been paving the way for him.

However, Gideon and the rest did not dare to answer him.

Tristan uttered, "My son is dead."

Gideon and the rest were startled by his words. "What?"

Without any expression, Tristan continued, "Nathan Cross was the one who set him up."

Gideon and the rest were stunned again.

After a beat, Gideon returned to his senses and mumbled, "Mr. Westwood, what do you want us to do by telling us this?"

Tristan glanced at him and said, "As expected, speaking with smart people like you is so much easier. It's true that I want you to do something for me."

Gideon was anxious, but he dared not reject.

Fearfully, he answered, "Please give your instructions, Mr. Westwood. The Snyder Family will definitely do our best."

Tristan nodded. "I want to avenge my son. Although I'm retired, I'm still well-known as a retired Major General. It will not be appropriate for me to take revenge personally."

Gideon nodded as well. "I understand."

Tristan continued, "That's why I've chosen you to get rid of Nathan and the Smith Family. Once you do that, you'll get parts of the Cross Group as a reward."

Gideon's eyes lit up, and he exclaimed, "Don't worry, Mr. Westwood. The Snyder Family will give you our full support without any hesitation."

Devin also said in a loud voice, "I'll gather our followers to wipe out Nathan and the Smith Family immediately."

Gideon and the rest were overwhelmed with excitement. "Certainly!"

Tristan then turned to look at Jedediah and instructed, "Bring Revenant and Redeye, as well as the Eighteen Arhats to assist the Snyder Family in wiping out Nathan and his family."

Jedediah answered, "Yes, Sir. I'll see to it immediately."

Chapter 1262 I Will Make Them Pay The Price

Soon, news spread like wildfire in Channing.

According to the news, the Smith Family, particularly Nathan, had crossed the Snyder Family from Brimmopolis. They had angered the head of the Snyder Family, Gideon, who had gathered more than eight hundred followers to seek revenge from them.

When the Smith Family caught wind of it, they panicked.

Sean could not help but complain to Nathan, "This is your fault. You shouldn't have crossed Mr. Snyder. Now, the Snyder Family is coming to settle their scores with us. What do we do now?"

Nathan calmly replied, "Don't worry. We'll ignore it if it's just Gideon rambling about us. However, if he really comes for us, I'll make he and his family pay the price."

Sean shook his head. Nathan is too young and inexperienced.

The Snyder Family has been in Brimmopolis for many years, and they're well-connected with both the military and the political world.

Although Nathan and Penny's Cross Group is doing well, it's incomparable to the Snyder Family. You can't win a gunfight with just their money.

Sean was left with no other choices, so turned to the city officials in Channing for help.

However, after hearing his woes. They just smiled and replied, "Don't worry. You'll be fine."

What they meant was that Your grandson-in-law is the General of the North and the God of War. Don't worry even if the Snyder Family is after you.

However, that was not what Sean thought.

He thought that the Snyder Family had gone to meet with the city officials in Channing, and they were now taking the side of the Snyders instead of the Smiths.

In the end, Sean and his gang dragged themselves home as they were worn out and in despair.

When they returned, Sean, Samuel, and Paul were about to have their meal when a servant abruptly stumbled his way in urgently.

With a trembling voice, he said, "Sir, bad news!"

Sean was shocked. "What's going on?"

The servant fearfully said, "T-There are many people outside, and they're all armed. They've surrounded the house!"

Sean's voice broke. "What? Who are they?"

The servant continued, "I think they're from the Snyder Family. They said they're here to settle the scores with the Smiths. They've even asked for Nathan to get out to meet his death."

Sean collapsed onto his chair. “This is Nathan’s fault!”

Samuel hurriedly instructed his son, “Quick. Give Nathan a call. Tell him to take responsibility for what he’s done.”

Outside the Smith’s family home, the spacious street had been cleared of passers-by. The only ones there were thousands of men from the Snyder Family.

Gideon and Devin were both standing in the front as they sneered at the house that had been surrounded.

Jedediah was also present at the scene, he remained expressionless and standing in an obscure corner behind them.

Behind him were two ferocious underlings, Revenant and Redeye. And standing further back were eighteen burly men who were the Eighteen Arhats.

Jedediah and the rest were here to provide aid to the Snyder Family in wiping out the Smith Family and Nathan.

Right then, Devin bellowed, “Listen now, Smiths. Come out immediately to meet your deaths!”

Sean was petrified but still he led Samuel and Paul out of the house.

When he saw the army of the Snyder Family, his expression turned grim as he said, “Snyder, all the Smith Family did was to reject your request for an engagement. Do you have to do this?”

Sean did not know that the Snyder Family was here not only because of their rejection of the engagement request.

Gideon sneered, “You have your grandson-in-law, Nathan, to blame. Where is he? Ask him to get out here to die.”

Samuel could only reply, “This is too much! A cornered animal will bite! I’m warning you now. Nathan isn’t someone you should cross. He’s already on his way. It’s best that you leave now, or you’ll regret it when

Right then, a loud voice came from a distance. “Who told you that I hid like an ostrich?”

Everyone turned to look at the tall owner of the voice, Nathan.

When Sean and the Smith Family saw Nathan's arrival, they could not help but look excited as if they had found a lifebuoy while stranded in the sea.

In the eyes of the Smiths, although Nathan was arrogant, he was very capable.

If Nathan were here to face the army of the Snyder Family, that meant that he had a plan.

However, Sean and the other's hearts sank very soon.

They had realized that Nathan had come alone.

In fact, Devin started laughing. "Hahaha! I'll have to say that I really respect your courage. The Snyder Family is here with so many people, but you're facing us alone."

Gideon sneered at Nathan and mocked, "Maybe he realizes that he's no match for the Snyder Family, so he has given up on resisting."

Sean and the rest stepped forward to meet Nathan, and every one of them was anxious and angry at the same time. Thus, they complained, "Nathan, I told you that the Snyder Family has brought an army to settle the scores. Why didn't you look for more backup before coming here?"

Nathan chuckled, "Backup? I did."

The moment Devin's words left his mouth, a towering man who was close to six-foot-five with a muscular body grinned as he walked toward Nathan.

At the same time, a hundred of the Snyder Family's elite fighters roared and rushed toward the Eighteen Riders of the North with katanas in their hands.

Walters Shaw was born with supernatural strength, and he was like Hercules.

One punch from him could kill a buffalo, and one punch from him could also send someone's head flying.

Now, he was stomping toward Nathan. He raised his fist and swung it toward Nathan's head as he roared, "Die now!"

My powerful punch is so easily intercepted by Nathan?

His eyes widened into plates with a look of disbelief.

The cheering crowd fell silent and was dumbfounded.

With his left hand stopping Walters' fist, Nathan calmly muttered, "You're not worthy to kill me."

With that said, he swung his leg toward Walters' head.

Even Jedediah could not help but frown as he looked more closely at Nathan this time.

After witnessing Nathan's fight with an elite from the Snyder Family, the Smiths could not help but feel joyous.

Now, they remembered that Nathan was not someone who could be stopped easily. He might actually be able to protect the Smiths today!

In a distance, the Eighteen Riders of the North saw a hundred over men from the Snyder Family marching toward them.

The rest of the riders followed closely behind as they charged toward the massive crowd.

The eighteen riders charged together, and the collective sounds of horseshoes were thunderous.

There was a murderous aura that traveled thousands of miles.

The eighteen riders had emitted an aura similar to an army of a thousand soldiers.

Immediately, the expressions of the one hundred katana-wielders who were rushing toward the riders changed; they had realized that something seemed wrong.

Each and every one of them was in pieces as their blood splattered across the ground.

Brave men emerged in light of hefty rewards.

After hearing Gideon's words, the men who had been stunned by the riders' prowess all regained their courage. They raised their weapons and roared in rage.

To them, the Eighteen Riders of the North were no longer formidable foes but walking wads of cash!

At this point of time, even Jedediah frowned.

Jedediah said to Redeye and Revenant beside him, "Where did Nathan find these riders? They're strong. The men of the Snyder Family will soon be wiped out. We can't stand still and watch anymore. We'll have to make our move now. Chop off Nathan's head first."

The recently retired rear admiral of the naval forces, Tristan Westwood?

When the Smiths heard his name, they drew a sharp breath collectively.

Their minds just went blank.

They were only ordinary wealthy families in Channing, and they had no supports from the political and military world.

Now that they had abruptly crossed the rear admiral, it was like the world was ending for them.

When Gideon and Devin looked at the Smiths and they sneer. They looked fearful now which was the opposite of how prideful they were a moment ago.

Then, they turned to look at Nathan, hoping to catch a glimpse of fear, shock, and regret on him.

Chapter 1267 Nathan Is Never Coming Back

It would be even better if Nathan were frightened out of his wits, or went down on his knees, begging for mercy.

However, Nathan remained calm and collected.

In fact, the corners of his lips had turned upward in a seemingly ambiguous smile.

Nathan looked at the two mockingly. “I have told you the Snyder Family is nothing to me. Tristan isn’t a threat to me at all. But since he’s been looking for trouble with me, I’ll settle the scores with him even if he doesn’t come to me.”

What?

Nathan is trying to look for Mr. Westwood to settle the score instead?

After hearing his words, Sean and his family’s eyes opened as wide as saucer plates.

Even Gideon and his son were in disbelief as they gaped their jaws. They thought that Nathan was a man who was very arrogant!

When Gideon came back to his senses and he sneered, “Who do you think you are to challenge Mr. Westwood? Are you really looking for trouble?”

At the same time, Devin added, “I hope he’ll keep this arrogance when he meets Mr. Westwood. I wonder if he’ll be on his knees, pleading for mercy instead.”

The moment he said those words, a large fleet of military vehicles appeared in a distance.

These military vehicles came from Channing’s military base.

As the crowd watched in surprise, armed soldiers jumped down from vehicles and swiftly got into formation.

A tall man in uniform led a troop of soldiers to Nathan.

This man was the Captain of the National Guards, Callan Stone.

After saluting Nathan and the rest, Callan said, “Mr. Cross, Major-General Wilson, and rear admiral Westwood would like to meet you.”

Indeed, Major-General Wilson was Franklin Wilson, and rear admiral Westwood was Tristan Westwood.

The color drained out of the Smiths’ faces. Nathan and the Smiths had just offended Tristan a moment ago, and now, the latter was here to invite Nathan for a meeting.

The Smiths got panicked as they said, “Nathan, you’re doomed. Rear admiral Westwood is coming after you. What do we do now?”

Nathan reassured them with a smile, “Don’t worry, Major-General Wilson has invited me for a meeting. They’re not arresting me so I’ll be alright.”

Sean could not help but let out a huff, “Nathan, you’re too young and naive. Although they’re asking you to meet them, it’s the same as the police asking you to drop by the police station. Do you really think it’ll only be a meeting? They’re going to skin you alive!”

Gideon and Devin began snickering loudly.

It was a brief moment ago that they said Tristan would come after Nathan, and in minutes, the military was here. They had come for him faster than they thought.

Gideon looked at Nathan with a sneer. “I told you that you can’t afford to cross Mr. Westwood. You’re doomed this time.”

Even Devin was laughing at him as well. “Let’s not forget the Smiths, the next will be you guys after Mr. Westwood is done with Nathan.”

All the Smiths looked ashen.

Nathan scoffed, “I said, Major-General Wilson is inviting me over. What makes you think that I’m doomed? This is absurd.”

With that said, Nathan led his men to follow Callan to Channing’s military base.

However, Callan turned to look at Gideon and Devin. “Major-General Wilson has said that the two of you will be going there as well.”

The father and son assumed that Tristan was seeking help from Franklin in getting rid of Nathan.

Both were gleeful to witness Nathan’s demise. They smiled and nodded. “Of course. We’ll go with you.”

Callan then left behind several hundred soldiers to clean up the mess while he returned to the military base with the rest.

In Franklin's reception room at Channing's military base.

Both Franklin and Tristan were seated on their chairs as they smoked and chatted.

Tristan flicked the ashes of his cigarette into the ashtray and said with a smile, "Major-General Wilson, you have a preference for strong-scented tobacco."

Franklin laughed, "I used to follow the General for three years when I was in the North. That's how I picked up the liking for strong alcohol and tobacco."

It was then Tristan recalled that Franklin used to be a minor Lieutenant Colonel just a few years back. The General had been the one to help him get promoted to the rank of Major General.

However, other than the General's help, Franklin had other great achievements that led to his promotion.

Nevertheless, Franklin would not have moved up in ranks as quickly as he did despite his achievements without the General's help.

Tristan smiled. "I have been in the navy for most of my life, but I only retired as a rear admiral. You're different, Major-General Wilson. You're only in your late thirties, but you're already a Major General. Moreover, the General seems to see your potential. You have a very bright future ahead of you!"

Franklin glanced at Tristan and muttered, "The General is my savior, and I owe my life to him. I'll never disobey his orders. Furthermore, I'll never agree to anything that will bring harm to him."

Tristan thought to himself, Why are you suddenly talking about your loyalty to the General? What a weirdo.

Tristan laughed, "The General must also feel glad to have a subordinate like you. By the way, Major-General Wilson, please help me when I deal with Nathan Cross. I will need your support.”

Before Franklin gave his reply, a soldier’s voice came from the corridor.

“Sir, Captain Stone has arrived with Mr. Cross.”

Upon hearing his words, Franklin jumped to his feet and said, "Invite them in."

When Tristan heard that Nathan and the others were taken here, he jumped to his feet too. He thought that Franklin was rather impatient.

All I wanted you to do is to sort Nathan out and not bring him here.

On the other hand, Franklin was standing in wait for Nathan. The prideful aura he had earlier disappeared without a trace.

Right then, Callan entered with Nathan and Colin while Gideon and Devin walked behind them.

Callan saluted Tristan and Franklin before reporting, "Rear admiral Westwood, Major-General Wilson, I have brought Mr. Cross and the father and son from the Snyder Family."

Franklin was about to salute Nathan when the father and son had rushed toward Tristan.

With tears streaming down his cheeks, Gideon cried out, “Mr. Westwood, your men and mine died horribly!”

In a tone even more agitated than his father’s, Devin said, “Mr. Westwood, you have to serve us justice. You have to kill Nathan to avenge them.”

Tritan was seated in his chair as he slowly raised his cup to sip the tea. His gaze landed on Nathan, and he asked coldly, “So you’re Nathan Cross?”

Nathan smiled. “Yes.”

Tristan narrowed his eyes before continuing, “Were you the one that killed my men, Jedediah, and the rest?”

Nathan did not deny his actions. “Yes.”

Tristan nodded. “Did you take my daughter away because she offended you as well?”

Nathan calmly answered, “She only has herself to blame.”

Tristan was rather agitated and he looked fierce. “She only has herself to blame? Well, one last question for you. Did you kill my son, Elijah Pierce?”

“He asked for it.”

Murder flitted across Tristan’s eyes as he hissed. “He was the one asking for death? Very well. He asked for death indeed.”

Tristan turned to Franklin as he roared, “Major-General Wilson, we can lock this man up and execute him now.”

When Gideon and Devin heard Tristan’s words, they shared a look of delight as they gloated at Nathan.

Their expressions were saying. Haha! Didn’t you say that you wanted to settle the score with rear admiral Westwood? Are you regretting it now?

Initially, Tristan thought that Franklin would agree to help him get rid of Nathan.

However, Franklin remained still nor did he order the soldiers to execute Nathan.

Tristan could not help but furrowed his brows in confusion. He looked at Franklin as he raised his voice and asked, “Major-General Wilson?”

Franklin laughed, “Rear admiral Westwood, I’m afraid I won’t agree with the execution of Mr. Cross.”

Baffled by his words, Tristan asked in a low voice, “But why though? We are both working in the military, and we have a good relationship. Why can’t you just help me with a small matter like this? “

Franklin chuckled, “That’s where you’re wrong, Mr. Westwood. We’re only associates. Even if both of us work in the military, it doesn’t mean that I can help you with everything as you please. What more when it comes to something which is absurd!”

As I please?

Absurd?

Tristan and his men, including the Snyder father-and-son, were stunned by Franklin's words.

What's going on?

Why is Major-General Wilson not offering his help and even reprimanding Westwood's action? Why is he on the side of Nathan?

Tristan bellowed, "Franklin Wilson, what do you mean? You're going too far!"

Franklin's face turned dark as he uttered, "The one who has gone too far is you. Your private life is a mess, and you have an illegitimate son that you've been abusing your authority to lay a path for. But that's still fine so I can ignore it. However, your son died because of his own mistakes, but you're asking me to help you go against Mr. Cross."

He then spat, "Why haven't you thought of finding out who Mr. Cross is before you act? How dare you think of harming him?"

Once again, Tristan and his gang were shocked by his words.

As a grim look overtook Tristan's face, an uneasy feeling rose in him.

He stared at Nathan with confusion and suspicion. Then, he held back the anger that threatened to burst out of him and he questioned, "Franklin, who is he? Why are you willing to cross me just to help him?"

The way Franklin looked at Nathan had turned respectful. In fact, it seemed like he worshipped Nathan.

With his head tilted up, he proudly declared, "I don't mind telling you now. He's my savior, and the God of War in our nation. He's the General of the North, Nathan Cross, the one who countless soldiers worship!"

The revelation struck him hard like a bolt of lightning. Tristan could not help but shudder.

He was stunned and he just stared at Nathan. His hands and feet were cold, and he could barely speak so he stammered, “Y-Y-You’re the General of the North?”

He could feel the blood pressure rise in him, and his vision nearly went dark.

Gideon and Devin had been waiting to see Nathan’s demise, but they were suddenly told that Nathan was the General.

The shock that struck them was ten times worse than what Tristan went through.

To them, major generals like Tristan and Franklin were powerful figures that could dictate the life and death of many people.

They had not expected Nathan to be the General, whose rank was much higher than both Tristan and Franklin.

When they realized that they had crossed the General of the North, their hearts sank into the cold abyss, and despair was written all over their faces.

Thud!

Thud!

In all that trauma, they lost their balance and fell onto their knees as cold sweat beaded on their foreheads.

Nathan just looked at Tristan and the two men kneeling on the ground with a faint smile on his face. He turned to sit down on a chair and muttered, "What went wrong? Didn't you say you wanted to execute me earlier?"

Both father and son remained on their knees as they sobbed, "General, we were wrong. Please forgive us this time!"

"That's right. General, you're a kind man. Please don't take what we did to heart. Please forgive us!"

Nathan answered, "Should I show mercy after all that you've done? I've always shown kindness in the face of kindness, and wrath in the face of cruelty. Franklin!"

Franklin replied, "Yes, General."

Nathan ordered, "Send the two of them to the relevant departments. Make sure they are severely punished. I hope they'll live the rest of their lives in prison."

Upon hearing their fate, both father and son looked pale as death, knowing that they were doomed for the rest of their lives.

Now, they were even hoping for death to claim them.

If they had realized that Nathan was the General, they would have never challenged him under any circumstances.

However, it was too late now.

After dealing with the two, Nathan turned to Tristan.

Tristan was a man who had seen the world, so he managed to maintain his composure.

Nathan uttered, “Usually, I would’ve killed you by now. However, your military background has saved your life. I’ll talk to the person-in-charge of Brimmopolis’ prison. From now on, you’ll be spending the rest of your life there.”

As Tristan’s son was dead and his daughter was in jail, nothing could hold him back anymore. Thus, he was not afraid of being locked up for the rest of his life.

Now, he glared at Nathan as he snarled, “Nathan, I hope you won’t think that no one can defeat you just because you’re the General. You’ve laid your finger on me, and my mentor and friends will not let you off easily. Just you wait.

His mentor was the one who supported Tristan.

faction would be formed.

Although Tristan was a rear admiral, he belonged to a faction too.

Tristan's faction would certainly not be happy with what Nathan had done to him.

Moreover, Nathan had risen to his ranks too quickly. He was very young, but he was already a general. There were many who looked at him with eyes of jealousy.

Tristan's words were not empty threats.

With that, Nathan ordered, "Arrest him and send him to the prison. I'll talk to the person-in-charge on the procedure involved."

Franklin answered, "Yes, Sir!"
