

Chapter 155

Just as Alyssa was wondering how to get in, footsteps suddenly sounded in the door. She looked up and found a woman dressed in a cleaner's outfit standing in place, looking at her in surprise.

They looked at each other.

Finally, the woman in the door smiled at Alyssa.

"It's you, what a coincidence."

"Yeah, what a coincidence! Do you work here?"

Alyssa recognized the woman. Last time when she went to the hospital to check her health because of her frequent periods, the woman she saw in the hospital who was yelled at by a man and almost jumped off the building because the man didn't want her was her.

After such a long time, she was completely different from before. She was dressed as a cleaner, holding a broom in her hand, and her face was not as weak as before, but more calm and determined.

The woman was also happy to see Alyssa. She wanted to go out and suddenly realized that something was wrong. She looked at Alyssa with vigilance, "Are you in cahoots with those reporters? Then I can't let you in. I'm sorry. I don't think it's appropriate to gloat, so you'd better go!"

The woman bowed her head, not knowing what to do.

Looking at the woman with her head bowed in anxiety, Alyssa took out her Citic internship card from her bag, "I'm not a reporter. However, I am here to ask Professor King something. If Professor King wants to see me, I'll go see Professor King. If Professor King doesn't want to see me, I'll leave immediately."

Alyssa thought it was good that she had met someone she knew.

With the chaos of today, she didn't think she'd be able to see Professor King, but she wasn't upset. Of course, it would be best if she could see Professor King. She could just ask him something about the company.

The woman glanced at her work card and then at Alyssa, "Your name is Alyssa Graham."

Alyssa nodded, "Yes, I don't know your name yet. Can you tell me your name?"

She needed to know her name because she had given her work card to her. She trusted this woman in part. Of course, Alyssa didn't trust her entirely, so she was going to take a gamble.

The woman obviously didn't think as much of Alyssa. She had met with Alyssa before. And, Alyssa did help her.

Before, if she hadn't heard what Alyssa said on the top floor of the hospital.

She might be dead now.

The woman looked at Alyssa and smiled, "My name is Kelly Wilson."

"Miss Wilson, then please ask Professor King for me if he can see me now."

Kelly was a little embarrassed. It was the first time she was called "Miss Wilson". In this place, people called her "Kelly" at most. Most people just called her "Cleaner".

She felt she was being respected.

She nodded, took her work card, and left.

Alyssa was relieved to see Kelly go inside.

Regardless of whether she could see Professor King or not, it was always good to have help.

A few minutes later, Kelly reappeared in front of Alyssa. She quickly opened the door for Alyssa.

The moment Alyssa walked through the door, Kelly handed her work card back to her.

"Miss Graham, please come with me. Something's been going on at the company the last few days. So many employees have quit, so there are few people here right now. Professor King is in the office. He said he's been waiting for someone from Citic."

Hearing Kelly's words, Alyssa looked around their company. It did look pretty depressed.

Further inside, she also saw a man carrying a suitcase to the outside. Opening the big steel door, the man quickly left.

After watching the man leave, Kelly made sure the door was closed before saying, "The company has to pay a lot of money because of losing the lawsuit. They all feel ashamed to continue to stay in this company. Look, they all quit."

Kelly sighed as she thought of the lively scene when she had just worked here a month ago.

In this world, such things as burning bridges could be seen all the time.

This world was so complicated.

Alyssa said softly, "It's okay. I'm sure everything will be fine. Many companies and people will encounter all kinds of problems, but the results will be good subsequently. Don't worry. The result here will be good too."

"Really?" Hearing Alyssa's words, Kelly looked as if she had heard the words of a savior. She looked at Alyssa with a hopeful face, "I have two daughters to raise. I don't want to lose my job after I finally settle down. I have to find a new job. They're just over a month old. I need money now."

Over a month?

Alyssa was frozen.

She had just met Kelly over a month ago. At that time, she had probably just given birth.

That man was too cruel. How could he treat a woman who had just given birth like that?

Kelly smiled, "I went back from the hospital building that day and found my things thrown out by that man. He didn't want the baby either. He also said we shouldn't be together because we don't have a marriage license. It's actually my fault. I don't blame him. I was the one who misjudged him."

"Let's not talk about that." Alyssa patted Kelly's shoulder and smiled, "I'm here to solve Professor King's problem. No matter how Sky ends up, I'll give it my best shot. Maybe everything can have a happy ending."

Kelly smiled at Alyssa while nodding her head.

Seeing Alyssa made her feel as if she had seen a new hope.

A few minutes later, Alyssa met Riley.

Riley didn't think less of Alyssa because she was a little girl. He pointed to the chair across from him and said, "Miss, I don't have an assistant anymore, so I'll have to pour your tea myself."

"No need, Professor King, let's talk about the company directly. There are water and cups here. I can get myself some water if I want."

Alyssa wanted to save time and directly said the information she saw in the materials.

Riley heard Alyssa's words and nodded, "It's true, but I didn't infringe anything. 'Hydrodynamic' was developed by me and my team together. And, we registered it as a brand three years ago."

"Professor King, this is not the time to talk about that. Venture Corporation showed a lot of evidence to prove Sky's infringement. If not for that, Sky would not have lost the case. So, about those previous evidence, can you tell me whether those are true or not?"
