

Chapter 166

Riley nodded and turned around to get a lot of designs, "These are just some of them. I think they can speak for themselves. If you still need evidence, I can provide you with more."

"Good."

Alyssa nodded. She was relieved to have the evidence.

She looked at Riley and smiled, "I'm going to help you with your lawsuit first now. Professor King, are you okay with that?"

Riley hesitated, but nodded, "At first, I was pestered by Jamie, and then cheated by Nash. But I knew their mother. To be honest, I had a relationship with their mother when I was young. Her two children were different from her after all. I want to get my career going and necessarily can't take too much into account. You help me find a lawyer! I'll cooperate with you."

"That's fine. Citic has a team of lawyers. If you trust me, I can contact them for you. We'll solve the problem as soon as possible."

Hearing Alyssa's words, Riley nodded. Now he finally made his decision. It was not about personal feelings. Instead, he felt that it was not as difficult to decide as before.

Everything seemed to be just one decision away.

When he did decide, he suddenly felt that it wasn't as hard as he thought it would be.

He had to restore his reputation.

Alyssa returned to Citic with all the evidence.

She came back a little late. It was time to leave work.

But the lights were still on in the Citic's building.

Alyssa went to see Hassan.

She told him about Sky's case in detail.

Hassan kept staring at Alyssa.

First, he didn't expect Alyssa to really solve this case so quickly. He had said that before just to put pressure on her.

Second, he didn't expect Riley to finally decide to defend his rights, which was much better than he thought. He always thought Riley would not agree to appeal.

In fact, he had the means to make Riley compromise, but he felt that would be disrespectful. Now, this was the best result.

He lifted his head to look at Alyssa.

She had improved in her abilities. She had grown faster than he had thought.

Ten days later, Alyssa took Citic's lawyers to see Riley. The lawsuit would continue. Until the infringement case was settled, Riley could still run Sky.

By now, Sky was on its last legs.

At this time, Graham Group acquired a department store.

The department store needed to be refurbished.

Alyssa went to her grandfather and gave Sky a contract.

Riley looked at the contract with some surprise. He was even more surprised when he faced the young girl in front of him.

"Miss Graham, thank you for helping me so much!"

"Don't misunderstand. I'm not just doing this to help you. Kelly works for your company. She has two babies. She needs this job. Besides, you're a client of Citic's. I'm doing what I'm supposed to do to help you before the infringement case is settled."

The contract was delivered, and there was no need for Alyssa to stay here. She turned around and left.

During this time, she came to Sky often and met Kelly more often. Knowing that she had worked several jobs to support her children, she liked Kelly more.

People were changing all the time.

Kelly's change made her feel that women were not small at all.

Even though she was tired every day, she was still able to provide for her two children and herself.

With orders from Graham Group, Sky started to revive.

Kelly just got her two months' salary. She was so happy. When she saw Alyssa, she immediately went to Alyssa, "Alyssa, I got paid. I have money for my two children's milk powder."

Alyssa smiled and said, "That's good."

It had been half a month since she saw Kelly again. She had watched Kelly lose weight.

At first, she still had some signs of postpartum. Over the past half month, she had slowly lost weight.

Although Kelly did not say anything, she knew she had a very hard time.

Now Sky regained its old vitality. She wouldn't be so tired anymore.

"Alyssa, thank you."

"Thank me for what?"

"Thank you for showing up. If you hadn't come, Sky might have been finished. I might have had to look for a job again. It's pretty hard to find a job right now." Kelly finished and looked up at Alyssa with sincerity in her eyes, "Not only me, but the others in the company also didn't want to leave. Uncle Stephen in the back office is still paying off his son's mortgage. Aunt Cooper who works with me is still paying for her daughter's college."

"This place will get better and better in the future. I have things to do. I'll leave now. Remember to make yourself useful."

The world was diverse. Everyone had their own difficulties.

Kelly saw that Alyssa was leaving and happily chased her out, "Alyssa, thank you so much. It's all going to be okay from now on."

"I know you're the one who brought hope. We all have to thank you."

"Don't thank me. I took over Sky's project because I wanted to make money. Besides, there are a lot of follow-up questions. It's not as easy as you think."

Alyssa was sure she could win the case, but financing was still a problem. She also needed to talk to Hassan about financing.

Citic had some resources, and it would be best to use them. Otherwise, she had to find another company.

The next few days.

Alyssa had to wait for the court's notice.

Meanwhile, she had to start preparing her thesis.

She was so busy with her thesis that she had to put her work on Citic on hold.

On this day, she was working on her thesis when she got a call from Hassan.

"Come to the company. I have a case for you. It's urgent."

"I told you the day before yesterday that I was preparing my thesis."

"But it's really urgent." When Hassan said this, he sounded surprisingly aggrieved.

For a moment, they were both silent.

Hassan even wanted to slap himself if he hadn't been worried that Alyssa would hear the sound. He had never behaved like that in his life. But he had just gotten aggravated in front of a woman.

Alyssa was also surprised.

Had she misheard?

How could Hassan speak in a pouty tone!

Not hearing Alyssa's voice, Hassan cleared his throat, "Alyssa, this matter is really urgent. You're the only one without a job for now. Just come to the office."

"Fine!"

Although she really didn't want to go.

But if she continued to refuse Hassan, then she would be too disrespectful to the leader.

Half an hour later.

Alyssa arrived at Citic.

As soon as she arrived, she was pulled into the office by Hassan and forced to read the documents.

She patiently read through the documents before looking up, "Mr. Wood, this case is a little difficult. Javon Drink wants to raise funds because they need to expand. But according to the information Javon Drink provided to us, they are not suitable for expansion in terms of both registered capital and customer demand. Didn't you make this clear to the head of Javon Drink?"

"I did, but they insisted. They also promised they would pay us a higher commission if we could help them successfully raise money."

"So Mr. Wood, you're in it for the money?"

"Who doesn't work for money?"

It was true that many people lived for money.

"All right then! I'll do the research. The day after tomorrow, I will give you all of my findings."

Alyssa turned down the corners of her mouth. It was nice to earn more money.

Seeing that Alyssa was about to leave, Hassan said softly, "It won't be a problem for you to turn in your paper a few days later. If you can't, I can help you. I was good at writing papers in school before. In the next few days, Citic's major shareholder will come here. You need to come to the office for a few days."

Alyssa did not say anything and looked at Hassan with a gloomy face.

Hassan frowned and his tone was dismissive, "You think I want you to come to the office? A pregnant woman is so annoying!"

"Then I'll quit."

"No, it's my fault. Don't quit."

Hassan frowned, regretting that he had just said that.

As Hassan looked repentant, Alyssa said softly, "I really don't have time to come to the office. I've been really busy lately. I have so many things to take care of at school."

"Fine."

Alyssa said smugly, "Okay."

She stood up and walked away.

Hassan looked a little embarrassed as he watched her walk away directly in front of him.

He just wanted to spend more time with her. But she directly left, not showing him any respect.

Never mind!

They would meet more often in the future.

Tomorrow, Citic's major shareholder would come to check last year's work. He had to prepare the materials quickly.

Alyssa took on a new project and had to work during the day and write her paper at night. Finally, she was so tired that her body couldn't take it anymore. At two o'clock in the morning, she had a high fever.

Leon took Alyssa to the hospital immediately.

Alyssa kept pulling Leon's hand to keep him from leaving, "Honey, you can't leave. Ooooooh, I'm dizzy."

"I'm going to call the doctor to see why your fever hasn't gone down."

"I don't want you to go. I don't have the strength. I'll fall if you go."

How could Alyssa fall when she was in bed right now! She was just pouting.

But even though he knew Alyssa was pouting, Leon didn't break her down.

Now he would do whatever Alyssa told him to do.

He wanted to ask Wendy to call the doctor, but Alyssa stopped him.

"I've just seen the doctor. I want to be with you right now, Leon," she called his name softly.

Leon felt like all the sanity in his head was being drained away by her voice. He looked into Alyssa's eyes with a little more reluctance.

Leon didn't move. He just stood in front of Alyssa and let her hold him.

Alyssa relaxed only when she saw Leon beside her.

Suddenly a hand touched the top of her head. She immediately didn't dare to move.

"Is it still hot?"

"It's better. The medication used by the doctor is working. Don't be too nervous."

"Did they use medication? How could they do that?" Alyssa suddenly panicked.
