

Love At First Night

Chapter 219

Julissa glanced at Scott and asked doubtfully. "Scott, are you going out this weekend?" Scott didn't turn around and replied indifferently. "This weekend, I'll visit a friend." Every weekend, Scott would go out for a day on the grounds of meeting friends. Sometimes, he would not even return at night Julissa was already in a bad mood. When she saw that Scott did not even look at her, she became much angrier. She shouted angrily, "Every Saturday, you will go out and not even come back. Who are you going to visit?" Scott had finished putting on his tie. He turned around and looked at Julissa, who was hysterical. He frowned and said unhappily, "Julissa, can't you be a little gentler? I have to work on weekdays. And I want to see friends on the weekend and relax. Do you even care about this?" "But you don't need to go every weekend." Julissa had doubts in her heart. She and Scott was a couple in adversity. She had always been confident in her appearance and believed that Scott would not betray her. Scott usually went to work and didn't have much time to accompany her. Even during the weekend, he only accompanied her for half a day. The rest of his time was spent on work and meeting friends. "Julissa, I have to work hard and socialize. If I don't make friends and sign the contracts, how can I learn the money for you and Sherl to buy luxury goods? "I am so tired every day, just to satisfy your vanity. I want to go out on the weekend to relax. Are you so against it?"

Scott shouted angrily, picked up his business bag, and left. The sound of the door closing made Julissa jump in fright. Scott slammed the door and left. Julissa looked at his back and gripped her phone tightly, trembling in anger. "Scott, you bastard! I propped up this family step by step. How can you shout at me?" Julissa roared angrily and sat on the sofa again. Her eyes were closed, her slender body leaned against the sofa, and her chest heaved up and down, Julissa suddenly glanced at her phone. She had originally come to talk with Scott about the text message. But they fought out of anger and she forgot about it completely. Back then, Scott was timid. She was the one who drove the car and hit Judith. If she told Scott about this, with his timid personality, he would probably be in big trouble. Scott had never allowed her to mention this thing in front of him all this time. He didn't treat Judith well because Judith's existence kept reminding him that the Coopers were criminals. Julissa gradually calmed down. She thought, "I can't panic. Even if I tell Scott about it, he would not be able to solve it. I had better solve it privately on my own." She picked up her phone and called her secretary, Joe Hawker. "Joe, help me investigate a phone number. I'll send it to you on Line." Then, Julissa hung up the phone and sent the phone number to Joe. She sat in the room and waited for the news anxiously. She was not afraid of anything, but the matter of Judith would destroy the entire Cooper family. Back then, she had passed through the bustling area of Mayfield. The child who appeared there was not simple. In order to cover up this matter, she did not dare to look through the news about searching for a child. More than ten years ago, communication was not as developed as it was now. They hid deep in the mountains and forests for a few years and knew nothing about the outside world.
