

Chapter 390

However, he still cared about everything related to Judy, so he investigated her.

Frank walked back home. He felt heavy inside. Along the way, Adam's words echoed in his mind..

Just as Frank arrived at the entrance of the villa, he saw a black Audi parked at his door.

Under some dim street lights, a lonely figure was leaning against the car, surrounded by smoke.

Frank recognized that it was Jason.

Frank barely restrained all his emotions, and with the usual expression, he walked to the side of Jason. The closer he got to Jason, the more he could feel the dense sadness that he exuded. "Jason, what's wrong?" His tone was indifferent as usual.

Jason looked up at him and put out the cigarette in his hand before turning to him again. "Frank, I saw Sarah go to dinner with you tonight. Do you know her?"

Frank glanced at him, and then he slowly retracted his gaze. He said in a faint tone, "She's Judith's friend. We came across, so we had a meal together."

Frank nodded expressionlessly. His eyes were a little hollow, but there was a trace of unrestrained pain in his eyes.

"Is she alright?" "She's fine!" Frank responded indifferently. Looking at Jason's painful expression, Frank felt upset too.

Jason was really devoted in this relationship. However, it was useless.

No matter how infatuated he was, he did not have the courage to confess it to Marilyn.

Frank's charming eyes rose slightly as he said "Jason, we kind of grew up together. Are you sure you want to let go of your happiness just like that?"

In a daze, Jason replied, "I don't want to, but my mother seems to be determined about it. Moreover, she recently bought a piece of land near the Riverside District. We are busy working every day. I want to talk about living individually after this matter is over..."

"Leaving on your own?" Frank suddenly interrupted him with a sarcastic smile on his face.

"That's right!" Jason nodded heavily, and his eyes were full of determination. This was the only way out that he had thought of for himself. Only in this way could he be with Sarah.

A hint of coldness suddenly appeared on Frank's handsome face. "Jason, it is impossible for you to move out. Moreover, Sarah may not agree to be with you now." "Why is that?" Jason looked at him in confusion. Frank said sarcastically, "Jason, since you can't protect her well, you shouldn't enter her life. Do you know what kind of people your mother and sister are?"

Frank glanced at Jason deeply, did not say anything more, and turned to leave. Ann's insult and Marilyn's hurtful words could ruin any living person's dignity! "My mom and sister?" Jason frowned as he stared at Frank's arrogant back.

Jason quickly caught up with Frank and stopped him from leaving. He asked anxiously, "Frank, what did you mean by that? Did you see or hear something?"

"Get out of my way!" Frank looked at him with a cold gaze.

As for Jason's problems, Frank was not in the mood to interfere. He was in a mess himself.
