Chapter 481 Win What Dad Lost

Nathan and Kylie brought Benson home.

When Leah and Penny heard that Benson had lost ten billion and nearly jumped off the building, their faces paled.

Leah hugged Benson and sobbed, “Benson, how could you do this? We can’t get that sum even if we sold everything. What are we going to do now?”

Benson hung his head. His eyes were reddened as he bit on his lip. “This is all my fault. I’ll take my own life. I hope the loan sharks won’t hurt my family.”

Penny’s eyes also welled up with tears. When she heard what her father had said, she trembled in fury. “Dad, stop making more mistakes. Taking your life after losing your money. Is that the way to solve your problems?”

She wiped the tears away from her eyes and said in determination, “If there are no other options, I’ll sell the Cross Group shares I have to pay the debt.”

Benson and Leah panicked as they said in unison, “No way. The Cross Group is Nathan and your hard work!”

Penny turned to look at Nathan. She mumbled, “Darling, I want to sell my shares for Cross Group to save Dad. Will you agree with it?”

Nathan smiled. “Money isn’t as important as a person. I’ll definitely agree with it to save Dad.”

Then, Nathan changed the topic. “But it seems like Dad had been set up. We need to look for the root of the trouble. We’ll deal with the person who set Dad up. We won’t need to sell our shares.”

Penny and her family froze. Unable to restrain herself, Penny queried, “The owner of Royal Entertainment Club, Javion, is the one who set Dad up. Will he agree to let Dad go?”

Nathan chuckled, “I can come up with more methods than difficulties can present themselves. I’ll find a way.”

Penny knew Nathan was planning to have a chat with the owner of the club.

She was afraid Nathan's impulsiveness would make things worse.

Hence, she uttered, "Okay. I'll come along with you to Royal Entertainment Club. We'll share the responsibility."

Kylie quickly said, "I'll come along as well."

Night arrived, and lights lit up.

Nathan drove Penny and Kylie in his BMW M760Li xDrive to the Royal Entertainment Club.

"Welcome!" The two lines of beautiful women in dresses chorused.

The three entered the luxurious Royal Entertainment Club.

Kylie looked around in curiosity as Penny worriedly whispered her question to Nathan, "What's your plan?"

Nathan answered with a smile, "It's simple. We'll win what Dad lost here."

Both Penny and Kylie widened their eyes upon hearing.

Is it possible for him to actually win the ten billion Benson lost?

At the same time, in Royal Entertainment Club's control room.

Javion, who was in a black suit, was watching Nathan in amusement with his men.

His eyes lit up in pleasant surprise when his gaze landed on Penny, whose office wear complimented her figure.

He had planned to sacrifice his marriage by using Penny as his stepping stone for his career.

However, when he saw how beautiful Penny was, he thought, This isn't a sacrifice. I'll be getting the best of both worlds!

Right then, one of his men in a dealer's clothes walked into the room.

"Sir, Benson's son-in-law, Nathan Cross has arrived. I heard him say he wants to win what Benson has lost here."

Javion sneered, "Everyone thinks they're the god of the casino when they come in here, but they always end up losing even their wives. I've seen hundreds of men like him."

Chapter 482 The Small Amount She Used

The rules of the club stated that all guests had to exchange their money for chips upon entering.

The smallest amount for the chips was 50, and the largest was 2 million.

Penny asked Nathan how much he wanted to change.

Nathan replied easily, "Let's exchange two billion first."

Two billion!

Penny and Kylie widened their eyes in disbelief.

However, when Kylie thought about Nathan's identity, her surprise dissipated.

As for Penny, after her initial surprise at Nathan's wealth, she recalled Nathan mentioning saving a billionaire when he was buying property and cars in the past.

To repay Nathan, that billionaire had given him a black card.

Penny and her family had thought that Nathan's card only had one billion, but it seemed like the card had more than two billion.

Even the staff at the club were shocked by his words.

Many spent millions here, and many lost tens of millions overnight, but they had never seen anyone gambling with two billion at once.

Of course, cases like Benson, who had been set up to lose 20 billion, were not included.

Soon, the staff exchanged 2 billion worth of chips.

When Nathan swiped his card, the machine beeped, signaling a successful swipe.

In an instant, the crowd in the club was astounded.

Everyone stared at Nathan in surprise and

The staff was now looking at Nathan as if he were the god of wealth as they helped him carry the chips.

By now, Penny and Kylie had recovered from their shock.

Penny asked, "There's a variety of games here. Which ones are we going for?"

Nathan replied, "Anything is fine. Honey, do you have any suggestions?"

Penny rarely gambled, but when she was in college, there was a period of time when she constantly went to the arcades. Back then, she had played Texas Hold'em and won several times.

She felt that Texas Hold'em was not a game of pure luck; wits were required as well.

Therefore, she said, "Why don't we try Texas Hold'em?"

Chapter 482 The Small Amount She Used

Nathan nodded. "Sure."

So, without hesitation, they walked toward the table of Texas Hold'em.

There was a pretty woman in red playing with several gamblers, but she had won all their money. When they reached the table, the gamblers were cursing as they left.

The woman in red was Scarlett Chapman, the manager of the casino. She was playing with the customers as a representative of the casino.

Scarlett had just won some of the gambler's money when she saw Nathan, Penny, and Kylie sitting down. At the same time, the staff placed the two billion worth of chips onto the table.

Scarlett widened her eyes and glanced at Nathan. Looks like a rich young man is trying to show off his wealth in front of the ladies.

The look Scarlett had fixed on Nathan was as if she was a wolf looking at a lone sheep.

She asked, “Are you all playing Texas Hold’em?”

Nathan shook his head. “No. She’ll be the one playing.”

Naturally, the ‘she’ he was talking about was Penny.

Penny was baffled. She could not believe he was asking her to do it instead. She was not sure she would be able to win.

However, with a smile, Nathan reassured, “Don’t worry. It doesn’t matter whether you win or lose.”

Hence, Penny could only steel herself as she started the game.

Although she knew a little about Texas Hold’em and card counting, she was no match a manager of a casino.

She lost more than she won. Soon, she had lost 100 million.

Penny's face had drained of its color, and her hands were trembling. She did not dare to continue gambling.

On the other hand, Scarlett had been enjoying her wins. When she noticed Penny stopping, she was surprised by her self-restraint. Usually, when a gambler had lost so much of their money, their need to win their money back would have blinded them from rationality.

It was rare for someone to retain their rationality like Penny.

Scarlett intentionally looked at Nathan, who was beside Penny. With an ambiguous smile, she asked, "Mr. Cross, this beautiful lady beside you has lost a lot of your money. You're not feeling any heartache about it, are you?"

Nathan smiled at her. "There's an ancient king who set the beacon tower alight to amuse his queen, and there's another king who betrayed his people for his queen. Although I can't be compared to these two kings, this small amount she used won't

Everyone stared at Nathan, startled.

Kylie looked at Nathan as a sense of jealousy arose in her. Nathan truly loves his wife.

While Nathan did adore his wife, Penny maintained her rationality. After all, she was no queen. If not to win the money her father had lost, she would not have come to a place like this.

Now that she had lost so much as well, each chip in her hand seemed to weigh even heavier than before.

Fearing to continue, she whispered to Nathan, "Darling, she's good at this. I'm no match for her. Why don't you do it instead?"

Nathan answered confidently, "Sure."

At that, Nathan entered the game.

At the same time, a man in a black suit led his men into the casino. It was Javion.

Javion gestured to Scarlett to move aside. Then, he sat down on her seat and introduced, "I'm the owner of the club, Javion Schulz. Since we have honored guests today, I hope you don't mind me joining you for a game or two."

Nathan glanced at Javion and asked, "You're from the Schulz family?"

Javion had on a smile that did not quite reach his eyes. "That's right. I'm from the Schulz family."

Nathan nodded. "Let's begin then."

The dealer took out a new set of cards. After shuffling and dealing the cards, he said to Javion, "Mr. Schulz, you'll be the banker for the round."

Javion had an ace of spades face-down and a pair of jacks face-up.

A look at Nathan's cards told him that the other man had a pair of 10s face-up. His cards were larger than Nathan's. Technically, he had a higher chance of winning.

Therefore, he threw out ten million worth of chips. With cold, smiling eyes, he said, "Ten million. Call?"

Nathan's lips curled into a smile. His next words shocked everyone. "Show hand."

Show hand?

Not only did Javion's eyes widen in shock, but the rest of the people around the two had nearly had their hearts escape through their throats.

Nathan had 1.9 billion left on the table. He was asking Javion to show hand without knowing what the face-down cards were.

A blind bet of 1.9 billion.

Cold sweat was beading on Javion's forehead. His face-up cards were a pair of jacks. In comparison with Nathan's face-up cards, it seemed like the latter stood on the winning side.

However, he did not dare to go up against Nathan. In the end, he forced out, "Fold."

Penny and Kylie cheered. Nathan had already won ten million from Javion in the first round.

In the next few rounds, Nathan kept calling out for the show hand.

Regardless of whether he had good cards or bad cards, Javion hesitated and folded every single time.

The entire time, Nathan remained composed. In fact, he started to hum a song from time to time.

On the other hand, Javion's hair was damp with sweat. His feelings of anxiety were written all over his face.

Although there had yet to be a winner between Nathan and Javion, the one who was winning was obvious.

Penny and Kylie looked at each other. Both were in admiration of Nathan.

Texas Hold'em was supposedly a game of luck and wits, but Nathan had forced the game to become only a game of luck.

In this round, Javion had an ace of hearts and a three of hearts face-up. For his face-down card, he had an ace of diamonds.

On the other hand, Nathan's face-up cards were a king and a three.

At best, Nathan would have a pair of kings. Javion already had a pair of aces, and he had a high chance of winning.

Should I try and compete with Nathan?

1.9 billion at once.

Javion gritted as he hesitated. Cold sweat continued to roll down from his head.

Nathan laughed, "Javion, Javion."

Only after Nathan called out his name twice did Javion raise his head to look at him in a daze.

With a confident smile, Nathan uttered, “Javion, you’ve lost. Don’t you know that?”

Javion continued to stare at Nathan, confused. Evidently, he did not understand what Nathan meant.

Nathan explained, “Honestly, I know blind bet is about luck. In terms of luck, you have much better cards than me for quite a few times, but you always fold. To win a match, you need luck, wits, and courage. Putting luck aside, you’ve lost in the competition of wits and courage. Be a good man, and scam back to Alberesque. Upon hearing, Javion exploded in fury. The red crept up his neck as he shouted, “Fine. I’ll compete against you this time. Show hand. Keep dealing the cards!”

Nathan guffawed, “Okay! I’ll fold.”

Javion was dumbfounded. “You’re folding? Didn’t you say show hand earlier?”

Nathan laughed, “You’re the banker for this round. You said show hand, but I haven’t said I’d call. I choose to fold. Hahaha!”

Penny and Kylie could not help but laugh as they covered their mouths.

Even the dealer said to Javion awkwardly, “Yes. Mr. Schulz, you’re the banker for this round. Mr. Cross has yet to call.”

Instantly, something in Javion’s mind exploded. He nearly flipped the table in rage.

In the following rounds, Javion became too immersed in the game. He started counting the amount he was left with. In a short period of time, he had lost billions.

Scarlett and his other employees could not help but persuade him not to continue gambling.

However, his losses had already blinded him. Raising his arm, he slapped Scarlett and cursed, "Scram! I won't believe that I'm no match for him. I have to beat him!"

It was impossible for him to win when he had this mindset.

In the end, Javion lost over ten billion.

Nathan looked at the maniacal Javion, whose eyes were bloodshot and whose back was soaked with sweat. Calmly, he muttered, "I said, you're no match for me. The money I've won from you will be more than enough to return what my dad owes you. Honey, Kylie, leave ten billion chips here. Exchange our two billion back, and let's go."

Penny and Kylie were both staring at Nathan with looks of admiration.

Chapter 484 You Are Amazing

Nathan's too amazing!

*He actually managed to win everything
Benson had lost!*

Excitedly, Penny leaned toward him and pecked a kiss on Nathan's cheek. "Darling, you're amazing!"

Soon, Nathan got back the two billion he had started with.

When it was transferred back to his account, he handed the remaining millions of chips to the dealer beside him. "Split it among yourselves."

The dealer and the other staff's eyes nearly popped out of their sockets.

It was common for winning customers to tip them, but not in tens of millions; this was the first time they had encountered a situation like this.

All of them started expressing their gratitude toward Nathan.

Chapter 484 You Are Amazing

There were around two hundred staff in the casino. After splitting evenly, everyone could get hundreds of thousands worth of tips. It was worth a year of their pay!

Just as Nathan was about to leave the place with Penny and Kylie, Javion, who was in a daze earlier, sobered up.

With more than twenty men of his, he rushed after them and roared, “Stay right there! I haven’t permitted you to leave yet!”

Nathan turned to look at the angry Javion before sneering, “What’s wrong? Are you trying to play dirty after losing?”

Javion grinned. “Your father-in-law owes me ten billion, but it’s been half a day since then. Now, the interest is two billion!”

Upon hearing, Penny and Kylie let out a howl of surprise. Penny seethed, “You’re a cruel man! You’re asking for two billion of interest for half a day. You’re not a loan shark; you’re a glutton!”

Javion scoffed, "Don't blame me for being ruthless. Charge, men! Break his arms and legs! Wreck him!"

Immediately, the twenty men Javion had brought from the Schulz family moved in preparation to beat Nathan up.

Penny and Kylie tensed up.

Right then, the doors of the Royal Entertainment Club slammed open.

Next, they saw a tall man leading a group of his men swarmed into the place. It was the King of the Underground, Thomas Dunn.

As Thomas walked in, he swept his gaze around the interior of the Royal Entertainment Club. He cursed, "F, didn't I establish early on that no one's allowed to open any other casinos in Channing? I can't believe there's one as large as this."

Thomas frowned. “I don’t care who you are. Anyone who does gambling, drugs, or prostitution in Channing will end up miserable. Destroy this place.”

The moment Thomas gave his instructions, the men behind him raised their steel pipes and wrecked the place.

Javion’s men rushed up to fight with Thomas’ men.

However, Thomas had brought more men than Javion did. In minutes, many of Javion’s men were all on the ground.

Thomas ignored the ongoing chaos around him. He walked to Nathan and greeted respectfully, “Master. Mistress.”

Nathan replied, “Good job, Thomas.”

Thomas broke into a joyful smile when he received Nathan’s praise.

Javion watched his club destroyed by Thomas' men in shock and fury. He cried out, "Nathan, how dare you tell your men to destroy my place. I'll kill you!"

The look in Nathan's eyes turned cold.

"Slap him."

"Yes, sir!"

Thomas' reply came quick. He was in front of Javion in a blink of an eye. He raised his hand and swiftly gave Javion a tight slap.

The force had been so great that Javion's mouth began bleeding, and he had lost some teeth.

With lingering anger, Thomas pressed his hands on Javion's shoulder and bellowed, "Kneel to Master!"

Thomas was a man with a strong build. In the past, he was a member of Nathan's National Guards. His arm power was terrifying, and he immediately forced Javion to his knees with a loud slam. Javion's knees made clear sounds of

“Ah!”

Javion screamed in agony.

Thomas turned to Nathan and waited for more instructions. “Master, how shall we deal with him?”

Nathan muttered, “Teach him a lesson, and make him an example for the rest.”

Thomas intoned, “Yes, Master.”

Nathan, Penny, and Kylie turned to leave as the sound of breaking bones and Javion’s screams rang out from behind them.

By the time they returned home, it was past nine at night.

Benson was slumped on the sofa, and Leah was hugging Queenie. They all had worried looks on their faces.

When they saw Nathan’s return, Leah hurriedly asked, “Nathan, how was it?”

Leah placed Queenie down to hold Penny’s hands. In concern, she asked, “Penn, is Nathan telling the truth?”

Benson and the rest were overjoyed. They insisted on knowing how the problem had been solved.

Benson exclaimed, "My son-in-law's the best. You actually won ten billion! That's impressive."

Leah warned, "Benson, I'm warning you now. You're not allowed to gamble from now on. If I find out you're gambling again, I'll divorce you on the spot."

Benson hurriedly reassured, "Leah, I won't gamble anymore. I was set up by Dad and his family, as well as Javion. You know I never gamble."

Leah hissed, "Your dad is inhumane. I can't believe he's setting up his own family."

Then, Leah turned to the other three and reminded them, “Although Nathan was lucky to win the money back this time, you shouldn’t gamble in the future. Do you hear me?”

The three chorused, “Of course.”

Only then did Leah smiled in satisfaction. She stood up and said, “You haven’t had your dinner, right? I’ll heat up the food for you now.”

At the Smith family’s estate, Sean’s family and Louie’s group had just heard of Javion’s incident.

Complicated looks were displayed by Sean’s family. They had cooperated with Javion to set Benson up in hopes of forcing Benson and his family to a dead end. That way, Penny would have no choice but to marry Javion.

However, Nathan had unexpectedly won the money back.

Ten billion!

He paused before continuing, "Sir is furious. He's been pressuring me with calls. I have to deal with Nathan in the remaining two days."

After listening, Sean and the rest quickly uttered, "The Smiths will listen to your instructions and do our best to cooperate with you."

I've killed Nathan, your family will have to do their part in persuading Penny to marry the oldest grandson of the Schulz family."

Sean's family and Louie's men responded in unison, "Yes."

In the middle of the night at Wigston Club.

Thomas had been staying overnight here in recent days. In a way, it was Thomas' second home.

However, tonight, a group of uninvited guests had come.

The guards by the club's entrance had their limbs broken and thrown to the floor like ragdolls.

Louie, in full black attire, had a sharp look in his eyes. His left hand was behind his back, and his right hand was playing with two steel balls. He led his men and strode into the club.

After sweeping his gaze across the frightened servers, he commanded, "Tell Thomas Dunn to come out and surrender to his death.”

Soon, Thomas brought his men out with infuriated expressions.

Thomas looked at Louie in confusion as he asked, “Who are you?”

Louie scoffed, “An ignorant and foolish man you are.”

One of Thomas’ men stepped forward in anger and jabbed a finger at Louie.

“Who the hell do you think you are to curse at Thomas?”

The look in Louie’s eyes turned cold.

“Death is befitting for a barking dog.”

At that, one of the two steel balls he was playing with in his hand shot out like a bullet.

Thomas cried out, “Be careful!”

Unfortunately, his warning came far too late. Unable to dodge it, the steel ball had collided with that man's forehead.

The fury in Thomas' eyes would have melted Louie if it could. At the same time, Thomas' men flew into a rage as well.

Thomas snarled, "Fight me if you dare. You're just a coward if you bully the weaker ones."

Louie scoffed, "That's exactly what I'll do tonight."

With that said, he threw out the remaining steel ball in his hand in Thomas' direction.

Thomas' men were still standing behind him. If he dodged it, the steel ball was going to kill yet another of his men.

Hence, he could only stop it with his bare hands.

His right hand interrupted the path of the ball, and the impact numbed his entire right arm.

Right then, Louie ran forward, as swift as the wind.

Each step Louie took on the marble floor left a series of faint marks.

Whoosh!

Louie's fist swung toward Thomas' chest.

Thomas threw the steel ball aside as he forced his right arm up to throw a punch at the incoming fist.

Chapter 487 Give You Two Choices

Bang!

The two men's fists collided.

Louie remained steady, but Thomas huffed as he took a few steps back.

After the first successful punch, Louie started raining punches. This was a move he had learned from his family.

Three punches shattered Thomas' defense. Pulling back his arm, Louie sent another punch toward Thomas' chest.

Bang!

Thomas spat out a mouthful of blood as he flew back as if he was a kite with a torn string.

When Jack and the rest saw Thomas' severe state, they roared and rushed forward to help him.

Louie sneered, "A bunch of fools biting off more than they can chew."

Chapter 487 Give You Two Choices

Then, like a wolf within a group of unguarded sheep, he sent punches toward each man. Within seconds, his opponents were wailing in pain on the floor.

Louie had pulled off a martial arts move— Cannon Fist.

Even if one learned Taichi for ten years, it was incomparable to a year of learning the Cannon Fist.

Louie had practiced the Cannon Fist since he was young; he had more than thirty years of practice by now. In fact, he was a master of the Cannon Fist.

He was the president of the martial arts association in the South and was known as the Martial Arts Master of the South.

Every punch of his was accompanied by a roar.

Every punch of his sent his opponent flying.

Moreover, every opponent would suffer

Chapter 487 Give You Two Choices

from broken bones upon impact. If they were not dead, they would be severely injured.

Soon, Thomas' men had all collapsed.

Louie's hands returned to rest by his sides. He huffed "I thought Nathan's right-hand man, Thomas, would be impressive. Turns out that he's not even worth mentioning. I don't think Nathan can be that impressive if this is the state of his right-hand man."

Thomas held onto his injured chest as he squeezed out, "You can insult me, but you can't insult Mr. Cross. When Mr. Cross gets here, you'll regret being born into this world."

Louie cackled, "Haha! I'm sorry. My main task here in Channing is to kill Nathan. Killing you is just a side task."

Then, he pointed at Jack and shouted, "You. Inform Nathan to meet his death. If he doesn't, he'll have to arrange funerals for all of you."

Chapter 487 Give You Two Choices

Nathan was about to sleep when he received a call informing him about what had happened to Thomas.

He was told that Louie Smith, the head of the Smiths and the Martial Arts Master of the South was the one behind it.

Nathan frowned and reassured them that he would be there immediately.

He swiftly changed his clothes and went out.

In Wigston Club, Louie smith was seated on a chair as his men stood by his sides.

On the floor were Thomas and his men, either injured or dead.

Nathan slowly walked into the club. The look in his eyes turned cold when he saw the state of Thomas and his men.

Louie narrowed his eyes as he played with the two steel balls. After looking at Nathan from head to toe, he asked, "You're Nathan Cross?"

In a cold tone, Nathan said, "I don't like to walk the path others have given me. I prefer to make my own path."

Louie widened his eyes in surprise. The miserable state of Thomas and his men was right in front of Nathan, but the man was still stubborn.

Does he have no fear?

Or is he fearless because of blissful ignorance?

Nathan stared at Louie and continued, "I'll give you a chance to live because you're a distant relative of my wife. Apologize to Thomas and the rest. Then compensate for their medical fees and losses. After that, get out of Channing and never take a step back here ever again."

The other was silent, but that was the true fatal blow.

Nathan raised his hand to catch the two steel balls. He then threw them on the floor.

Indifferently, he murmured, "It seems like you don't want to take the chance I've given you."

Louie shouted, "Still an arrogant man even in the face of death. Take this!"

A loud crack came from below Louie's feet as the marble floor crushed into powder. Like a cannonball, he charged toward Nathan with his fist.

He was like a wyvern; his fist was powerful.

His men cheered for him.

However, the cheers stopped when Nathan made his move.

All Nathan did was clench his hand into a fist to collide it with Louie's.

Bang!

Louie's body trembled, and all the bones in his right arm shattered at that moment. His arm hung limp like a wilted plant.

Nathan raised his leg and swiftly kicked the middle of Louie's chest.

Like a ragdoll, Louie flew backwards and crashed onto the wall.

Instantly, lines of crack like a spiderweb spread across the wall. In the middle were bloodstains.

Louie's lifeless body slowly slumped to the ground.

The men that had been cheering earlier were stunned. When they looked at Nathan again, they were terrified.

Nathan glanced at Louie's body and said, "Look. I like to walk a path of my own."

The men from the Smith family had color drained from their faces.

Their head of the family and the master of the Cannon Fist had been killed by Nathan in an instant.

It was as if their world had come to an end.

Just then, Colin arrived at the scene with his men in plain clothes.

Nathan calmly instructed, "Good timing, Colin. Send Thomas and his men to the hospital. Take over these men. Louie's body will be 20 million, and the rest will be one million each. Notify the Smiths in Channing to pay to get them."

Colin answered, "Yes, Sir."

Waving his hand, Colin gestured for his men to tie the rest of the Smiths up.

These men were not as powerful as Louie was.

The moment their leader collapsed, they no longer harbored the thought of fighting Nathan, who was like the god of death.

All of them were like defeated soldiers as they hung their heads and let Colin's men tie them up.

After instructing Colin to deal with the aftermath, Nathan drove home.

When he returned to Riverside Garden, he realized that the lights of the living room were on. Furthermore, he could hear voices from various people.

Nathan soon noticed that there were several cars parked on the car porch.

A glance at the license plate told him that the cars belonged to Sean's family.

While Nathan had gone to meet with Louie, Sean and his family come.

The reason behind their visit was simple; they were here to tell Penny and her family that Nathan had crossed the Smith family of the South.

Louie Smith, the Martial Arts Master of the South, has asked Nathan to go to him to meet his death.

Nathan would not live to see tomorrow.

Sean and his family were persuading Penny to marry the oldest grandson of the Schulz family, Freddie Schulz. Marrying into the Schulz family would calm the anger of the Schulz family. Otherwise, Penny and her family might end up dead.

Right then, in the living room.

Leah was pointing at the door while shouting at Sean and his family, "Get lost! You're not welcomed in this house. You set my husband up to owe ten billion worth of debt! Now you're cursing my son-in-law to die, and you're asking my daughter to marry someone else. What cruel hearts do you have?"

Sean huffed, "I don't need to elaborate on how powerful the Schulz family is, do I? You know how powerful the head of the Smiths in Alberesque is too. I'm sure Nathan is dead by now. We're convincing Penn to marry Freddie for your sake."

After listening, tears brimmed in Penny's eyes. She mumbled in a trembling voice, "No. Nathan won't die."

Sean sneered, "Even if one learned Taichi for ten years, it's incomparable to a year of learning the Cannon Fist. Mr. Louie Smith, the head of the Smiths in Alberesque, has been practicing the Cannon Fist for thirty years. He's a master of it. A punch can kill a bull. Killing Nathan would be as easy as drinking a cup of water.”

Tears streamed down Penny’s cheek as she shook her head. “No, no. You must be lying. I’m going to look for him now.”

Penny ran toward the door as she sobbed.

Just as she reached the door, she collided with a broad chest.

She raised her damp face to find out the person she had collided with was none other than Nathan.

Nathan looked at Penny’s upset expression then reached out to wipe her tears away. He murmured, “Silly, why aren’t you sleeping? It’s the middle of the night. Why are you crying and running out?”

Instead of answering his questions, Penny spread her arms out to hug him tightly. She sobbed, “Nathan, you’re alive. I’m glad. I’m so glad!”

Nathan patted her head gently and consoled, “Why would I not be? No one in this world can kill your husband yet.”

After consoling her, Nathan turned to look at Sean and his family with a deadly glare.

Sean and his family were staring at Nathan with similar shock expressions. Sean, in particular, was bewildered. He stuttered, “W- W- Why are you alive? Where’s Mr. Louie Smith?”

“Louie tried to kill me, but he failed. On the other hand, my counterattack was a success,” came Nathan’s casual reply.

It was spoken in a placid tone, but it made Sean and the rest freeze.

It was because Nathan’s words meant that Louie had died at his hand.

It took Sean a long while before he could come back to his senses. “Where’s Mr. Louie Smith’s body? What about the rest of the Smiths?”

Before Nathan could answer him, Sean’s phone rang.

It was a call from Colin Dunne. Colin said straightforwardly, "It'll be 20 million to get back Louie Smith's body, and one million each for the 80 people leftover. In total, it'll be one billion to obtain them all."

Sean was thunderstruck. "Why should we give you so much, and why should we get them back?"

Colin responded, "It's alright if you don't want to. I'll feed Louie's body to the dogs. As for the remaining 80 men, I'll send them to Africa's illegal mines to work until they die. If the Smiths in Alberesque ask about this, I'll say that it's because the Smiths in Channing refused to get them back."

Colin's words made cold sweat bead on Sean's forehead.

Louie was the head of the Smiths in Alberesque. If the body of the head of the Smiths was fed to the dogs, and his men sent to die in illegal mines, it would be an utmost humiliation for the Smith Family.

When that happens, not only will the Smiths in Alberesque despise Nathan, but they will also hate the Smiths in Channing.

After all, they all belonged to the Smith Family. They had not given a helping hand when it was needed.

Sean easily relented. He was reluctant, but he had to agree to it.

He squeezed the words past his teeth, "Okay. We'll pay a billion for the ransom. Return us Louie's body and the rest of the men."

Chapter 489 Why Should We Get Them Back

When Samuel, Ferlyn, May, and the rest heard that Sean was spending a billion to retrieve Louie's body and the Smiths from Alberesque, they were simultaneously angry and shocked.

They shouted, "Why should we?"

Sean ended the call and howled at his family, "Shut up! Mr. Louie Smith is dead! If we can't retrieve his men and his body, we'll be dead meat when the Smiths in Alberesque blames us for this."

With that said, Samuel and the rest fell silent.

Sean looked at Nathan and his family in frustration before seething, "Good on your family, especially Nathan. I can't believe you dared kill Louie Smith. You've caused major troubles. Karma will come for you soon."

He marched out of the house with his family once he finished his sentence.

Nathan watched their upset retreating

After Sean and his family left, Benson and the rest crowded Nathan.

They all had anxious looks as they asked Nathan to explain what had happened.

Nathan replied, "Louie tried to kill me, so I could only defend myself. The police have not found me guilty, so don't worry."

Earlier, Henry Smith from the Smiths in Alberesque came to Channing to punish Benson and his family.

However, Nathan had attacked them instead.

Benson thought Louie was here to exact revenge on Nathan because of that incident. They felt guilty, thinking that they were the ones who had troubled Nathan.

Nathan reassured, "Dad, Mom, Honey, they're just the Smiths from Alberesque. They're not as impressive as you think they are. I'm sure they won't dare to come to Channing after this incident.

The family remained worried, but they could only say, "I hope you're right."

.....

In the Schulz family's estate in Alberesque.

In the study room, Schulz looked grim.

His disciple, Louie, had died in Channing. A grandson of his had been disabled by Nathan in Channing as well.

Unable to hold back his anger, he slammed his fist onto the table and bellowed, "All of them are insolent fools!"

The people in the study room were the pillars of the Schulz family. Marco Schulz, Schulz's grandson, was also one of them.

Marco Schulz was a rising star of the new generation in the Schulz family. He was also one of the vital figures in the Schulz family.

He was enrolled in elite schools since childhood, and he had lived in Japan for four years. Marco excelled in everything, including Judo, which he held a black belt in.

At this moment, he was smiling as he said, "It seems like some things have to be handled personally. Since Louie and the rest don't seem too reliable, let me take over the task of teaching Nathan a lesson. I'll take back the Cross Group as well."

Upon listening, Schulz's family smiled.

"Marco, you're the rising star of the Schulz family. Soon, your generation will be leading the Schulz family. Since you're willing to take this task, I'll agree to it. However, before you face Nathan, you have something else you need to do."

Marco asked, "What is it?"

With a leisurely pace, Schulz answered, "The Schulz family has been preparing to collaborate with the Yoko Financial Group. Kenji Mitsui of the Yoko Financial Group

Marco nodded. "Yes, I understand."
