

Chapter 486

Triple-J Javier was determined to sleep with Audrey, but clearly, things would often not go as planned. When he was about to touch Audrey's body, a sharp paper cutter was suddenly pressed against his neck.

Javier raised his eyes to look at Audrey, but at that moment, her eyes were filled with fear as she held the sharp blade in her hand.

"Don't force me. If you keep pushing me, I might cut your neck, and you're going to die. The paper cutter of my blade is new!"

Javier chuckled. "The paper cutter is in your hand, so I should be afraid instead. Why are you so nervous that you even inverted your words?"

Audrey was certainly nervous. From the looks of it, it was evident she still had not realized what she said earlier was inverted.

But it did not matter anymore. What mattered was that her hands began to tremble, so she deliberately kept a little distance from his neck, afraid that she might cut him.

Javier asked her, "How will you threaten me when you have the paper cutter so far away from me?"

Audrey was on the verge of tears. "I'm actually afraid of cutting you, okay? I'm just trying to scare you so that you'd stop picking on me." Javier was so amused by this woman that he was speechless. His urge to bully her eased a lot. However, when he saw Audrey's well-endowed bust through her collar, his dirty thoughts started building up again.

He said to Audrey, "Put the paper cutter away. You don't have the guts to cut me, and this thing doesn't threaten me. But I'm worried it might hurt you, so you better put it away." Javier saw through her right away. It made Audrey anxious, but there was nothing she could do. She initially thought that she could scare Javier, but he did not seem afraid. Not only was he not afraid, but he would also even chuckle from time to time. She wanted to threaten Javier with the blade, but she did not have the courage... Suddenly, Audrey realized something. Clueless, she put the sharp paper cutter on her neck. She was a good-natured person and never wanted to hurt others, but she could hurt herself. "Let me go. If you don't, I will cut my neck off!"

Javier never expected Audrey to threaten him with her own life. He was stunned, and after a while, he said in surprise, "You guessed it right. Clearly, you knew that I'm not scared of you hurting me, but I'm afraid that you might hurt yourself. That's why you're threatening me with your own life, aren't you?"

Audrey was a little embarrassed. Indeed, she could tell from Javier's words earlier that he was worried about her being hurt, so that was why she did that. She turned out to be taking advantage of Javier's empathy to help herself escape from her predicament.

Javier looked at the paper cutter on Audrey's fair neck and finally chose to let go. He had thought about grabbing the blade. If the paper cutter were on his neck, he would do it in a heartbeat

But the paper cutter was on Audrey's neck. He did not want the beautiful and kind woman in front of him to get hurt, so he chose to let go. He felt conflicted because of that.

It would hurt Audrey more when he forced her into sleeping with him, but eventually, he gave up on the thought because of something so trivial.

He could not help but wonder if he was what people call hypocritical.

In the end, Javier did not get what he wanted. Before leaving Audrey's office, Javier left a message for her.

"Watch out for Jordan. When someone expresses their emotions for the first time, they don't care about the consequences. If something comes up and you cannot manage, call me. I left my phone number when I registered earlier."

Audrey did not reply. However, after Javier left, she wondered if she should get Javier's phone number from the housekeeping staff. It was not because she had special feelings for him, but she thought that the way Javier had treated Jordan was quite appropriate. In any case, Javier could keep Jordan under control.

But after thinking about what had happened just now, Audrey blushed. "Jerk, jack*ss, jagoff! You're a triple-!"

Javier, who was deemed a jerk by Audrey, was already driving back. He had already solved their housing problem and the vaccine patent problem. The next step was certainly to wait for the vaccine to circulate on the market.

However, it was not something that could happen in a matter of days. Even if Steve did everything he could, he would still need to obtain approval from certain departments.

But then, the efficiency of those departments ... Like what people said, even in the event of a fire, they would still need to ask for instructions before deciding if they should use water from a tap or a well.

After returning to the R&D center, Javier informed Suzanne about the housing and the patent.

Suzanne was very impressed by Javier's competence.

But she was surprised when Javier asked her to take a seat on the chair and raise her feet.

After taking off her shoes and raising her two little feet, Suzanne asked in surprise, "Are you going to give me a massage?"

"Kind of!"

Javier said so, but when he made the next move, Suzanne was bashful as she realized what he meant. Massage? It was clearly a sensual foot massage!
