Chapter 2591

They had been arguing since they were children, and there was just no end to it.

Brandon smiled and said, "It shows that they have a good relationship." When he thought about his son and Freyja, he looked solemn.

When Ken was alive, he wasn't nice to Freyja. It was his fault.

If Ken hadn't lived with his mother when he was a child, he wouldn't have turned out with such an extreme attitude.

Freyja didn't have a good mother or a brother who loved her. He wasn't a good father to her either.

He thought that even if Freyja ignored him and disowned him, he would have no complaints.

Daisie noticed that Brandon looked sad, so she walked over. "Uncle Brandon, Freyja has my brother now. She has the love of you and my mother too. You should be happy for her."

Brandon paused because the kind words warmed his heart. He smiled and nodded. "That's true. I'm very happy."

The former that Madam Hathaway mentioned was Titus.

Titus glared at Nolan. "She's talking about you, coming uninvited."

Nolan chuckled and looked toward the old lady. "Gran, I finally know why you didn't marry my grandfather. You'd probably never find peace."

"Nolan!"

Titus was so angry his hand shook. He was such a bad grandson!

He walked to Madam Hathaway and was going to sit down next to her, but she glared at him. "Did I say you could sit?"

Titus felt annoyed but couldn't say it.

He had to get up and sigh. "Sal, don't listen to this rascal."

"Rascal?" Madam Hathaway chuckled and put her hands on her walking stick. "All you Goldmanns are rascals. Your son, this kid, and especially you."

"I don't know what to wear to meet the in-laws for the first time. If I dress up too much, it will feel too formal, but if it is too simple, it will seem like I don't respect them."

Diana changed more than ten outfits, and they covered her bed, nitpicking all of them.

Rick, who was long ready, looked at her helplessly. "As long as it fits. The previous one looks nice."

"Really?" She picked up the purple dress and stood in front of the mirror. "You're right. I'll go with this one, then."

Diana finally got dressed and walked into the palace hall while holding Rick's arm. She remembered something. "What about a gift?"

Rick knew she would ask, so she opened the car door for her. "I've gotten it. It's in the car."

Sally Hathaway was pleased to hear that. "You're always so sweet."

Titus was happy. "Well, your son was the one who took care of her. Of course she's sweet."

Sally glared at him in annoyance and wanted to ignore him. She looked toward Diana and Nollace, who were standing, and smiled. "Nollace is getting more and more handsome. He looked more like Your Majesty now."

Diana held her hand and leaned down because Sally was shorter. "Thank you. Nollace does look more like me."

Nolan and Colton weren't very happy about that. She only said Nollace was handsome. Was he the only good-looking one?

Titus was even unhappier. He used to be very charming and handsome when he was young. Why did she not compliment him?

Maisie and Freyja looked at each other as the men standing next to them were treated 'unfairly'.

Colton cupped her cheeks and looked into her eyes. "You don't need to achieve anything. I can afford to take care of you. It would be fine even if you didn't achieve anything. I can take care of you."

"That's what you think," Freyja said through tears. "I don't need you to take care of me. I don't want people to look down on me."

Colton pulled her into a hug. "Who cares what other people think? I think you're good enough."

Freyja rested her chin on his shoulder and smiled happily. "I think everything I've done is worth it."

Her world was no longer dark with him and Charm by her side.

Colton kissed the top of her head and lowered his voice. "Alright. We should share the news with your friends. They've been supporting you all this time."

"Yes, I should tell them."

you're very good at fighting? It means nothing if this martial arts center of yours is gone tomorrow, right?"

Dylan was enraged and took a step forward, but Nick stopped him.

He looked the middle-aged man in the eye and said, "We've been here for ten years. Do you think it's possible to make us disappear by tomorrow?"

The middle-aged man turned around and exchanged glances with the people behind him. As soon as they received his signal, they all charged at Nick.

Nick splashed the cup of hot tea in his hand forward and grabbed the man's arm.

He twisted the man's arm, and the sound of bone cracking could be heard in the air. The other two men attacked him from the sides and raised their legs, trying to kick Nick to the floor. However, Nick had seen through their tricks and took two steps back.

Dylan felt it was not enough after he finished speaking and continued. "Of course, you don't have to worry about anything since you have the Goldmanns to back you up, but our boss is different. The martial arts center is what he has left. He's spent all his savings in this center."

"You said Nick has spent all his savings in this martial arts center?"

In her memory, the Wickams were quite wealthy in Southeast Eurasia. Could it be that he had cut all his ties with his family after he left his home?

Dylan turned around and said, "Of course. Our boss has set up the martial arts center here for ten years. He eats and sleeps here. The owner of this place refused to rent it to outsiders because he didn't want any trouble. Our boss went to talk to him in person for a week, and only then he reluctantly agreed to rent this place to him because of his sincerity. He even made the boss sign an agreement. If the boss causes any trouble during the lease, he will take it back.

"So look at what you've done now. If those people go around and say we bullied them, we'll have to close this martial arts center tomorrow."

Cameron fell silent.

She was the one who had asked them to come to the martial arts center to look for her, but she did not expect that Nick had signed that kind of contract with the owner.

Dylan and the other disciples went to do their stuff. Cameron stood for a while and hurriedly left the martial arts center after recalling something.

When Sapphire wanted to say something, Cameron rubbed her head and said, “Go to your class first. You’re getting late.”

Sapphire pressed her lips thin, and she kept turning her head around as she walked into her school.

After she entered the campus, Cameron raised her hand and patted the red-haired girl’s face. With a smile on her face, she said, “Bring me to your brother.”

The group of female thugs was stunned. This was the first time they came across someone who had a death wish, but this was what they wanted.

They then brought Cameron to a billiard center. The center was filled with smoke, and all of the men turned their heads around when they saw them. When the middle-aged man playing billiard saw that they had brought a woman over, he straightened his body and put his pool cue down.

Harold was stunned.

Cameron turned around to look at him. The corner of Harold's lips quivered as he just wanted to cry right now.

"1... I...."

Cameron grinned, and her face sank. She stepped on his leg, causing him to scream out in pain. "I'm sorry!"

She leaned forward while looking at Harold with a devilish smile tugging at the corner of her lips. "I heard that your supporter is Mr. Selfridge, right?"

Cameron put the glass of juice down, and Conroy hurriedly asked his men to fill it up for her. "All of you will be rewarded handsomely if you can treat her well."

Cameron rolled her eyes around in the sockets and looked at Conroy.

Conroy did not know why she was looking at him that way, so he asked, "What's wrong, Cam?"

Grinning, Cameron said, "Are you familiar with the location of the martial arts center?"

He replied without any hesitation, "Of course."

Cameron stood up and walked forward to pull Conroy up from the floor. Then, she patted his shoulder and said, "Very good. Mr. Selfridge, I need you to help me do something."
