

Chapter 5

Elijah's POV

We lead the confused family towards my office. As soon as we were starting to walk, my little spirited daughter, stopped the rogue man, linking her arms. The universal sign for wanting to be picked up.

After he got over his initial shock and looked at me for reassurance, he picked her up along with his daughter who has been in his arms this whole time. I can still see the shock in his eyes of an Alpha allowing a rogue to carry his daughter.

Liley has a special thing about her, somehow knowing when someone is trustworthy. So even if she is only five years old, I trust her judgement on this.

By the time we made it out of the woods and into the clearing, Liley and the girl, who I learned is named Hope, has become best friends. Xay and Hazel, the older daughter, hasn't yet let go of each other once. I have to say the way they are holding each other looks uncomfortable, but they seem happy with it.

Seeing them together, brings back a lot of great memories of the day I met my little angel.

I see Elliot walking towards us, I mind linked him to take Hope to the hospital while I talk to her parents in my office.

After reassuring her parents that she is perfectly safe with Elliot, and they see that their daughter is perfectly comfortable in his arms with Liley, they agree.

When we get to my office Xander is already there, so I get straight to business "I'm Alpha Elijah, this is my mate Alana" I say gesturing towards her "And this is my beta Xander" I say giving him a light slap on the back before making my way over to the couch to sit down, gesturing for them to do the same on the opposite couch.

Looking between all of us, the man spoke "I'm Mason, and this is my mate Noelle" he looks towards his daughter, wondering if he has to introduce her too, but she is too busy silently talking to Xay, which I can see still confuses him.

"How long have you been rogues and why?" No use in beating around the bush. I just hope it is not bad. Their daughter is mated to our son, the future werewolf king.

Noelle looks surprised at my bluntness but nods at her mate reassuringly before he answers "She has been since we found out we were mates, and I've been one since my whole pack was murdered. Her old pack wouldn't allow her to mate with a rogue so we ran away together."

That is terrible, how can a pack not allow two mates happiness, not allow them to be together.

"You want to join our pack" I find myself asking not even giving it a second thought, they seem like nice people and my instincts are usually right when it comes to something like this. And my children seem to like them already.

Not even two seconds after I said that, someone is jumping into my arms giving me a tight hug. A gasp escape Noelle and Mason's lips and I realize Hazel is hugging me happily.

"I'm sorry Alpha, I don't know what has gotten into her. She usually keeps to herself, she is not this spontaneous." I laugh slightly at the couple in front of me leaving them even more confused.

"They're mates" They look at their daughter and then at Xay a few times, seeming to understand what I meant, but having trouble believing it.

"It is impossible for them to know that." Noelle says shocked, causing my little mate to laugh. "Baby, can you let the Alpha up for some air" Hazel looks up from where her face was buried in my neck looking between her parents and myself, like she only now realizes she was hugging me.

She gives me a sheepish smile getting off my lap and jumping onto Xay, making them both almost fall off the couch.

Her parents look up embarrassed making Lana give another small laugh, probably being happy that for once it isn't our children leaving her embarrassed.

"Don't worry it is not the most uncommon thing that has happened, we have known we are mates since I was five" my little mate says to Noelle gesturing between me and her.

Noelle looks like they are studying us and then turn back to Xay and Hazel, studying them. "Can we please stay here" Hazel asks her parents with big pleading eyes. WOW, Xay is never going to be able to say no to those big brown eyes, poor boy!

"We are already getting one of the pack cabins for families ready for you to move in. There are a few rules you will have to follow, the pups can go to school like the rest and we will get you jobs in the pack. We will..." Before I can continue, my mate's excitement gets the better of herself.

She jumps up excitedly "Xay, go show Hazel around the pack. Get her a few sets of clothes from Malia so she can get out of those dirty ones. Introduce her to your friends. Go, go, go" She says excitedly practically shoving the pups out of the room.

She grabs Noelle's hand making her stand up "Come on, I'll show you around, I can already think of a few jobs you might like to choose from. And I can introduce you to my friends, maybe steal you some clothes as well, Belle has way more than she needs."

Poor Noelle, my mate is going to talk her ears off her head. "Noelle, that's a pretty name, you know I..." That is thankfully the last I hear before they close the door behind them.

I look at Mason seeing him look happy, tears almost forming in his eyes, not realizing I am looking at him. "Sorry, she can get a little excited sometimes." This brings his attention back to me, giving a little cough to cover up his emotions.

"Thank you. Thank you for helping, for saving my daughter, for excepting us with open arms. The life of a rogue can get tough sometimes, it is hard to give my family the life they deserve out there." He says grateful, shaking my hand.

"It is no problem, you didn't deserve a life like that, come on let me take you to see your daughter" with that we make our way to the hospital, while I explain to him a few more rules and other things regarding the pack and how to handle the new mate discovery.

When we walk in the hospital, I see chaos.

Elliot and two nurses are running around chasing after Liley and Hope, while they run around laughing dressed in hospital gowns. Great not even my best warrior can catch up to these two.

"Miss sassy pants, what are you doing!" I didn't know it was possible, but when Liley heard my voice her smile grew even bigger as she runs into my arms for a big hug, as Hope copy her going to Mason.

Xay might have found his mate, but I assume Liley has found her new partner in crime.
