

The Overnight Chosen Wife: Darling, Kiss Me Deeper - Chapter 12

Chapter 12 - Pervert After Pervert

Li Lanni felt her back go tense as though she had just been shocked by an electric current. Where did this topic suddenly emanate from? She was not ready for this. How could her mother not warn her before bringing up such a serious matter?

"Lanni, is something the matter?" Li Yuming had originally expected that her daughter wouldn't be too welcoming of the idea of emigrating. She had grown up in this country and in this very house. Even for someone with temporary amnesia, there had to be some sort of attachment with the place one had spent all their life. It would not be easy to leave out of the blue.

"Mom, can we not go? I feel like I have a lot to do in this country. Also, didn't the doctor already say it? Being in the places I have frequented before will help me recover my memory. Mom, I do not want to be in the dark forever."

She wanted to know her past. Not from stories or tiny fragments that she didn't understand. She wanted to know all of it.

Li Yuming felt her heart ache when she spoke of it this way. Someone who had not experienced it would never understand.

It hurt to be unable to remember one's friends, hobbies and past, unable to go to school and even worse, Li Lanni didn't even know what kind of person she was. She only had to rely on hers and Ji Feifei's words to know her own personality.

She knew how important this place was to Lanni. However, she would never feel calm as long as she didn't know what exactly happened seven months ago. Her instinct was strongly against the hypothesis that Li Lanni had rammed her car against a tree, causing it to roll down the cliff. It seemed too far-fetched. Her heart strongly believed that someone had tried to murder her daughter and Lanni might still be in danger.

However, she couldn't possibly pull her by the hair and shove her into a plane.

"Lanni, mother understands. I will let you think about it."

Li Lanni nodded. There were things she didn't know how to tell her mother.

How could she tell her that she had strong suspicions against her so called childhood friend Ji Feifei? How could she bring up that mysterious person who had been the one to warn her about Ji Feifei? It was too hard to talk about these two things without proper investigation. She needed more time...

—

Speaking of the mysterious person who had sent her a note to warn her about Ji Feifei, they sent another one late that night.

Li Lanni found it just as she flopped herself onto her bed to sleep.

"What have we here?" She sighed and opened the note carefully.

[Dear Lanni, I hope you started keeping your guard up against that childhood friend.

That's just a side note; don't sweat it too much.

The main point is Lanni, can you not leave the country? I will miss you too much!]

Below the last sentence, the sender had drawn a broken heart with a huge pair of eyes, bawling out infinite tears.

Li Lanni slowly let go of the note, her eyes growing wider than the ones on the note.

"Stalker." She cursed.

The sender of this was definitely a stalker. How else did they know that she was leaving the country?

She went through the note again, then rummaged through her books and retrieved the previous one.

This handwriting was rather girlish... but the content looked mushy. It looked like what she thought boys would write to the girl they like.

"This is no stalker. This is a pervert!" She declared.

Pervert!

How did he get into her room?

On a whim, she checked all the walls of her room. Perhaps there was a secret passage or a fake wall like those in movies and novels?

But no, there was none. She didn't know whether she was relieved or disappointed.

"How unlucky am I, to encounter pervert after pervert today?" She put a hand on her forehead helplessly.

Earlier before she came back home, she was so angry that she could kill someone. It was all because someone had dared to drag her into a car against her own will and take her to a mansion.

Only after arriving at the mansion did she find that the mastermind behind it was actually Ji Xiehan. How dare he? Was he a pervert?