

The Alpha Claimed Me Deeply Chapter 16

(Aurora's pov ? i needed to get out of here The thought emerges into my mind as I look at the blood still dancing in the puddles. . It sent a shiver through me. I can't believe I let that beast touch me so Inappropriately and didn't put up inuch of a fight. In fact, I loved it so much, my mind had been flooded with nasty images of him I promised next time, I wouldn't play into his hands again. Whatever sick joke he was playing with me, I'd fight it. And fight that stupid burning urge to have hiin inside me.

Oh who am I kidding ? I can't go against an Alpha. I'd be killed in a matter of seconds.

I pecked away from the window when the door opens again. I could already feel his eyes on me and my nipples bud as they turned sensitive against the cotton crop top.. Lily was actually my size and the top fit me perfectly. The only problem was that I had no bra. "If you're thinking about escaping out through the window, I'll let you know that I have many wolves surrounding my territory. It won't be a walk in the park for you, assuming if you can still walk after you jump out the window," His voice made me shiver. But not in the disgust I felt moments ago while watching the blood. I wanted him to touch me again. My skin buzzed as I felt him approach I don't dare turn around, knowing I would have to have his permission to even look at him.

Or maybe that was an excuse I was telling myself knowing that those amber swirls would burn through me.

"I wasn't planning to," I said softly. When had I become such a liar ?

And I wasn't even good at it

He hums, his heat emanating from him hits my back and I found my teeth sinking into my bottom lip. Was he going to touch me again ? Why did I throb with need and excitement instead of feeling disgusted and repulsed? Why did I need him to touch me so badly that my breathing was already becoming shallow? What was wrong with me?

I squirm when his big hand clamps down on my shoulder and he turns me to face him. I avoid his gaze as they penetrated through me.

“Lying will not help you,” He points out seriously. Retracting his hand, I’m shocked to feel them reach out for my burnt hand and tenderly hold it. “The healing balm should work.”

My eyes fall on the small jar in his hand that he seemed to have uncovered already.

I stay muted and stunned when he starts rubbing the green greasy balm on my bums gently. His touch burns through me and tingles that nearly had me trembling racked through my body and settled in my stomach, I don’t know what came over me, but I found my mouth moving: before I could zip it shut, “DO you treat your female prisoners the same as you treat me?”

Dammit Aurora what the hell was wrong with you? Keep your mouth shut Don’t ask questions you don’t even want the answer to. His gentle touch stopped. In fact, he stops his actions completely. I gulped. I said something, wrong, I am going to die now. I’m really going to die, Moments past. Silent and very uncomfortable moments. My heart beat furiously in my chest.

The sound so loud,

I can feel it, feel it over and over as I await his answer or punishment.

Whichever came first, wouldn’t be good.

Then he answers. His voice went from soft to cold and hard. “No.”

Short and clipped.

His answer shocked me. Yet before I could ponder on it for too long, he continues

“All those who’ve stumbled on my territory and have been taken as prisoners were threats. I don’t do well with threats, I kill them,”

I knew he was gauging for my reaction to his words. I don’t disappoint him, I stiffen with terror.

If he finds out my secret, he'd think I was a threat He'd kill me just like he killed those prisoners.

I needed to get out of here. And soon.

“So no Aurora, I don't treat them like I treat you,” He mumbles. He drops my hand.” Do you want to know why?”

I pressed my lips together.

Did I really want to know why he hadn't killed me yet like the others?

I nod.

I held my breath when he reaches up and grasp some of my pink tresses and pinches the strands. He hums. “You're a very curious girl Aurora,” My stomach does a twist that was shocking yet pleasurable as my name rolled off his tongue.” But curiosity killed the cat, didn't it Aurora?”

My lips press together to stop the trembling. Was he threatening me?

I couldn't tell.

Or perhaps he was warning me to not ask him any more questions. My stomach drops when his other arm circles around my waist and jerks me to him. The air gets stuck in my lungs as my front presses to his, The hardness pressing into my stomach was evident and the feel of it alone made my body catch into flames.

“Until I find out exactly what you are and what you're hiding, I won't tell you anything, Because you see Aurora,” He pulls me impossibly closer to him and I let out a shocked gasp, my eyes lifting to his.

Our eyes connected and the pounding of my heart intensifies.” Your life and your body now
