Chapter 51 She Liked Him

What was the kid thinking?

"You can ask me if you have some questions." Bright withdrew his sight from the stage.

"Have you already known that my mother is Rose?" Doris was very clever.

Today, after coming back from this handsome uncle, her mother was very abnormal as if she had been lovelorn.

For example, if Dougie didn't talk to her, ignored her, or even didn't like her, Doris would be very sad.

Bright thought for a moment, then nodded, "Yes. But I really want to criticize your mother. She not only lied on her own, but also asked you to lie, which is very wrong."

Yep, Rose taught some bad things to her children, and made people around her help her to lie.

Most importantly, she cheated on him.

His tone was so solemn that Doris worryingly looked at him, "Uncle, will you ignore my mother?"

"Doris, it is a thing between adults, and we'll deal with it well. Just watch the concert and be happy." Bright didn't answer the question directly. He chose to evade.

Of course, he was angry that Rose had lied to him. And Doris was her and Sky's child, which made him fail to calm down for a moment.

Doris still wanted to speak for her mother, "I know it's wrong for mom to lie, but she really didn't mean to. She may have some reasons she can't tell others."

Did she have reasons to lie?

What kind of reasons did she have? Why was she reluctant to admit her own daughter?

Bright's dim eyes were dyed blue by the stage lights, "Don't be distracted, and take a good look at your Dougie. If he knows you are absent-minded, he will be unhappy."

This sentence brought Doris's attention back to the stage. She stared at the person she liked, with her eyes full of love and happiness.

At the end of the two-hour concert, Doris could come to stage to send flowers, which was a chance Bright had won after communicating with the Burning Boys team.

Bright took Doris to the stage and she ran straight to Dougie who was standing on the right.

She gave Dougie the bunch of flowers in her arms. Dougie also recognized her and gave her a big hug with a smile, "Thank you."

"Dougie, you're wonderful. I love you!" Doris raised her hands and folded them on the top of her head to make a heart shape. She tilted her head slightly, looking so cute.

Bright sent a bunch of flowers to Austin and Marcus respectively.

Just like snow flying, the colorful gold paper was scattered on the top of the head, reflecting the gorgeous light.

These five people took a photo together, and the concert finally ended successfully.

Back at the hotel, Bright got out of the car. Doris stood in front of him and looked up at him, "Uncle, give me a hug."

Bright squatted down and reached out to hug her. And she also embraced him, unwilling to say goodbye.

"Uncle, when can I see you again?" Doris suddenly felt sad.

She had been happy and satisfied, but why this separation from Bright made her feel so sad.

"Doris, uncle is very busy. Don't disturb him." Rose thought they would never see each other again.

"Although I'm busy, I'll meet you when I'm free. You must take good care of yourself." Bright's fingers bent and rubbed the bridge of her nose.

Maybe he didn't have much time to meet Doris in the future.

But he would miss her, and he would remember that a lovely girl had appeared in his life.

"Don't lie to me." Doris's eyes were shining like stars.

"Doris, say goodbye to uncle. We'll be late for the plane." Rose reminded her daughter.

"Goodbye, uncle." Doris waved to Bright and couldn't help hugging him again, "Uncle, mom is very unhappy today. I think she certainly likes you just as much as I like Dougie."

Then Doris let go of her own hand and ran away. She took Rose's hand and went into the hotel.

Bright stood outside the hotel, looking at their back... She liked him?

Then why she liked him while she cheated him.

Bright turned to get in the car and left.

At 11:00 p.m., the plane took off from City J and took more than two hours to get to City Y. And then it took some time to get home from the airport. It was already two or three o'clock in the morning when getting home.

Doris had already fallen asleep on the plane, and Rose felt very sleepy. She had not slept so late for a long time.

After washing, she went to bed quickly. Although she was very sleepy, she could not fall into a deep sleep for a long time because of other things in her mind.

The next day, Rose returned to YM Group and attended the morning meeting of the design department. Because she didn't sleep well last night, she was very uncomfortable.

After the meeting finished, she made a cup of coffee and drank it quickly. Just after making the second cup of coffee, she received a call from Mylo.

She hesitated for two seconds to pick it up. She kept her courtesy to the client and said with a smile, "Hello, Mr. Barker."

"Miss Linder, I'm sorry about what happened last time. I apologize to you." Mylo, who had always been a rascal, changed his style now, making Rose uncomfortable. Then he added, "I have asked the finance department to pay the balance due."

"Thank you, Mr. Barker." Rose responded politely.

"Well. Then I won't disturb your work. Goodbye." Mylo hung up in a hurry as if she were a virus.

It was strange. Was she so terrible?

Well, forget it. It was great to settle the balance.

Rose put away her mobile phone and returned to her seat with coffee. Then, there was a message of the MSN on the computer, "Designer Linder, come to my office."

What did William want to do?

After taking a sip of coffee, she got up and went to William's office. She knocked on the door, and William let Rose go in. She pushed the door in and went to William's desk, "What can I do for you?"

"I heard that you have applied for transfer to City H? You'll leave here soon." William pointed to the chair in front of the desk and let Rose sit down.

"Yes." Rose pulled out the chair and sat down. She was concerned about him, "You should take more rest. You don't have to rush to work."

"When did this happen? Why didn't I know?" William frowned, his expression was very terrible.

"Half a month ago, I met with CEO Dong directly." Rose remembered the time.

"Why didn't you tell me? And I'm afraid I'm the last one to know about it?" William felt that he didn't seem to matter at all in Rose's heart.

She didn't tell him about her application for transfer.

"You were in the hospital at that time, and it really wasn't an important thing." In Rose's opinion, it was just a small matter. There was no need to make it known to everyone.

"But in my opinion, it's important. I don't even know my wonderful designer has applied for transfer. If I don't come back, you've been transferred." William's eyes were full of disappointment.

"I'll tell you."

"But it is not now, right?" William pursed his lips and restrained his emotion. Then he said slowly, "Can you stay?" _____

Chapter 52 I Miss You

William looked at Rose, with his eyes full of expectation and hope. And he also swallowed nervously for fear of her refusal. With clear eyes, Rose looked at him, tried to ignore the expectation in his eyes, and said with a smile, "I'm sorry, I have to leave."

Sure enough, she turned him down. William's eyes became dim and dark, "Why do you have to leave? Isn't it good to work here, is it? There are so many familiar colleagues, and I am also here..... Do you really want to leave?"

He tried his best to persuade her to stay, because he wanted to see her every day.

"Mr. Quinn, all good things will come to an end. Greetings and farewells are repeatedly recurring in our life. So this time, I will say goodbye to you." Rose was still a little reluctant to leave, but she really had to go. So she could only put this reluctance in her heart.

"Besides, City H is not far from City Y. It takes only three hours to get there by plane. I will always welcome you in City H."

"Rose, have you really decided?" William asked her again. He thought she must have been impulsive and wanted to leave without adequate consideration.

"I've decided." Rose nodded heavily, "And my transfer application has passed. I will get the transfer letter from CEO Dong by tomorrow, and then I will leave for City H."

"As long as you want to stay here, I will handle everything. So don't be worried that your change of mind will make CEO Dong unhappy. And I promise that you won't be blamed." William thought she was worried that she would be punished by CEO Dong for going back on her words, "Just believe me."

"Mr. Quinn, I really appreciate your care, help and guidance over the years. If I hadn't met you, I don't think I would have succeeded like this. I will always remember your kindness. As long as you need me, I will go through fire and water for you." For Rose, William was a very important person in her life.

"I don't need you to go through fire and water for me. I just don't want you to leave." William was excited at the beginning, but gradually he expressed his heartfelt wish calmly. Although his words were calm, his heaviness could still be felt.

"I'm sorry." Rose's eyes turned red and moist, so she could only avoid looking into his eyes and say sad words.

William was silent. He failed to keep her.

"It's OK. You can go out to work," William said after taking a deep breath.

"Well." Rose got up, bowed to William, and turned away.

William looked at Rose's back and couldn't help calling her, "Rose..."

"Is there anything else?" Rose turned around to ask William, her hand on the doorknob.

"Shall we have a meal together when you leave?" He swallowed and bore all the bitterness and sorrow.

"Well, I'll treat you," Rose said with a smile.

The moment the office door closed, William got up from his chair and paced impatiently. He was in a state of extreme agitation.

It was so painful to lose a person.

After work, Rose picked up Doris. And Jane was asked to return home by her parents.

"Honey, we're home." Rose put on her shoes, "You can go to the living room to have fun for a while, and mom is going to make dinner."

"OK." Doris raised her right hand and made a gesture of obedience.

Doris took out the paper and colored pen, thinking about what to draw. At this time, a picture flashed in her mind, "Mom, can you give me your mobile phone to check the picture?"

"What are you looking for?" Rose asked her in her apron.

"It is a secret." Doris took her cell phone and opened it,

"You'll know in a moment. Go and cook. I'm hungry."

Doris opened the web page and input the words "wedding dress".

After browsing some pictures, she started to draw on the paper.

Suddenly, Doris had an idea. She took the mobile phone, opened the WeChat, and looked for something.

"How could I be so stupid that I forgot to ask that uncle's name," Doris looked at the picture marked Mr. Lee and said, "Mom and Jane both call him Mr. Lee. That's right. "

Doris typed "I miss you" in the message box and then sent it to Bright.

Then she stared at the screen and laughed.

A second passed...

A minute passed...

Five minutes passed...

Why did he not reply? Did he not see the message because of work? But it was time for him to leave work.

Again, Doris sent "I miss you" to Bright. However, until Doris finished the painting, Bright did not reply.

"Doris, wash your hands and have dinner." Rose put the dishes on the table.

"OK." Doris got up and ran to wash her hands.

When Doris came back, Rose was looking at her painting, "What did you draw?"

"When I grow up, I will marry my beloved Dougie, wearing beautiful wedding dress." Doris raised her eyebrows triumphantly. "I can't help it if you want to be single all your life. We will be filial to you in the future."

"....."

Rose was startled.

The mother and daughter sat on the chair. One bowl of rice for each of them, and two dishes would be enough for them.

"Here are scrambled eggs with tomatoes that you like. And this is stewed beef with carrots. Eat more carrots and your eyes will be bigger and brighter." Rose gave Doris a piece of carrot, "You have to eat it up, and then you will be more beautiful."

"....." Doris didn't believe her, "I don't like carrots..."

"Does Dougie know you are so picky?" Rose picked up the carrot and chewed it slowly. It tasted delicious. "A good boy like Dougie is certainly not picky about food and certainly dislikes a picky girl..."

"....." Doris put the carrot that her mother was about to take away back in her bowl, "I will eat it."

Doris could eat carrots for her beloved Dougie.

Seeing Doris eating the carrots, Rose smiled with satisfaction.

Dougie was the weakness of Doris, and Doris could do everything for him.

After dinner, Doris helped Rose clean up the table. After finishing, they went out for a walk.

They went home to watch TV for a while, and Doris went to bed at 9 o'clock.

Lying next to her mother, Doris held the panda doll. Rose was about to tell her a bedtime story.

She chose some fables that were simple and easy to understand, "Today, I'm going to tell an idiom story called Wait for Windfalls..... From then on, he stayed by the tree all day, hoping to wait for a rabbit killed by accident. However, for many days, the miracle had never happened again. On the contrary, because he did not deal with the affairs of the farmland, the field was full of weeds and became more and more barren day by day."

Doris soon fell asleep. Rose walked out of Doris's room, went back to her own room and began to wash and rest.

At this time, the doorbell rang.

Rose took a towel to wipe the water stains on her face. At this time, who would come?

Chapter 53 He Suddenly Appeared

Rose went and looked through the peephole. Why did he come?

"Rose, are you here? I'm looking for you." With no answer from Rose, the person outside knocked on the door several times.

"I'm here." Rose opened the door and standing at the door was William, "why are you here?"

"I need to talk to you." William went through countless internal conflicts and struggles before mustering sufficient courage to look for her, "May I come in?"

"Come in." Rose backed off for William to enter and she closed the door behind him. "Mr. Quinn, I'm sorry that I don't have slippers that suit you, I hope you don't mind."

"No worries, I'll use shoe covers." William saw some disposable shoe covers and put them on.

After he put on the shoe covers, William walked to the living room. Rose said, "Please have a seat. What would you like? Water, juice, or coffee?"

"Water will do." William sat on the soft sofa.

Rose went to get the glass of water. He looked around. It was a simple two-room apartment. Though it isn't big, it was very warm and cozy. She had a lot of succulent plants and soft toys which were mainly animals.

On the wall were pictures of Rose and Doris, who were smiling from ear to ear.

William's heart warmed up when he saw their smiles.

Rose poured two glasses of water and placed one in front of William, "Is there any urgent matters that brought you here at this hour?"

William was not a brash person. His personality was good and very capable, that's why everybody was impressed by him.

"Rose, I just can't accept this." William was a little embarrassed, "I can't understand why things can get to the extent that you are willing to give up everything here and leave."

"I'm from City H and all my relatives are over there. My grandmother is already very old and wishes for my presence. What's even more important is there are some issues that require me to attend to." Rose looked very stern and serious.

"Are you in some form of trouble? I can help you." William thought that she was in trouble and looked worried.

"No, it's not any trouble. It's just that these can't be done by anyone other than me." Rose rejected him, "thanks for your offer."

"What's there to thank, I have not done anything." William shook his head and suddenly felt the distance between him and Rose, "Rose, don't be too hard on yourself."

"I know." Rose was touched but couldn't repay him, "You too, you need to take care of yourself after I leave."

William nodded, at that moment the two became sullen and the mood became tense.

William got up, "I'm sorry to disturb you, have a good rest."

"I'll see you out." Rose placed her glass down and walked William to the door.

William went out the door and turned around, and looked deeply at Rose with his pair of jet-black eyes.

The moment was tender and melancholy, enough for anyone to tear up.

"Rose, I... I like you." William could no longer contain his feelings, he reached out to gently embrace Rose.

His chin rest on her shoulder, "Rose, I would like to take care of you and Doris, I know that I'm still not good enough but please give me a chance. I will do my utmost best to give you happiness."

"I don't believe that you can't see my feelings towards you. I believe that you also want someone that you can lean on and a family and I want to give that all to you.”

“Rose, be my girlfriend...”

That gentle, moving proposal was thick and full of affection drifted into her ears...

Rose wasn't a cold-blooded person and naturally will be moved, but she has yet to reach the level of love.

“Mr. Quinn, you are very talented but now we are only friends and colleagues. I am also not prepared for a relationship, I'm sorry.” Rose rejected him cruelly and squashed this budding love affair.

“I can wait if you are not ready. I'll be here waiting until you are ready.” William was very careful with this relationship.

But Rose did not want him to lower himself, “Don't wait for me, I won't be back. You will find someone you really like. Don't waste your time on someone unworthy.”

She didn't want to give him false hopes because she also can't see any hope.

William's enthusiasm was doused somewhat by her but he persisted, “Waiting for you is my choice, you are the person that I really like, someone I want to wait for and someone I want to marry.”

He became more determined with each word, expressing his determination not to give up.

“What if I like someone else?” Rose saw that he wouldn't give up and became even crueler.

“...” William stared at her and couldn't continue, “if you want me to give up, then say no more.”

William took a deep breath and composed himself, turned, and was about to leave.

At this moment there was a figure at the staircase. It's was unable to make out the person due to the lighting of the stairwell but his ominous presence could be sensed.

That person came from the staircase and with each step, his identity was revealed.

Long legs, business suit, elitist... and dashing handsome.

William looked at Bright walking towards him and felt surprised and threatened.

“Why is Mr. Lee here?” William said first.

“The legs are mine and I can go wherever I want. Mr. Quinn can’t control me, can you?” Bright was direct and blunt. He didn’t bother with William.

Rose didn’t expect Bright to come and this was her home.

How long has he been here? Was he standing there all this while? Did he listen in to their conversation?

There were too many questions and made Rose fluster.

Bright stood by the door and looked at Rose, “I flew for two hours, spent fourth minutes on the road to get here... aren’t you inviting me in for a rest?”

“Why are you here?” Rose didn’t move and just questioned him in return.

“Someone sent me two messages and I’m here. I just wanted to ask if this is real.” Both of Bright’s hands were in his pockets, he smirked under the light and his laughter looked devilish.

“Messages? What messages?” Rose looked confused at him and looked terrified.

Bright took out his phone nonchalantly, and launched Wechat and said, “I miss you, I miss you. Twice.”

“Who sent that?” Rose asked and her heart was pounding.

“Isn’t this you?” Bright placed his phone in front of her for her to look.

“Mr. Lee, please don’t harass Rose.” William stood between them protecting Rose, “Please leave.”

Chapter 54 So Did You Miss Me

Bright looked at William who was blocking his arm and standing between him and Rose. He didn’t like it that William considered himself a protector of Rose.

He frowned and glared in disapproval, “Mr. Quinn, what right do you have to ask me to leave? If I didn’t hear wrongly, Rose rejected your proposal so now you are out of the game.”

“You...” William was stumped, “yes, Rose hasn’t accepted me but I will convince her to agree based on my actions.”

“Mr. Quinn, your constant harassment is meaningless. Aren’t you forcing her?” Bright said sarcastically, “and who she misses is me.”

“Who missed you?” Rose said angrily, the problems arrived one after another. She felt so tired of it.

“I know that you’re embarrassed.” he looked at Rose and smiled. Bright pushed William’s outstretched hand down, “You must be tired, rest for a while.”

William was agitated and thought that Bright wanted to lay his hands on Rose. He stepped forward and blocked him, “Mr. Lee, it’s late now, I’ll walk you out.”

“I’ve no intention of leaving since I’m here.” Bright squinted and projected his displeasure.

These words were too provocative to William. To him, Bright was a scoundrel.

“Rose, don’t worry, I’m here, I’ll protect you. I will not let him harm a single hair on you.” He was determined to protect Rose.

Rose was moved but it was not because of love. She knew that she can’t make use of William’s good intentions.

“Move aside!” Bright warned and threatened him.

“No!” William was not intimidated by Bright. Perhaps this was the power of love. It can surpass a person’s perceived strength. William didn’t display any weakness and did not move. The two of them just stared each other down.

Rose looked at the two of them ready to fight and became very worried.

Bright wasn’t a bad person but neither was he good. Things can get bad quickly if he is offended.

She won’t be surprised if he punched William in the face. No one dared to block him.

“Mr. Quinn, you should leave. I will resolve this.” Rose didn’t want William to be hurt.

“I will leave when Mr. Lee leaves.” William continued to stare into Bright’s eyes.

“Mr. Quinn, don’t push your luck,” Bright said coldly with a threat.

William laughed coldly, he will push his luck today.

Bright knew the meaning of his laughter and was poised to strike, they look ready to ...

“Oh... handsome uncle?” A cute and tender voice that sounded tired and sleepy.

Rose stepped aside and a small and tender body ran over and hugged Bright’s long legs.

Doris tucked aside her hair to reveal her face and looked at Bright’s face.

“Hehe, I’m not dreaming. Handsome uncle is real.” Doris laughed sweetly when she ascertained that she wasn’t dreaming.

In that instance, Bright’s serious expression changed immediately to one of gentleness.

That version of Bright will only appear in front of Doris. To everyone else, he was the chilly high and mighty important director.

“Of course, it’s me. Are you surprised and happy?” Bright squatted down and hugged Doris.

“I’m so happy! I just dreamed of handsome uncle.” Doris wrapped her hands around his neck.

“See, your dream came true.” Bright used his finger to tap on her nose.

“Why are you here?” Doris was now elated and she was no longer sleepy.

“I know that you miss me and that’s why I came.” As Bright said this, he didn’t forget to glance at Rose.

Rose’s heart skipped a beat when he looked at her.

“I am thirsty.” Bright hinted at Doris.

Doris understood immediately and released Bright, stretch out her little hand and grabbed his large hand, “Then come in for a drink, I’ll personally serve you.”

“Doris, you cannot let him in.” William broke his ploy.

He looked at Bright in contempt for making use of a kid.

“Why? Handsome uncle is my friend. He came from so far away to see me. As a host, I need to invite him into my house.

Furthermore, didn’t you hear that he is thirsty? How can I let him stand at the door? Mom and teacher have said that this is very rude.” Doris was like an adult, “Mom, am I right?”

“...” Rose was mentioned, “It’s correct, but...”

But she couldn't find a reason to refuse Bright from entering. "You adults find fault over everything." Doris was getting upset. "Uncle Quinn, this is my house, I want to invite my friend in."

Doris pulled Bright to the door. William was unable to block and was afraid of hurting her little pure heart.

William felt uneasy and remained at the door.

"Don't worry, Doris is around," Rose assured William.

"Mr. Quinn, aren't you leaving? I won't see you out." Bright said as he saw William about to leave. He then told Doris, "Doris, say goodbye to Uncle Quinn."

"Uncle Quinn, bye-bye." Doris waved her hand at William.

William took back his step and looked inwards, and said softly to Rose, "I'll be downstairs in my car. Call me immediately if you need me."

"No need, go home to rest." Rose didn't want him to be involved any further.

"Remember, I'm downstairs," William repeated before leaving.

Rose closed the door and walked to the living room and asked Doris, "Why did you wake up?"

"I was in the bathroom and heard your voices," Doris said.

"Go to bed now, you have school tomorrow." Rose walked over and wanted to pull Doris away.

Doris lunged towards Bright and said, "I want uncle to carry me to bed and read me a story."

"Okay, whatever you say." Bright carried the little Doris and went to her room.

The little princess's room is pink and has several chimes, seashells, some were metallic and some were glass... The room had a lot of other toys.

Bright placed her carefully onto the bed and covered her with a blanket. He picked up a book of nursery rhymes and started to read.

His deep and pleasant voice was mesmerizing which sounded like piano music, it slowly charmed Doris into a deep sleep.

He closed the door as he exited the room and Rose asked, "How did you find your way here?"

Bright turned and leaned into Rose with her back to the wall.

He lowered his head and glared into her eyes, "Did you miss me or not?"

Chapter 55 I'm Always by Your Side

A Pakistani Man Has Accidentally Found A Way Of Earning More
Bright raised his tone lightly, which sounded particularly seductive.

His warm breath felt prickly over Rose's delicate, fair skin. She felt uncomfortable with him so near her. He was so close that the tip of his nose almost touched hers, and their breaths resonated off each other.

His deep eyebrows were before her, and his deep gaze looked like an endless ocean, and also like the starry night sky, which intoxicated and lured people to give in to him.

"Did you miss me?" His seductive voice rang in her ears again and enticed her heart.

Against Bright's aroused state, Rose had no resistance at all; she puckered her lips and nodded, almost as if she was hypnotized.

With her nod, Bright's heart pounded, and a surge of excitement began to churn inside him.

"Good girl." Bright stretched out his hand to lightly hold her beautiful chin with his index finger and thumb.

He lowered his head, and pressed his lips against her cherry lips; a strong, burning passion swept over them, like dry wood which came into contact with ember, instantly sparking a fire. He kissed, flirted, and grasped onto her tightly; his kissing skills made her unable to resist at all, as if her entire body was intoxicated in his kisses, and allowed him to have his way with her.

The kissing grew stronger and stronger like a raging storm... The flurry of kisses became erratic.

As he kissed her, Bright led her towards the master bedroom; he kicked open the door, and pressed on top of her over the soft bed.

Bright did not give her a chance to refuse, and continued to entangle his body against hers, and left her no time to think. His large palm slipped underneath her clothes and stroked her tight, silky skin.

Rose suddenly snapped to her senses, and immediately stopped Bright's advancements.

"Stop, stop—you have no right to do this to me!"

But Bright didn't stop, "Rose, I have every right!"

She couldn't fight against Bright's gentleness, and felt as if she was about to be overwhelmed by him again. Out of desperation, she bit down on his lips.

The bite was so hard, Bright was forced to let her go due to the pain.

Rose took advantage of the moment to muster the strength and used her hands and feet to kick Bright out of bed.

Caught off guard, Bright fell off the edge of the bed.

Rose quickly sat up and pulled up the clothes that rested on her shoulders, her chest rose and fell, and her heart was beating like thunder.

Bright sat on the edge of the bed with one leg outstretched and the other leg bent; his arms rested on the knee of the bent leg. His hair was slightly messy, and with blood on his lips, he looked like a wounded cheetah, with a dangerous, haunting beauty to him.

"You're the only one who's dared to kick me out of bed." Bright licked the wound on his lips with his tongue.

"That's because you crossed the line." Rose was like a white rabbit on full guard.

"I can cross it even more." Bright stood up sharply, like a big, bad wolf ready to pounce on the little white rabbit.

"Bright, I'm married!" Rose couldn't hide it anymore; this was the only reason she could think of in hopes that he would let her go.

Sure enough, Bright stopped, stared at her, and curled his lips, "You're married? Then why do you try to seduce me, again and again?"

"I... How did I seduce you?" Rose retorted, but her face was flushed.

"You sent the message [I miss you] twice, and just now, I asked if you missed me, and you nodded." Bright accused her.

"I didn't send it." Rose denied, "Neither message is on my phone."

"Oh, don't tell me that your account was hacked!" Only an idiot would believe this excuse.

"I..." Rose was at a loss of words for a while, "but it's true that I'm married."

"Then who's your husband?" Bright sat on the edge of the bed, relaxed, "Let's talk about it."

"Why should I tell you?" Rose rebuked.

She has never seen her mysterious husband either, but how could she tell him that?

"Did he become a bright star in the sky? Or you can't tell at all!" Bright was an impeding force, his words pressed closely to Rose's heart.

Rose was completely helpless; she bit her lips and breathed deeply.

"Rose, even if I believe that you have a husband, why are you telling me this now? Are you playing around with me?" Bright's voice gradually rose, and the more it did, the more Rose couldn't bear the pressure.

"I can't and don't want to explain to you the reasons, but it was my fault just now. But I never had any impure thoughts."

Rose didn't know how she was bewitched by Bright and admitted that she missed him. "I apologize."

Bright listened earnestly; in fact, he wanted to test Rose's thoughts on the marriage contract.

"Mr. Lee, please go back." Rose said.

Not only did he not leave, but Bright also lied down on the bed and said, "I'm tired after sitting on the plane for so long."

Rose's beautiful eyes slightly widened; does he mean to stay over tonight?

"Mr. Lee, I already explained everything to you, please go."

Rose couldn't possibly accept this.

Bright turned his back on Rose, as if he complied.

"Mr. Lee..." Rose looked at Bright's broad and strong back,

"Mr. Lee... you can't sleep here."

Bright didn't budge; his breathing was stable. Could it be that he fell asleep already?

Isn't he afraid of wrinkling that expensive custom-made suit?

Rose looked on at this scoundrel, filled with anxiousness and anger in her heart.

She got up from the bed and passed him carefully, but just as she was about to reach the door, she stopped, furrowed her eyebrows, and reluctantly pulled a blanket over him.

Rose left the bedroom and went to Doris's room, and shared the same bed with her daughter.

She shouldn't have been softhearted and given him a blanket; such people should catch a cold and suffer.

After Rose left, Bright slowly opened his eyes, and wrinkles around the corner of his eyes appeared as he smiled.

Rose did abide by the contract, and did not say anything; she made herself into a woman filled with misery and grievances.

But my dear wife, your husband is right here; I am your husband. If you knew that I was always by your side, what kind of expression would you make?

Bright said to himself quietly in his mind.

Chapter 56 What Does my Woman have to do with You

In the morning, the sun climbed up slowly, its rays spread in a mystifying and beautiful manner.

Rose couldn't sleep and got up extra early to make breakfast.

Bright always woke up early by habit; he wore a white shirt and was in good spirits. It felt like ages since he last had such a restful night's sleep.

"Morning." He smiled and greeted Rose.

Rose had dark circles under her eyes, and she was in no mood to pay attention to him.

She put breakfast on the dining table, then went to Doris's room to wake her up.

As Rose led Doris to the dining room, Bright already sat down at the table, studying breakfast.

"Morning, Uncle Handsome." Doris climbed onto a chair by herself.

"Morning, sweetie." Bright smiled lightly, then pointed to a round cake on the plate. "What is this?"

"That's my mom's pumpkin pie; it's delicious." Doris picked one up and took a bite, with a very satisfied expression.

"Then I have to taste it." Bright picked up a fork and was about to pick up a piece.

Rose reached out and took away the plate before him; she sat next to Doris and said, "Mr. Lee, we only have some odds and ends for breakfast; I'm afraid it's not to your liking, so I didn't make you breakfast. This is my breakfast."

Bright looked at the emptiness in front of him, then squinted his eyebrows at Rose.

"Doris, hurry up and eat breakfast, otherwise we'll be late."

Rose urged, hoping Doris would also ignore Bright.

But Doris pushed her plate towards Bright. Due to her short hands, the plate only reached halfway between the two of them,

"Uncle Handsome, I'll share my breakfast with you."

"You are a growing child, eat up." Rose said.

"But Uncle would go hungry without breakfast. Wouldn't it be better if we both shared a little with him?" Doris suggested.

"..." Rose started to eat, "He's an adult; he'll figure something out. Besides, he only eats expensive seafood abalone porridge... He's not used to our breakfast."

Bright scooped up a piece of pumpkin pie on the plate, "Let me just take one."

"Really?" Doris asked.

"Of course. Uncle's assistant will prepare breakfast." Bright didn't want to compete with Doris for food.

After breakfast, Rose took her bag and walked out, and Bright followed.

Rose held Doris's hand, and Doris held Bright's hand. They looked like a family of three.

When they passed by some neighboring aunts, the aunts looked on in shock at Bright.

"Rose, is this your husband? He looks so handsome, much more handsome than my son." An aunt praised.

"Hello, ladies." Bright called out.

The old woman smiled from ear to ear, "If my son was as handsome as you, he'd already be married by now."

Rose's lips jerked; is this mother really related to her son?

"Rose, you're quite blessed."

"Right, right; it would be nice if my daughter could also find such a good husband."

"Boy, do you have any brothers in your family? Introduce one to my daughter."

"I do; he's a freshman in college this year. How old is your daughter?"

"My daughter's twenty-four..."

"My brother is only eighteen..."

"Any cousins or nephews around the same age?"

"I'll have to go back and ask."

"You must let us know if you have any news."

...

It was like the scene of matchmaking service.

"Aunties, we have to go to work and school, chat next time."

Rose pulled Bright's sleeve and motioned him to leave.

"Goodbye, aunties." Doris said with good manners.

After they pulled away from the group, Rose distanced herself from Bright: "Goodbye, Mr. Lee."

"Let me send you and Doris to the school." Bright said as he looked at a car that approached them.

"No need." Rose held Doris's hand and headed for the subway station.

At this time, a white BMW stopped in front of Rose; the window lowered to reveal William's face, "Rose, get in the car."

Bright was very unhappy at the sight of William. How did this person appear everywhere?

When Rose saw that Bright was about to walk over, she hesitated for a second, and then got into William's car with Doris.

William immediately accelerated to leave; Bright was one step late and didn't stop them in time.

After they dropped Doris off at the kindergarten, only William and Rose remained in the car.

"Thank you today." Rose leaned against the back of the car seat, exhausted.

"Rose, do you like Bright?" William raised his eyes to look in the rearview mirror, and saw the sadness on Rose's brows, the worry on her face, and the expression of uncertainty on her face.

Clearly, she appeared to be troubled by her feelings, but hadn't she noticed it yet?

"I don't like him." Rose denied.

"Rose, you guys came out together early in the morning..."

William concealed the stinging sensation and sadness in his eyes, "He spent the night with you, right?"

"William, it's not like what you think." Rose explained anxiously, but then suddenly realized something, "Did you stay here all night?"

That's how he appeared so soon this morning; how could he be so stupid.

"William, you really don't need to do this. I don't want to owe you even more." There was no way she could pay it back.

"I just want to protect you." William said, "Did he bully you?"

Rose shook her head, "You've also seen that he likes Doris, and Doris likes him. They're now close friends."

"Doris is so cute, of course he likes her. I also like Doris."

William envied how Bright came into the picture much later than himself, but now Doris was so deeply attached to him.

"Doris likes you too." Rose added.

William added a comment in his mind, But not more than Bright.

The rest of the ride remained silent all the way to YM Group;

Rose got out the car early in order to avoid any unnecessary misunderstanding.

William parked the car in the company's underground parking lot and took the elevator up.

The first thing William did when he arrived at the office was to call Bright, who sounded cheerful when he picked it up,

"William, I was just about to call you, but you called first."

"Mr. Lee, let me remind you again not to bother Rose. You've caused her a lot of trouble. If you really cared for her, stay away from her and leave her in peace." William was clear and indignant.

"Is that what she said?" Bright raised his eyebrows.

"She said she doesn't like you." William was out to extinguish Bright's arrogant attitude, "Mr. Lee, you're a sensible person, not a stalker."

"William, as long as I'm here, there's no way she will like you."

Bright snapped back, "And why do you care what I did to my woman?"

Chapter 57 Rely on Herself in Future

Bright's tone was full of confidence and pride, and he didn't seem to be a liar. Besides, there's no need to lie.

"Yours? Who belong to you?" asked William.

"Want the answer? It depends on my mood." Bright hung up. William stared at the screen in panic when the call was over. The feeling of powerlessness that hopes raised but then was replaced by disappointment, gradually swallowed him like a tide.

William squeezed the phone tightly and sank back into the swivel chair in frustration.

Rose was called to the president's office by CEO Dong early in the morning, and gave her a letter of transfer: "Miss Rose, your achievements over the past few years are obvious to all. I hope you can do better in City H. If you perform well, I will grant you a satisfying position."

"I appreciate it that company give me this opportunity. I will definitely live up to the hopes of the company and Mr. Dong." said Rose gratefully.

"When are you going to leave?" asked CEO Dong, "I will hold a farewell party for you tonight if you're not in a hurry."

"Mr. Dong, no need for that actually. 'Cause my only work here is the project of City J Theater. Now that I have received this transfer letter, I wanna leave as soon as possible. As for the farewell party, I thank you for your kindness. I just want to leave quietly." Rose had never been a high-profile girl, and there's nothing necessary to be high-profile.

"So you gotta leave today?" asked CEO Dong.

"Yeah, I'll book a plane ticket in a while and face new challenges in a new place."

"Good luck."

"Thank you."

After Rose left the office, CEO Dong made a phone call and said, "She decided to leave today as soon as possible."

"Thank Mr. Dong." The other side was satisfied with the result.

"It's a luck for Miss Rose to harvest the love of CEO Lee."

CEO Dong sighed that it's always the girl, even for Mr. Bright, "I'm not being rude but just wonder, what is the relationship between you and Miss Rose currently?"

"You will get the answer about the relationship between me and her when it's appropriate. And I owe you a favor, you're welcomed to honor a promise from me at any time, as long as I can help you."

"Thank you CEO Lee." CEO Dong chuckled.

It's best for a designer like Rose to work in the headquarters so that it's not the intention for CEO Dong to let her go.

However, it happened that Bright called him and wanted Rose to leave here.

Naturally, CEO Dong didn't want to lose such a capable subordinate to benefit other competitors. Therefore he responded that Rose was transferred to the branch company in City H, which was to be in line with Rose's application and his retaining of talent.

Bright didn't object that. As long as Rose didn't work in the same company with William and under his leadership, Bright would be OK for the transfer.

Resting at noon, Rose packed up her personal belongings with no one else in the office. She brought it for the security inspection, and then left the headquarter of YM Group.

It's where she worked for four years and where she grew up.

She thanked everyone who once helped her. But from now on, she would rely on herself to fight and struggle.

Farewell to William and dear colleagues who once helped her.

Rose also bid farewell to Jane after she went to the kindergarten to pick up Doris.

"Rose, I know your purpose of going back, but I still hate to part with you." Jane hugged Rose with tears on her face.

"Well, come to City H when you're available and so do I." Rose patted her friend on the back and said with deep affection,

"Jane, thank you."

"If you say so one more time, I'll fall out." Jane immediately let go of Rose and responded with a cold face.

At the moment, Rose raised one hand and patted her left atrium. She would keep everything at the bottom of her heart.

"And you little Doris, don't forget Auntie Jane." Jane squatted down and hugged Doris one more time.

"Auntie Jane, whenever you have a boyfriend, you need to bring him to me, and I will examine it for you." No doubt that Doris was the best cheering group.

"Okay." Jane was recently forced by her parents to go on a blind date, which led her to a headache.

As Soon As You Hear About Love You Start Screaming At Out Loud?

Farewell is always painful. Our paths shall cross - God willing.

After a three-hour flight, Rose and Doris landed safely at City H Airport.

They walked out of the aisle with two max-sized and one small-sized luggage.

Nora Cooper waved at them in the crowd, "Rose, I'm here."

"Doris, she's Auntie Nora, mom's childhood friend." introduced Rose.

"Good to see you Auntie Nora." Doris greeted politely and cleverly.

"Wow, what a little beauty." Nora was surprised at Doris's transparent and snow-white skin and watery eyes. She adored the little girl from the bottom of the heart and said, "Come here, give me a hug."

Doris was not afraid of Nora and gave her a hug.

A black Range Rover was parked by the side of the driveway. Jayden, with his legs crossed in the car, immediately got out of the car and helped them with luggage when he saw Nora and Rose approaching.

"This little girl is your daughter?" Jayden asked when he put luggage in the trunk.

"Hello Uncle, I'm Doris Linder, you can call me Doris." Doris generously introduced herself.

"Hello I'm Jayden, boyfriend of your mom." Jayden winked at Doris.

"It's a male friend." corrected Rose.

"Let's ignore him, a strange guy." Nora turned around and took Doris into the car.

Jayden hurriedly got into the car, and drove directly to Nora's house.

"Does Ryan agree on my arriving?" Rose was a bit worried that it would have an impact on their marriage life.

"He rarely comes back. What's more, I own this house, and it's good to have a nanny here to look after Doris. It's more proper for you to take Doris back after you arrange everything." Nora didn't want Rose to be mentally burdened. "Well, Jayden's always here if it doesn't work."

Jayden put the three luggage in place and said, "Do you mean that I will not only be a free driver but also a nanny for you?"

Oh I'm really a poor guy. Rose, how will you comfort me?"

He leaned his head on Rose's shoulder with a sad look.

"Enough." Nora pushed Jayden away and sat between him and Rose.

"I'll go on a dating." Jayden got up and waved away at them.

The nanny brought three glasses of juice and a glass of water.

Nora took a sip of the juice to moisturize throat, but she never moved eyes on Doris who had been playing on the side. "You're totally identical. She's so adorable!"

"Since you adore a baby girl so much, why don't you give birth to one?" Rose saw Nora staring at Doris with eyes gleaming.

Nora curled her lips, "I don't want that."

"Don't you? Is it the same for Ryan?" They had been married for five years but nothing happened about a kid.

"I'll tell you more about me later." Nora turned face away with a little sadness in her eyes.

"Nora, don't you forget him yet?" asked Rose softly.

Nora put fingertips through the hair in front of her forehead, and raised her bright red lips with a smile, "He's passed for so many years, I should get over him."

She showed naturally and chicly, but Rose saw the entanglement from her eyes. _____

Chapter 58 Don't Have to Rub it in

Yeah, it had been six years since he was burned to death by the fire.

They all remembered the fire that burned the night sky, lighting up the darkness around.

At that time, Nora looked at the raging fire in horror with bloodshot eyes. She wanted to rush in to rescue him, but was stopped by someone and prevented her from entering.

Rose was also frightened by that fire. Later then, Nora cried on Rose's shoulder with tears streaming down her face.

He was turned into fire, ashes, smoke... and he's gone away forever.

Nora loved him unreservedly and innocently when she's only nineteen years old. But what she loved and cherished were destroyed by the fire.

Could she forget it? Was it as easy as she acted?

"Just forget it, everyone has to look forward and grasp the current happy life." Rose sighed that time forced all of them to step forward.

The person she saw in City Y that time must have been a mistake.

Nora's doing pretty well now, Rose didn't want to remind her of sadness.

"Happy? What does "happy" mean?" Lowered eyes, Nora looked at the juice in her hand and shook it gently, "Rose, do you think it's happiness marrying love or money? As you look, am I happy now? And are you happy now?"

Rose was stopped by Nora's question. She couldn't answer what real happiness was, because she herself hadn't found it yet.

"Rose, neither of us is happy." Nora smiled bitterly, "Or it's not the happiness we want."

"For those years I loved him deeply. I thought I would be happy with him, but he died. A year later under my parents' arrangement, I married a man who they were satisfied with. The marriage was more a cooperation of the interests between two families."

"Nora, you can say no." Rose's pupils were dyed with sadness.

"He died, I couldn't marry him. So it made no difference for me to marry anyone." Nora burst into a charming smile, and took a sip of the juice by her red lips.

It didn't matter at all who she marry if she couldn't marry the one she loves the most.

Rose deeply understood that Nora was thoroughly heartbroken for what she said.

Just as Rose was set up by her own sister and betrayed by Sky Tanner, she was desperate as well at that moment. But she looked forward to being in love with others.

"Nora, you're torturing yourself. You can say no if you don't really want to marry him. Maybe someone will come to you in future, he'll protect and cherish you... It's early for you to give up." Rose persuaded Nora, but couldn't persuade herself.

"It's okay Rose. And I enjoy my life now." Nora put down the cup, leaned her arm on the sofa and bent legs, then looked at Rose, "I don't have to do anything, but I get everything I want. It's on my call to pay for everything with gold cards and VIP cards. Money really matters in current society. It's hard to do anything if you don't have it."

"Now back on you. You have to work hard to earn money by yourself. At least I don't have to work hard in a company for food and clothing. I feel quite relaxed, all I do is to dress myself as a princess."

Rose looked at the glamorous Nora, felt like the girl in front of her seemed to be no longer the Nora she once knew, but it's still someone she's familiar with.

Nora's still her good friend, she would still do her best and stand out for Rose.

But something changed that there's no love from Nora's eyes.

"Now that you're back this time, you have to hold everything tight that belongs to you. And don't be silly once again. What we hold in hands is more reliable than men." Nora raised one hand, and fist her fingers in front of Rose.

"I got it." Rose knew exactly the purpose of coming back.

Five years of patience and humiliation were pure to serve her back journey this time.

"Please take good care of Doris." Rose checked the time and was about to back Linder House.

"Don't worry. I will definitely take good care of the baby girl." Nora got up and sent Rose off.

Rose walked to an empty area behind the sofa. There were a lot of things for children to play, which Nora had specially vacated for Doris.

"Dear, mom is going back to see your great grandma first, tell her about everything, and then take you home. Is that okay?"

Rose worried that she would scare granny if she didn't tell her ahead of time but take a baby back.

"Okay." Doris still had questions for that and she was unwilling to part with mom. But she still followed mom without asking.

Rose hugged her adorable daughter, and then kissed her on the forehead.

Nora ordered the driver to drive Rose back. It only took a few minutes as the Linder Villa was close to here.

It's also convenient for Rose back here if she left Doris in Nora's house.

"Call me if there's something wrong, I will arrive there as soon as possible." Nora made a gesture of calling to Rose who had already sit inside.

Rose understood and nodded then.

Soon Rose arrived at the Linder Villa. The driver drove her to the door of the villa and helped her bring luggage to the door then leave.

Elena opened the door and looked unnaturally when she saw Rose, "Miss Rose, welcome back."

Nothing wrong with what she said. But Rose felt that Elena didn't welcome her back sincerely. After all, Elena was scolded by Grandma Linder because of Rose.

"I promised granny to come back. After all, it's granny who told me that. Besides, I'm free to leave and go home." Rose stood at the door with a chuckle, "Elena, am I right?"

"Yes, Miss Rose." Elena didn't dare to say no.

"Then please bring me the luggage inside. It's really tiring after a few days of business trip, I need to take a shower to relax myself." Rose stretched a hand to gently push Elena away who had been blocking the door. She stepped inside with a master's posture.

Elena looked at the two luggage left at the door. She felt resentful, but dare not to show up, all she could do was to bring them in.

Rose came back at three o'clock in the afternoon, so there was only grandma at home without anyone else.

"Dear granny, I'm back. Did you miss me?" After seeing grandma, Rose hugged her tightly and acted like a baby.

"Definitely I missed you so much. Finally you're back. How inconsiderate you are for leaving so many days!" Grandma pushed presbyopic glasses on the bridge of her nose.

"Granny, I was working and handle with something wrong. But you see, here I am!" Rose kissed grandma's wrinkled face, "And I transferred all my work to City H. From now on, I'll work here and stay by your side."

"Well, that's good. Then it's proper time for granny to start your blind date." Grandma was satisfied with it.

"..." Rose smiled stiffly.

Granny really didn't have to rub it in. _____

Chapter 59 She Deserved A Better Man

Rose let go of her grandmother and said, "Grandma, I'll come back after organizing my things."

"Alright." Grandma replied.

Rose let Elena carried her suitcases into the room.

After going upstairs and shutting the door, she returned the clothes and utilities in her suitcases to their original position while she was humming a song. She seemed to be in a good mood.

After she had tidied up her room, she enjoyed a comfortable bath and changed into a new set of clothes, looking elegant and beautiful.

She looked at the clock and then went downstairs while clutching a paper bag.

Grandma was watching the television, and by now Joy had returned, and Sophie was holding her arm. The mother and daughter duo was having a good time shooting the breeze.

"Mum, you're back." Rose watched the lovely interactions between the mother and daughter and an uneasiness seized her heart. She wanted them to feel uncomfortable too since she herself was feeling uncomfortable.

Joy and Sophie noticed Rose who was descending the stairs slowly and their smiles immediately vanished from their faces. Their expression turned into one with dismay and they obviously didn't welcome her presence.

Rose already knew they would react like this, but she paid no attention to it.

She was wearing a white dress with a deep V-shaped cut on her chest. The fluttery dress had brought out her quiet charm.

Standing beneath the chandelier, she was sparkling, and her tiny face was smudged slightly by the light. Her brows were perfectly coupled with her seductive figure, and this made her look incredibly beautiful.

She was exuding an elegant and outstanding aura just by standing there quietly, and this was making Sophie hateful and envious of her.

"Why are you back?" Joy had noticed the slightly increased pressure applied by Sophie's fingers which were clutching her arm.

She looked towards her daughter's pale face, and she couldn't help but feel distressed that her daughter had to feel pressured by Rose.

"This is my home too, I'm just out for some business." Rose stepped off the last flight of stairs and walked into the living room and sat beside grandma, "Am I correct, grandma?"

"Joy, as a mother why are you spouting nonsense? Is there any way to talk to your daughter?" Grandma knitted her brows while scolding her daughter-in-law, "I have told you before that you can't choose to only care for one of them."

Joy didn't reply, she just signaled Sophie as they were prepared to go upstairs. But she was stopped by grandma, "Joy, I am talking to you now."

"Mum, I heard you." Joy said in a mellow tone. "I have something to do with Sophie, we'll go upstairs now."

"Mum, what has happened for you to be in such a hurry? Why don't you sit down here and see what I have brought you." Rose showed a faint and harmless smile and said, "Sister, you should sit down too."

Joy and Sophie were rooted to their spot as they didn't leave the living room right away.

Grandma added, "You should just listen and sit down, why are you still standing there."

"Mum, what are you guys talking about?" Chandler's deep voice drifted in from somewhere nearby, and it was followed by his appearance in the living room.

He immediately noticed Rose who was sitting on the sofa, and his initially smiling face was now flashing a hint of displeasure.

These Strange Ways Will Keep Your Relationship Strong Day To Day

The whole family did not like her at all, so it was as if they had seen a ghost whenever they lay eyes on her.

Rose on the other hand was smiling so brightly. The more they disliked her, the more she wanted to enforce her presence around them. She wanted to make sure they were suffering, and this would make her happy too.

Although this was a childish mindset, and she could gain nothing from doing all of these, but it was worth it as long as she could be happy.

"Dad, you should sit too." Rose's voice was sultry and showed indifference towards their displeasure towards her. "I have brought you a gift when I was on a business trip in City J. It was something introduced by Mr. Lee. Let's see if you guys will like it or not."

Rose handed a present to grandma, and she gave two presents to both Joy and Chandler.

"Elena, this is for you." Even Elena had a gift from her.

Elena was shocked when she knew there was a present for her. She had gotten a present, but not Sophie, wouldn't this be too awkward?

"Oh, Sophie, I didn't buy anything for you because I thought you're not at home." Rose looked innocent while emphasizing that she did not forget it on purpose.

Sophie smiled faintly and couldn't care less about that. She took this opportunity to retort, "It's okay, Sky would buy me anything that I want, he loves me very much."

"Oh, speaking of which, I have met Sky in J City, and we were staying in the same hotel. His room was just one floor below mine, it was such a coincidence. I have met him while taking the lift, and during that time the lift was too crowded that I almost fell down. Luckily Sky had given me a helping hand," Rose described her encounter with a lively expression, especially when she came across Sky's name.

During this time, Sophie's expression gradually darkened. She bit her lips while clutching her bag hard.

"Is that so? He is always so kind, he even treats injured cats and dogs by himself sometimes. Besides, Sky calls you sister after me, like how I am calling you. Maybe you don't know that there are girls who will throw themselves at men that they like on their own, but my husband only treasures me in his heart, so he will never be tempted by other girls." Sophie was hinting that there was no difference between Rose and those cats and dogs. They weren't something Sky should be too concerned about. "Is that so?" Rose lifted her lips and replied, "Then sister, you have to keep this man, otherwise you won't be able to find such a good husband anymore."

"Sister, you are right, Sky and I always love each other. We could only love each other with all of our heart." Sophie was an expert in showing off her romance.

"Sky must have prepared a present for you, you won't be missing my present. I'm sure you won't blame me for this." Rose had found herself a good excuse this time.

"Of course I won't blame you, it is the best kind of happiness to receive a present from my husband. I hope that you can also find the right one for you soon, so that I will have a chance to attend your wedding." Sophie was not planning to back off in their verbal war.

"Of course she will." Grandma interrupted them. She always viewed Rose as the best child, "Our Rose deserve the best guy out there."

"Grandma, that's for always loving me. I feel like I'm the happiest girl in the world with your love." Rose held grandma's arm and replied to her while leaning her head lightly on grandma's shoulders.

Grandma patted Rose's shoulder lightly and said, "Grandma will find you someone better than Sky and make you happy."

Sophie immediately felt dissatisfied at grandma's words as she protested for Sky's sake, "Grandma, what you said sounds like Sky is not good enough, is he not good enough? He is the one who has gotten you and grandpa's acknowledgement."

"Sophie, it's not that I am saying bad things intentionally, Sky did get our acknowledgement, that's because we thought that he would make Rose the happiest woman alive and love her for the rest of her lives. The day that he had abandoned Rose, he would never be good enough anymore in my eyes." Grandma was fuming now that she was talking about Sky, "And you, Sophie, you chose to love Sky out of everybody, and you were even married to him. Aren't you afraid that he will abandon you one day?"

"Grandma, Sky will not ever treat me like this." Sophie retorted hurriedly, "Sky had broken up with sister, why couldn't Sky marry another girl? And why couldn't I marry him?"

Chapter 60 Stolen Happiness

Sophie was biting her lips as her body started to tremble,
"Grandma, you are always biased."

"History always repeats itself. Nobody could guarantee that he will never do that again. I just don't want to see you repeat your sister's mistake." Grandma was giving solemn advice as she sighed emotionally.

Grandma's words were right on the mark. Rose had no confidence about her future... after all, this was stolen happiness.

As long as Rose was still single, Sky would always have his opportunity.

The best way to resolve this right now was to get Rose into marriage before Sky could discover the truth. It didn't matter who the groom would be.

She couldn't stand Rose appearing in front of her anymore, especially hearing Sky's name from her mouth.

Her husband would always belong to her completely. He was hers alone.

"I will make sure that I'm happy, grandma, you don't have to worry about this. As for sister, you should introduce a good candidate for her, so that she will not always be lonely."

Sophie changed the topic and continued, "Grandma, I will look forward to you finding a good guy for sister."

"I will choose the man carefully this time." Grandma held Rose's hands while saying, "Rose, leave this to me."

"Grandma, I always listen to you. You can do anything as long as you are happy." Rose held grandma's hand affectionately and her eyes were full of gratitude towards her. "I will try my best to be happy so that you won't worry too much about me."

"Alright, you are always the best granddaughter." Grandma felt relieved at her words, "Let's go, I'm hungry."

Grandma didn't utter a single word after this as she let Rose help her on the way to the dining room.

Chandler, Joy and Sophie remained in the living room as they stared at the two presents on the table, feeling a little distressed.

"Dad, mum, you have to hurry up in finding the guy, otherwise if grandma starts to arrange blind dates for her, then it will be a shame." Sophie tugged at Joy's arms, "We can't let her be so arrogant."

"You can be rest assured, we will arrange for it." Joy and Chandler exchanged a glance as she took in a deep breath, "From now on, we have to make sure she thinks that we have accepted her, if not she won't be so good to listen to our words."

"Mum, I will listen to you no matter what." Sophie did not deny her mother's suggestions. She knew that in order to take Rose down, she had to pay some price.

Joy opened the gift box, and inside it lied a peacock-shaped brooch, which was very beautiful.

Chandler opened his gift box too and found a tie inside. Its design and colour suited middle-aged men like him, and wearing it could showcase his maturity and generosity.

The three of them got up and entered the dining room. When Joy had taken her seat, she flashed a smile towards Rose, "Rose, we have seen your present, and we love it very much. Thanks for putting us in your heart."

Joy's change in attitude had shocked grandma slightly, but she immediately smiled, "This is how a mother should look like."

"Mum, you don't have to be so polite, we are family after all." Rose was very forgiving too as she didn't find fault at them for what had happened in the past. "I am your daughter after all."

"Yes, you are right," Joy nodded, "I used to have a bad attitude and it was because something was bothering me all along."

"Rose, please forgive mum and me, we will change our ways." Chandler had softened his stance as he showed his fatherly side.

"How could I blame you? You have given me my life, that was something to be forever grateful of." Rose looked like she was "touched" as a moist film developed on her eyes, "You don't have to mention it, I understand everything."

Rose was actually feeling awful and disgusted while spouting this.

She was astonished at herself for being able to spout such nonsense naturally.

"It's good that we have talked things out, a family should always be happy together.” This was what grandma always wanted to see. This was how a family should look like.

Grandma and Rose had been enjoying themselves during this meal, but Joy, Chandler and Sophie were still upset deep in their hearts, but they had to put on a good façade for the time being.

After dinner, Rose accompanied grandma to take a walk to help with her digestion, before helping her to wash up and prepare for sleep.

When she was upstairs again, it was already nine thirty. She was intercepted by Sophie suddenly when she reached the second floor.

"Rose Linder, I need to talk to you." Sophie directly called out her full name.

"Grandma is not around, so we don't have to pretend anymore. It was so tiring anyway." Rose stood by the door while looking at her sarcastically.

"I feel the same." Sophie stood opposite her and what separated them was just a narrow corridor.

"Speak up. If there's nothing else I want to go to sleep." Rose let out a yawn.

"Rose Linder, let me warn you, don't ever think of seducing Sky, your struggles will always be useless. He loves me now, and I'm his wife. You are nothing!" Sophie warned her in a serious tone because she had almost reached her limit.

"What? You are already so restless when I said that he had helped me a little?" Rose retorted with disdain, "Sophie Linder, let me warn you too, what you have taken away from me I will take it back again with double the suffering for you."

"You dare to do that!" Sophie exclaimed, looking visibly shaken.

"Why would I not do that? Since the day you had snatched him away from me, you should know that one day he will no longer belong to you." Rose was really cruel, "Sophie, I'm back now, you should wake up from your delusions!"

"And besides, I don't even need to seduce him, he's the one who had volunteered to help me in that crowded lift." The curve at the corner of her lips gradually deepened.

"Impossible! He won't even look at you!"

"You are right, he won't look at me for just once... he wants to eye me more than once, hehe, don't you know that men are always putting on a fake front and couldn't be trusted?"

Her deprecating laugh that drifted into Sophie's ears had caused a headache, "Enough! Rose Linder, I don't believe you. You better not be too smug, I will let you be gone from this place."

"Oh... is that so, I look forward to it." Rose arched her eyebrows and replied, "I want to sleep now, please get as far away from me as possible."

Rose didn't want to talk nonsense with her, so she pulled open the door to her room.

"Rose, wait." She stopped her in her tracks.

At this moment, a voice could be heard downstairs, "Miss Sophie, Mr. Tanner has come to pick you up."

"Alright, let him come up here." Sophie crossed her arms in front of her chest, as if she could finally claim victory over Rose as long as Sky was here.

After a while, Sky went upstairs, but he slowed down his pace when he saw Sophie and Rose standing opposite each other in a confrontation. His gaze swept over both of them before he quickened his pace and came to Sophie's side.

"Let's go." Sky held Sophie's hand naturally.

"Sky, did you buy me any present this time?" Sophie leaned intimately against him while locking her fingers with his.

"Of course, I would never forget that." Sky said in a soft tone.

"I'll show you at home."

"Did you buy anything for sister?" Sophie asked with anticipation.

"There's no need for that." Sky replied coldly.

"We are family in the end, why not I give sister the present that you planned to give me?" Sophie asked Sky ambiguously. Nobody knew what she was getting at.
