Chapter: 611

Telling The Truth After Drinking

Henry kept drinking with Noah.

Noah was also physically and mentally exhausted because of the Ye family's matter. He drank one glass after another without being persuaded by Henry.

When Noah was a little drunk, he could pour himself a glass of wine without being asked.

Everyone stopped talking and looked at Noah worriedly.

Ms. Sheng tried to stop Noah. "Don't drink. You seem to be drunk. It's bad for your health."

"I didn't expect that either." Henry was still holding a glass of wine, but Noah almost drank it up.

Every time Henry took a sip, Noah would only drink it up. This was really strange.

Nina knew Noah best among the people present. She didn't stop him. "Let Noah drink. He's bitter in his heart. He told me before that he always wanted to have a sister. Later, when Vivian came back to Ye family, he was very happy. Even if he knew that Vivian had done something to hurt him, he didn't make trouble for her. He thought that the family should get along well with each other.

Noah's mother was a very gentle and kind person. She always told him about the family affairs. She said that no matter how close they were to him, they would inevitably have conflicts with him. He had to learn to turn hostility into friendship. Noah alwa he liked is a man.'

Henry closed his eyes and said, "Oh my God. Anyway, he likes men. It is also a homosexual love."

Adrian slowly let go of John's hand and walked over to comfort Henry, "It doesn't matter. Don't worry."

John turned to look at Noah. He walked over and patted Noah's face. The sound of slapping could be heard. The two people next to them pressed their lips and dared not make a sound.

'Anyway, Noah is drunk. He would take the responsibility alone.'

"What's the name of the person you like?" John stared at Noah coldly.

Noticing a hint of coldness, Noah frowned and pulled up the quilt to cover himself with only half of his head exposed. He said in a muffled voice, "I can't tell you."

John was speechless. John was speechless. 'Even when you are drunk, you still have a sense of vigilance. It seems that you really care about him.'

John asked impatiently, "From C Island?"

Then he heard a short muffled nod, like a sleepy child.

John had known the truth. 'It turns out that he likes Vicente.'

John wanted to tell Henry and others that Noah didn't love a man but a woman.

But at the thought that Noah had just said he liked his wife before, John couldn't bear it and said in a bad way, "Yes, he did like a man."

Make Her Life A Living Hell

After leaving Ms. Sheng's house, John sent Nina to No. 53, Serene Road.

His gentle eyes escorted Nina into the house until she disappeared. The window slowly closed, and the gentleness of John faded away.

"How is Vivian?"

Richard, who was driving, answered, "Someone has been sent in and locked up with her."

"Don't kill her. Take your time to torture her." John said indifferently and slowly closed his eyes.

In the prison.

Sitting in a wheelchair, Vivian cleaned herself up in prison robe, but her eyes were bloodshot and dark circles under her eyes.

She often sat by the window and looked outside.

Even in prison, the viciousness in her eyes could not be smoothed. On the contrary, it became stronger and stronger day by day, like sulfuric acid, as if it could corrode the prison that she could escape.

After a while, someone was also locked in.

She remained unmoved. She kept beating her unconscious legs and tears fell down. Only at night would she be dispirited.

Depressed all night, she was in low spirits. On second day morning, she began to pretend, fantasizing that she was still the superior rich lady.

One morning, when she opened her eyes, it was still dark around. When she heard the sound of others getting up, she finally said the first sentence.

"Why did you get up before dawn?"

At this time, a woman sneered, "Idiot, the sun has risen. Are you blind?"

The others laughed.

At first, Vivian thought it was a trick. She argued with them and led the police here. Then she realized that she was really blind.

However, before she could react, a few days later, she found herself unable to speak. No matter how hard she tried to open h guess you can't even get half a meter close to him. John has no interest in women other than me, just as I'm only interested in John..."

"Okay, okay, I know. I know! Stop it. I really can't stand you." Berry pulled a long face. 'I really didn't know who I provoked. Why did she bully me being single?'

Nina didn't care about her and continued, "I'm not interested in other men. Anyway, we both trust each other very much, and you can't interfere. If you insist on interfering, aren't you afraid of breaking your feet?"

Berry covered her ears and didn't want to listen to Nina. She walked faster and faster.

Behind her, Nina kept smiling. "Walk slowly. I don't care if you get lost. You're not familiar with this place. Aren't you afraid of hooligans?"

Berry was still afraid the hooligan. She had to stop and looked back at Nina with resentment.

Nina drove to Caroline's studio. Michelle had already asked for a leave and waited for them at the roadside. Then they went to the C Mansion together.

It was easy for a girl to establish a friendship. As soon as Michelle saw Berry, Michelle praised her beauty that her bright eyes were very sincere, which was so small and cute.

Berry was proud. She laughed so happily that she almost couldn't close her mouth. But she felt that she laughed too presumptuously. Occasionally, she covered her mouth with her hand.

As soon as they got out of the car, the two of them walked forward hand in hand. When they were halfway through talking and laughing, Michelle suddenly stopped and the smile on her face gradually faded away.

'I saw a familiar back and a woman walking side by side with him.

I had met that woman before.'

Mimi Is Seriously Ill

On both sides of the path, there were some trees growing in the flower beds, taller than people. Some branches bent out, and the leaves on the top of their heads fell through the gaps.

Michelle slightly narrowed her eyes and felt somewhat dazzling.

'The tall and thin figure of the man gradually reunited with the person three years ago, but things were different. Leon was no longer carrying me on his back, only leaving a little mottled sunshine. There was already another woman standing beside him, wearing a light cyan dress.'

Michelle held Berry's arm and pulled her back by accident when Michelle suddenly stopped. When Berry turned around, she saw that Mimi's face was a little pale.

"Mimi, what's wrong with you? Why do you look so bad?"

"Nothing." Berry's concern brought back Michelle's thoughts. She forced a smile and said, "Let's wait for Nini."

"Okay." Berry didn't think too much. She just turned her head and saw a familiar figure in front of her turning into another road. She asked curiously, "Eh, the person in front seems to be Leon. Who is the woman next to him?"

Without thinking, Michelle blurted out, "Valerie."

"Is that V

dle of it. On the other hand, she was preoccupied and only remembered a few words of Berry in her mind.

"I knew that he was still unwilling to give up on her."

"In order to find Valerie."

'It turned out that the "important thing" that Leon said three years ago was to find the person he liked.'

The setting sun shone on Michelle's face, but it couldn't warm her heart. Even her hands were cold.

"Mimi, are you sick? You don't look good." Noticing that Michelle suddenly became quiet, Nina reached out to touch her forehead.

Berry also looked at her and said, "Yes, Mimi. You didn't look well just now. Are you really sick?"

'Am I sick?

It seemed that I was sick. Three years ago, when I found that I fell in love with Leon, as long as I saw him, my body would become abnormal.

As long as I couldn't see Leon in the future, I would recover.

It didn't seem to be the case. After going abroad, I always missed Leon, day by day.

On the contrary, I was even more seriously ill.

I didn't know what kind of illness it was. I went to the hospital to have a check-up. The doctor only said that I didn't sleep well, but I didn't think so.'

Can Leon Like Me

play_arrow

Nina's hand was already on Michelle's forehead, and Berry pretended to be close to Michelle.

Michelle, who was sandwiched between the two, reached out to grab their hands and put them down.

"Nothing. Don't worry."

"Then why don't you say anything?" Although Berry had only known Michelle for less than three hours, she knew that Michelle was a lively person. Michelle not only liked to talk, but also had a sweet mouth.

Michelle pouted and said, "Then I have to get in the middle of it. I don't know what you two are talking about, so I listen to you with my heart. But I also think it's interesting to hear you say this. Hee, hee."

It was not until then that Nina realized that they seemed to have ignored Michelle just now. She quickly held Michelle's hand back and said, "We three can have a talk about something we all know."

"Yes, yes. The three of us. I think we can only talk about Leon. But if we talk about his gossip secretly, will he kill me if he knows it?" Berry echoed with a smile.

"What's the use of killing your life?" Nina said in disgust. She turned to look at Michelle and found that she was a little nervous.

"Mimi, don't be nervous. My parents know you. I often saw the petite girl at a glance.

'This girl is really disobedient. She went abroad without telling me. There had been no news of her for three years, and she could not be contacted or found.'

At the moment when Leon saw Michelle, a smile appeared on his face, but it was soon replaced by anger that had been hidden for three years.

'I had been looking for her in several countries in the past three years, but I still couldn't find her. I had been worried that she might not live well abroad.

It seemed that I worried too much. How happy she was just now.

I had been worried for three years.

I wanted to teach her a good lesson later and ask her if she really cared about me.

However, as soon as I stood out, she was frightened to raise her hand to cover her mouth.

Am I so scary now?

Her heart was about to jump out of her chest.'

Leon greeted, as if he didn't see his own sister. He walked straight to Michelle and bent down to look at her. "Michelle, are you afraid now? Do you really think that covering your mouth can really hold your heart back?

You left without saying goodbye to me three years ago. Can't you be bold? Why are you covering your mouth?"

Secret Love Was Like Making A Jar Of Wine

Michelle was fluttered by his gaze. She lowered her eyes like a child who had done something wrong and subconsciously moved her feet to escape.

She knew she would see him, but she didn't know that she would meet him so suddenly. She had practiced the line for thousands of times, but now she was running around like a mouse seeing a cat.

She couldn't remember a single word of the line.

She was afraid that he would ask her why she went abroad. She couldn't tell a lie to him, and she didn't want to.

'If he knows that I like him, not as a sister to a brother, just as Nini to John, he must feel very embarrassed.

He said he took me as his sister.

I can't embarrass him.'

Michelle was at a loss and didn't dare to look at him or answer.

"I thought you could still be promising after studying abroad for three years. But you are still the same as before. Well, take your hands off. I won't eat you. " With a gentle smile, Leon reached out to touch her head and was about to pull her hands away from her mouth.

As soon as his warm palm touched her, it was like a steam sweeping on the back of Michelle's id at the right time, holding Michelle's hand and went in.

She found that Michelle was really nervous because of her brother's questioning. Now her palms were cold.

Leon took a glance at Michelle. She was trying to avoid him on purpose, so he could only see half of her body.

Even if he could only see half of her body, he didn't look away and refused his sister's proposal at the same time.

"Call me Mr. Leon."

Berry didn't pay much attention to it. She called "Mr. Leon" and walked in with them one after another.

Nina took the two people to try on the dress that they would wear as bridesmaids tomorrow. They went straight to Nina's bedroom, leaving no chance for Leon to find Michelle.

Nina was going to marry to John tomorrow, so they didn't think too much about the matter between Michelle and Leon.

If Nina paid more attention to it, she would find something fishy.

However, Nina was too busy to take care of herself now. She was nervous at the thought that she would wear the wedding dress designed by John tomorrow and walk to John with her father holding her hand.

She was so nervous.

The Wedding Part One

At the end of October, the autumn wind swept over the mountain. The rustling sound of leaves was created by nature. The red maple leaves were like fire, and were about to burn over the rolling hills.

The North Mountain was verdant, and there were banyan trees. A castle like a osmanthus palace rose from the ground and stood in the mountain.

Once upon a time, the North Yard was a place to live for John. Now, the North Yard was his home for Nina. The lush banyan trees were like guards, guarding the princess who was about to move in the castle for him.

After the castle was expanded in the North Yard, Helen became the housekeeper of the North Yard. She recruited a large number of servants to perform their own duties in a uniform.

The thirty-seven people who had been responsible for guarding John were transferred from the dark to the light and responsible for the security of the entire North Yard.

Everyone wore a black mini camera on their ears, which could make a wireless call. And Richard was in the monitoring room to overall everything.

The castle occupied almost half of the mountain, and the first gate to the North Yard was built at the mountainside.

Normally, they could drive to the gate of the castle, but today, all the cars could only arrive at the first gate. The guests had to walk eight hundred meters to reach the wedding venue set in the castle of vigorous words on the white paper.

Pointing at the words, Victor asked, "Master Tim, what's on it? Why don't I understand it? It's just like ghost painting symbols."

"What ghost painting symbols? This is a script. Shut up if you don't understand. It's a painting of his wife's Nina, which was drawn by Mr. Shi for his wife," said Tim, patting on the back of Victor's head.

Victor touched the back of his head and began to flatter, "Master Tim, you are so smart that you even know this."

Ignoring Victor, Tim walked to the right pillar. Inside the frame was a water color oil painting, on which the person was John.

Pointing at a line of beautiful handwriting, Victor said proudly, "I know the handwriting this time, it read, 'My hero John'. It seems that the painting here is given to Mr. Shi by his wife."

"It's their story." Walking to the front of the second oil painting, Tim looked at it for a while and then looked at the second one on the left. "It's really the story of the two of them, two versions of the painting."

Victor said, "I really don't understand what the rich think. Why do they draw two?"

"Even rich people may not do that."

Victor immediately corrected himself, "I really don't understand the thoughts of cultural people."

Tim was speechless.

Tim looked at the gallery on both sides and suddenly felt an unprecedented admiration.

Eight hundred meters, one thousand and forty flower pillars, one thousand and forty paintings, half simple brushwork and half oil painting.

Every painting on the left was drawn by a pen that John had never left. The tip of the pen scratched the paper, leaving behind the memories he and Nina had created together.

Each painting on the right had the faith to support Nina through half a year and three years. Day and night, she used her best paint to leave a frame.

One was to remember from John's perspective, and the other was to remember from Nina's perspective. For them, only when these memories were combined could they be complete.

However, the paintings shown were only a part of them. Some of the scenes were too private, so it was better not to let others know openly.

Some secrets only belonged to the two of them.

When John proposed in the Spring City, he used the painting drawn by him. Nina wanted a manuscript, but John teased her and said he wouldn't give it to her. She was angry and said she wouldn't accept it. Anyway, she could draw it by herself.

Nina not only said it, but also drew a whole book of their story like John

With a trembling smile, James picked up the dress from Emma's hand and said, "So the two brothers are deciding who will lose and the loser will wear the dress. Ha-ah..."

At the thought that Van or Don would disguise as a girl, James couldn't help laughing.

However, at this time, Don began to play tricks again. He jumped off the chair, which scared the old Sam.

"No, no, no. we don't count this time. We should play....Five, five times, and then five more times." Don stretched out five fingers to him.

"It's a deal. We play five times and decide who win in three of five times." Van's patience made the people around him feel a little inferior to him.

So they played five more times. This time, Don finally turned the situation and he won.

"Ah, I win. Van, I win." Don ran to hold his elder brother, turned around and plunged into Sam's arms. "Grandpa, I win. I win. I don't need to wear a little skirt."

James ran over with gleeful misfortune, "Come here. I'll help you wear a dress. Where's the wig? Give me your wig too."

Although Van was unwilling to admit defeat, he still let James and Emma take him to change the dress.

It was a cool breeze in the late autumn evening, so the dress Van wore was with sleeves. The hemline of the dress was long to the ankles, so with wearing socks he wouldn't be cold.

Van obediently let them do it. Don stood at the door and poked out a small head, his big amber eyes rolling slowly.

Seeing that his brother had even put on his wig, Don laughed secretly. Soon he received a glance from his brother. He quickly covered his mouth with his little hand and quietly drew back his neck.

Don turned around and ran out, holding Dora who just came in. In the blink of an eye, there was a little soft thing hanging on her legs.

"What's wrong with you? Are you Van or Don?"

"Dora, I am Don." Don held Dora's legs and acted like a spoiled child. "Dora, can you take a photo of my brother and me? Must shoot us very well, very well, I want to put the photos together."

Dora thought it was a big deal, but she didn't expect that it was just a photo and she agreed without hesitation.

"Okay, handsome boy. I'm good at taking photos." Dora took out her phone and clicked on the camera. "Where is Van? As soon as I just finish

, Richard, who was responsible for overall planning, gave the order, "Okay, release it."

In the banyan forest outside the North Yard, someone opened the wooden box built on the banyan tree. Thousands of fireflies flew along the trunk and branches to the top of the tree.

In an instant, a firefly lit up the North Yard. It was not as bright as the sun and moon in the sky, but also the stars shining on the ground.

The wedding venue suddenly became brighter, and a few disobedient fireflies broke in.

"Fireflies, they are fireflies. There are many fireflies over there," said May in surprise.

The guests all looked over. They were not only amazed at the fireflies all over the sky, but also saw the appearance of the people around them with a piece of firefly.

The night wind blew, bringing the fragrance of Osmanthus fragrance to everyone's nose.

People were still immersed in the fireflies all over the sky, and no one noticed that in the middle of the corridor of the wedding stage, John stood straight, with a smile on his face and a smile on his face.

There was a flowing starry light in his obsidian like eyes.

The Wedding Part Four

play_arrow

In the dim fireflies, several figures shuttled among the guests and sat in the front.

Anne and Leon were at the same table with the members of the Shi family. They greeted each other for a while, and the five bridesmaids and groomsmen sat at the front table on the other side.

There was a high stage corridor between Michelle and Leon, surrounded by flowers. The wedding site was not bright, and it was difficult to see each other's appearance.

Since their first meeting yesterday, they had talked less than three sentences in total.

This made Leon feel a little unhappy. He always felt that the little girl was deliberately hiding from him.

Michelle was very glad that they didn't sit on the same side. She felt lucky that there was a border between them. Otherwise, she really didn't know what reason she could use for avoiding his eyes.

However, she didn't know that there were other people thinking about her.

Michelle was sitting at the table in front of Tim. Just now, she even passed by Tim. She wore a pink strapless dress, with a faint milk fragrance, pure and lustful.

Pink was really suitable for young girls.

Tim sat up strai couldn't help it.

She couldn't help crying when hearing her father's nagging.

John pinched her fingers and comforted her silently.

Nina had to turn tears into smiles. She changed the topic, "Dad, what if my brother gets married? Can he still put me first? "

"Well..." Hearing this, Bruce was stunned. He turned around to look for his son and said, "Why don't you ask him not to marry? I think he lives a good life without being in love or getting married these years."

The smile on Leon's face froze.

Was he his biological father?

Nina couldn't help laughing and looked at her brother gloatingly.

There was also titters from downstage, and someone looked at him sympathetically.

Leon immediately sought justice for himself, "Don't worry, Nini. The sister-in-law I find for you must have a good relationship with you and love you very much. We two will treat you well together."

"Okay, then do you want my sister in law to be my good friend first?" Nina just mentioned it casually.

How could she really break her brother's marriage?

However, Leon replied, "Yes."

While speaking, he glanced at the other side with his eyes.

Chapter: 620

The Wedding Part Five

After handing his daughter to John solemnly, Bruce turned around and walked off the stage. Holding his wife's hand tightly, he sat down and looked at his daughter's family of four with tears in his eyes.

"Kids, come and hold Dad and Mom's hands." Nina turned her body and stretched out her hand to Don behind her.

Don was still holding the wedding dress in his white and tender hand. When he saw his mother waving at him, he tilted his little head in confusion and said, "But I want to take this for you. Mom, you don't have to worry about me."

"Mom, Dad, I want to spread flowers for you too." Van held the flower basket in one hand, and grabbed a lot of petals in the basket with the other hand, scattering them into the sky.

The two children were so considerate that Nina felt warm in her heart. Especially Van, because he was willing to wear dresses for her.

He looked so beautiful in this dress.

Nina once told John that she wanted to have a daughter. If she really gave birth to a daughter, her daughter must be as beautiful as a Van.

It hadn't been long since Van and Don came back home, and the Shi family had well protected them. So rm breath into his ears.

"Honey, I also got you." Nina rubbed his neck and said gently, "Thank you for sending me Starry River and fireflies all over the sky."

"I will give you whatever you like. If you want the stars, I won't give you the moon. If you want me to give my life to you, I will give myself to you." Then John turned his head and gently bit her earlobe.

It made Nina shrink her neck. When she was about to let go of his arms, a hand suddenly appeared on her waist and lifted her up.

Nina hung on John's body and she was kissed on her lips.

He kissed tenderly, passionately and eagerly.

Nina could feel that the tiger under him was about to break free from the cage.

The guests present burst into laughter. Adrian shouted, "Awesome. Just go to the bridal chamber."

As expected, John didn't disappoint them and left with Nina in his arms.

Nina thought that she hadn't thrown the bouquet yet, so she picked it up, aim at the position of Michelle and throw it into her arms.

She hoped that Mimi could find his Mr. Right as soon as possible, and then she could sit down and watch
Mimi being sent into the bridal chamber.
