Chapter: 801

Discharging From Hospital

Leon caught a glimpse of the baby's breath and pink roses not far away. They were not the flowers he bought.

It might be bought by Caroline.

Of course, there was another possibility, Tim.

"Michelle, this flower is beautiful." Leon pretended to ask casually, "Who sent it?"

Michelle looked sideways and answered, "Tim."

It was really him.

Leon squinted his eyes, and the next second, he regained his composure and changed the topic.

"Don't you want to leave the hospital? Let's leave the hospital tomorrow."

"Really?" Michelle looked at him excitedly.

The wound on her foot was almost healed. She could just walk more carefully. There was nothing serious with the wound on the back side of her head. She just needed to come to the hospital on time to apply medicine and remove the stitches after the wound healed.

Michelle had long wanted to leave the hospital.

No matter how cozy the VIP ward was and how light the smell of disinfectant was, it was still a hospital.

She didn't like to stay in the hospital.

It could be said that many people didn't like to stay in the hospital. Who didn't want to be healthy?

She sto

Miss Michelle, please give me your luggage. Someone will take it to the guest room for you."

Michelle called with a smile, "Helen, I like to hear you call me Mimi, which sounds friendly and warm. I can take my luggage to my room by myself. There is need to bother you."

"It's not a trouble. It's our duty and job." Helen took the suitcase and handed it to the servant next to her.

She took Michelle's hand and patted it gently, saying, "You have to get used to it now. There will be more people to serve you in the future."

Helen took a look at Leon and the smile in her eyes deepened.

With her decades of experience in judging people, she guessed that probably the two people had already been in a relationship now.

It had only been a month since the wedding of John and Nina, and now Leon had already won Michelle's heart.

Oh, that's great!

Nina did find a sister-in-law for herself.

Michelle didn't understand what Helen meant. She thought there would be many servants taking care of her when she lived in the North Yard.

Michelle was flattered, but she still felt a little awkward.

She had never been served like that.

The North Yard Is So Lively Today

Michelle was wearing a red hat and a slim black knitted dress, which was cute and fashion.

She was wearing light makeup.

Even if she still had a baby face, the childishness on her face had disappeared, which indistinctly showed the charm of woman.

The sky in winter was gray. According to the weather forecast, it would snow this evening in Lexingport City.

As Michelle walked, she looked up at the sky and asked expectantly, "Is it really going to snow today?"

"We'll know in the evening." Helen said with a smile.

Leon quietly walked beside Michelle, keeping a distance of half a meter. Seeing her eyes full of expectation, he asked, "You like snow? I'll take you to the snow village when I have time. "

"Thank you, brother." Michelle turned to him with a sweet smile, and then she looked up at the sky again. "If it snows today, it will be the first snow in this winter in Lexingport City. I heard that on the day the first snow fell, lovers who witness it together will be with each other for a lifetime."

As she spoke, she turned her head to take a look at Leon and quickly looked away, thinking that she had done it bring Cherry to play with Van and Don.

It was strange that they didn't bring her here today.

Henry said calmly, "We have something important to talk with Mr. Shi and you, so we don't bring Cherry here."

"John will come back early today." Leon raised his hand and looked at his watch. "He'll be there in about ten minutes. Since it is important thing, you can go to the study room and wait for him."

Ten minutes later, John came back from the outside and went straight to the study room. The others were playing with Van and Don in the hall.

"What's the matter?" Then John took off his tie, took off his coat and hung it on the chair. He spontaneously reached out and wrapped his arms around the slender waist of Nina.

They had already been used to the couple who would stick with other as long as they are together.

Henry pushed his glasses as usual, then he told them a shocking news.

"Vivian is pregnant."

"She is in prison." Adrian added, and then pleaded, "Mr. Shi, Nina, I hope you can let her go for the sake of her pregnancy."

Henry nodded, "The environment inside is not suitable for a pregnant woman."

After such a long time, Nina almost forgot about Vivian. She didn't expect that Vivian could survive after being tortured by John's subordinate.

And... She was pregnant.

As a mother of two children, Nina's heart softened a lot. She looked at John with some hesitation.

John was a stone hearted man.

"No way." He said in a cold tone, "Two paths. Get rid of the child or find a way to give birth to the baby by herself."

The man slightly lifted his eyelids and glanced at the two sincere people. For the sake of their friendship for many years, he still reminded them.

"It's irresponsible to just give birth to the baby and didn't raise it. What will happen when the child grows up and finds that his mother is a prisoner?"

Nina agreed. "It's better not to give birth to the baby if she can't raise it."

"I know." Henry said, "I didn't want her to give birth to a child at the beginning. I don't know who is the father of the child yet. But my father and Vivian's mother have known about it. They hope that Vivian will give birth to the baby. Anyway, it is the baby of Ye family."

He pushed his glasses and glanced at Adrian. He sai

Henry said, "I promised to raise the baby for Vivian. Since the baby needs to be raised, I hope the baby is healthy. Now Vivian's legs and feet are inconvenient. Sometimes she can see clearly, and sometimes she has a bad vision. I don't know what will happen to the baby when she is raising it alone in that kind of place."

"John." Henry lowered his head and begged him.

Seeing him lower his head, Adrian felt as if his heart was pricked by a needle.

So he asked, "Do you really want to raise the baby?"

"Yes." This short word represented Henry's determination.

Adrian sighed slightly and said seriously, "John, Nina, as long as you agree to him, I can do you a favor in exchange."

The two of them were on the same side now.

It was not the first time that such a situation had happened.

Before giving birth to the baby, Nina felt that the two of them were like a miserable couple. After giving birth to the baby, she suddenly had an illusion that the two of them were like her sons.

She was helpless.

Her heart softened and she agreed.

John had always been unable to refuse Nina any time and place, so he finally nodded.

You Can Only Drink A Little

When the four of them came out of the study, James was running around the room after Don. The silvery laughter filled the air and then floated into everyone's ears.

Van told Michelle and Emma about the fight in the kindergarten, and then clearly listed the solutions.

Although he was not eloquent enough and his tone was full of childish, what could not be ignored was his independent thinking consciousness.

Even an adult might not have such ability.

Leon smiled knowingly and encouraged Van.

"Ha-ha, I caught you!"

At that time, James held Don in his arms from behind and said, "Well, it's time for dinner. Uncle John and Aunt Nina are here."

"Let's eat!" Don answered happily.

Michelle whispered, "Emma, James likes babies so much. When will you have a baby?"

"Let's talk about it a few years later." When Emma looked at James, she always smiled peacefully. "He only plays with Don and Van from time to time. If he takes care of the baby every day, he won't be happy."

"Okay." Michelle smiled.

"How about you?" Asked Emma. "When will you

he imitate him?

Michelle was a little embarrassed.

She thought Nina was making fun of her, but why? Did Nina know?

A touch of panic surged over her heart.

Michelle couldn't help but gulp down half a glass of wine, which stunned Van and Don.

Because Nina would get totally drunk after drinking three glasses of wine, so they seldom drank at home. The two children had never seen anyone drink so much.

And Michelle seemed to be fine after drinking it.

Instead, she seemed to be in a better mood.

After drinking, Michelle calmed down. She thought that it was impossible for Nina to discover their relationship. She hid it well.

Turning her head, Michelle saw that Nina was still holding her glass. With a complicated look in his eyes, John calmly picked up the glass and said with a faint smile, "A little."

"Okay, a little."

The voices of the two were neither loud nor low, and fed into the ears of everyone. Michelle's face flushed inexplicably.

Leon coughed awkwardly.

He knew that the two people were making fun of him on purpose.

Nina took a small sip. She thought of something and chuckled.

She deliberately clinked the glass with James and asked, "Would you like some more?"

When he heard what she said again, John frowned slightly.

Nina raised her chin slightly, indicating John to pick up the glass as soon as possible. At this time, John picked up the glass obediently and clinked it, reminding her again, "Just a little."

But this time, Nina changed her lines.

She licked her lips and said helplessly, "Why is it you again?"

After saying that, her amber eyes were full of meaningful smile.

John then instantly realized what she meant.

When they met for the second time, Nina said the same words as what she just said. "Why is it you again?"

After the first time, they met the second time, and then countless times.

Now they saw each other every day. She was on his mind all the time no matter he closed his eyes or opened his eyes.

At last, John didn't hold back his smile. He slowly smiled and gently called her, "Little girl."

The two of them looked at each other with a smile and took a sip of wine.

Adrian put down his chopsticks and was obviously irritated. He raised his glass with a smile and said to Henry, "Come on, have a cross cupped wine."

Henry was speechless.

Everyone lo t it had been emptied.

"Why did you drink secretly?" Emma helped her up.

"No, I didn't." In a daze, Michelle pointed at the person opposite her and said, "The two of them saw it."

Henry and Adrian nodded. Adrian said, "She asked us not to tell you guys about it. I think she is good at drinking. I admire her."

Thinking of that Michelle picked up the bottle and gulped it down, he sighed that he was not as good as her.

As soon as Leon got close to Michelle, she threw herself into his arms. The little girl held his waist and raised her head.

When she was drunk, her eyes were slightly red, which looked like two black grapes soaking in water, looking particularly lovely.

"Leon, what kind of girl do you like?"

Leon was about to get angry at her for drinking secretly again, but her bright eyes and soft voice softened his heart again.

"Don't you know? Don't tell me you don't know."

"I know! You like me, and I like you too." Michelle stood up and burped, but Leon didn't mind it at all. He looked at her leisurely, as if looking forward to something.

Sure enough, the drunkenness had helped Michelle to overcome her cowardice. Michelle took his hand and announced with a smile, "Hello, everyone. Let me introduce my boyfriend to you. He is my boyfriend, Hee-Hee..."

After getting drunk, Michelle's face was as red as the cheeks were plastered with blusher, and her eyes were shining as clear water. At this moment, the various expressions of the people present were reflected in her eyes.

The expressions on their faces changed as quicksilver.

The calmest ones were John and Nina. Henry was barely calm. Just now when he saw Michelle drinking alone, he had a guess, but he could not help but be frightened. He habitually reached out and pushed his glasses.

On the contrary, Adrian was flabbergasted, "What... You two..."

He had never thought that Michelle and Leon would be together. The two of them... What was the word? They didn't look like a couple at all.

It was not that he felt that Michelle was not good enough, but from the objective factors, the two of them would definitely not be together.

Michelle was a girl in need of protection, but what Leon needed was a woman who fought with him side by side.

Adrian couldn't believe it.

"What the hell..." When James came to his senses, he was shocked and swore. As soon as he blurted it out, he immediately patted his mouth and said to the nst him again.

After a while, she woke up again.

When Leon was about to tuck her in, she saw the little girl open her eyes and look at him in confusion.

"Don't look at me like that." Leon said in a hoarse voice.

Michelle didn't hear clearly what he was talking about. She only saw the house and Leon were spinning, which made her even dizzier.

Her head was heavy, too. She wanted to lift it, but she couldn't. So she waved her hands in the air and entwined them around the neck of Leon.

"Leon, sleep."

She put her soft hand on the back of Leon's neck. Leon then felt a shudder at the touch of her skin and his body became tense.

"Mimi, don't be naughty. Have a good sleep."

Leon pulled her hand down and tucked her in.

Michelle moved aside, patted the empty room beside her and said, "Leon, sleep."

Her eyes were bright and pitiful. The light reflected in her eyes was like the moon, and her delicate appearance was particularly attractive.

No one could resist such a stunning woman.

Snowflakes were flying in the sky. Leon pursed his lips and sat on the edge of the bed. "Mimi, do you want to sleep with me?"

"Hum..." With a groan, Michelle turned over and opened her half closed eyes with her eyelashes trembling slightly.

She reached for her cell phone and fumbled for a while before she touched the cold phone and pressed the screen on.

It was 6:20 a.m.

It was still early.

She rubbed her sleepy eyes and looked up at the window. What came into her eyes was a white light, which passed through the slightly flickering curtain. It seemed that it was dawn.

She pressed the button to open the curtain and the curtains were automatically opened. Outside the curtain, it was white, and the sky was covered with blowing snow.

Michelle's eyes lit up. As soon as she lifted a corner of the quilt, the cold air slipped into the quilt. She wrapped herself tightly with the quilt again and ran to the window.

The ground was covered with white snow, and the thick snow was shining. The servants in the North Yard were sweeping the snow with a broom. Suddenly, someone looked around and saw there was no superior, who were in charge of them, grabbing a handful of snow and throwing it at her companions.

The smashed servant also looked around, but did not see anyone else. T u said today. It's meaningful for you two to walk side by side."

Michelle turned to look at Helen and smiled brightly, "Thank you, Helen. I know."

She really knew it.

Yesterday, Leon said that he wanted to take a person back to the C Island from the Lexingport City. At that time, she knew that Leon had planned her into his future life, so she had to work hard.

She tried her best to be a person who could be with Leon.

With Leon by her side, she was never afraid of hardships.

She had used three years to prove it, and it would take a longer time.

The light shining in Michelle's eyes moved Helen. She looked at the petite girl and didn't know how much strength was hidden in her body.

"Where is Mr. Leon? You make a snowman first."

"I think Leon is still sleeping." Michelle poked her head, but she still didn't see anyone else in the early morning.

Helen was surprised and then said, "The snowman is made. Mimi, you can play by yourself. I have to go to the kitchen to order and add some soup for Mr. Leon."

Then Helen turned around and left, still struggling in her mouth, "Turtle soup or Double Penis Soup? How about making both soups?"

Holding a child's hand on her each side, Nina went downstairs and saw Helen in a hurry, not knowing what she was going to do.

"Helen, where are you going?"

Hearing the sound, Helen stopped and looked at Nina, who was holding two cute kids and coming down alone. But she didn't see John, and her expression changed slightly.

"I'm going to the kitchen. Mrs. Nina, why didn't Mr. John come downstairs?"

"He is a little tired and is still sleeping."

"Hasn't Mr. John gotten up yet?" Helen was shocked again and murmured to herself, "It seems that we need to make more soup."

"Mrs. Nina, I'm going to the kitchen." Helen quickened her pace to the kitchen.

Nina was just confused and took the children to the dining room.

"Mom, is Dad tired from work?" Van asked with concern.

Nina nodded, "Yes, We're busier at the end of the year."

"Okay." Van nodded in confusion. He didn't understand why they would be busier at the end of the year, but he wanted to help his father. "Mom, what can I do for Dad?"

With a smile, Nina said, "That's great, Van. You and your brother should eat and sleep well, go to school well. That's what you can help your dad and I every day. Let's talk about other things when you grow up."

"Why do we have to wait until we grow up? Van and I are very powerful now." Don asked in c

. Michelle's hand was between the two, which was really warm as if she was sitting by the burning fire.

But she knew her hand was too cold to touch him directly, so Leon held her with brute force.

Van and Don looked at each other and silently followed their servants who took them away.

However, Don was not reconciled at all. He would look back at the snowman that he hadn't finished yet once he took every step forward.

He was very reluctant to give up.

Then he glared at his uncle angrily.

The two people hugged each other, standing in the snowy world. The servant who was responsible for holding an umbrella didn't dare to destroy the atmosphere, so she left silently.

Several snowflakes fell on Leon's dark hair.

When Michelle raised her head, she saw him and said softly, "Leon..."

Leon looked down at her timid eyes and asked in a soft voice, "What's wrong?"

Hearing his gentle voice, Michelle immediately became bold. She asked in sweet tone, "Is there any snowflakes on my head?"

Leon took a glance at it and said, "Yes, I'll help you take them off."

He raised his hand, but it was grabbed by Michelle's hands. "Don't do that. Leon, there are also snowflakes on your head, white, I also have. "

She smiled sweetly.

"Leon, we are going to be together until our hairs turn white."

Leon's heart skipped a beat.

He had ever read that if two lovers witness the snow falling at the same time, they will live to old age in conjugal bliss, and he had also heard people around him say that to the one they loved.

At that time, he just smiled and didn't have too many feelings. He didn't think that what many people liked to say was special.

Now he knew it.

The point was not whether this sentence was special, but who said it.

It was cold in the snow. Leon hugged her for a while and said, "Do you feel satisfied today? Let's go inside. It's time for breakfast. "

"Yes!"

The two walked hand in hand. Halfway through, Michelle suddenly pulled out her hand.

Seeing that, Leon stopped and looked at her doubtfully. "Have you forgotten what happened last night?"

Michelle mistakenly thought that he meant to be frank with each other. Her face flushed and her eyes dodged, "No."

Her blushing face made Leon stunned. After figuring it out, he chuckled and pinched her chin with his fingers. "What are you thinking about, Michelle?"

"I am thinking about what happened last." Michelle raised her head, and her chin, which was held b children. They needed a strict father, but also a loving father.

John was not afraid of his wife, but he accepted suggestions.

Nina didn't rely on her husband, but she wanted to protect him.

The six people sat neatly at the table. Helen walked over with a smile, followed by a servant, who pushed a bowl of soup on the dining car.

"Mr. Shi, Mr. Leon, this is your soup. The soup made in the kitchen won't be available until noon. I sent someone to buy it."

Michelle asked curiously, "What soup? Can I drink it? "

The others were also a little curious.

"It's specially made for Mr. Shi and Mr. Leon." Then Helen picked up two bowls of soup and put them in front of them.

Hearing that the soup was specially for the two of them, although Leon and John could guess what soup it was, they didn't dare to think too much.

However, looking at the ingredients in their bowls, they frowned.

It was really nutritious soup for man!

Nina also smelled it and burst into laughter. She immediately ate breakfast leisurely, but looked at the two people with a hint of smile in her eyes.

John was speechless.

Leon also didn't know what to say.

A Girl Who Looks Like Michelle

When Tim went to the hospital to visit Michelle again, he got the news that she had been discharged from the hospital. So he had to go back to the He Family to inquire about the situation.

He took some specialties as gifts, but he didn't know where Victor got them. He finally knew that Michelle had not come back from the business trip.

He thought for a while and guessed that it must be Leon who had taken her away.

It was very likely that he had taken her home.

What a beast in human attire.

Although Tim felt aggrieved, he didn't know how to deal with it. Michelle and Leon had already been together.

They were a normal couple and it was not too much for them to do anything.

When he was annoyed, Victor called him and said, "Sir, I've found the person you want. I'm in an interview. They look similar, with similar height and shape, especially their side faces. As long as that person put on makeup again or make a special makeup, ordinary people can't distinguish the two."

Hearing the news, Tim was in a better mood.

Victor's voice came from the other end of the line, "Sir, would you like to have a look in person?"

"Ye

hesitate. Finish it early, or do you want to stall it on purpose? But why did you stall it on purpose? Is it because you don't want me to leave?"

The flirting tone made Tim's face darken in an instant. He then thought that she was really a shameless woman.

But what she said was reasonable, so he had better finish it as soon as possible.

He glared at Caroline and opened the door to get in.

Caroline was not afraid of his murderous eyes, but smiled happily.

When she was about to drive, Victor came out of the Silverhall Nightclub with a girl who looked like Michelle. Caroline was stunned when he saw the woman's side face.

"Is Mimi here with you?"

Looking out of the car, Tim saw two figures. Judging from their clothes, he could recognize who they were. His eyebrows twitched.

What a loser.

Why didn't Victor take the back door and go through the front door?

He was hesitating whether he should admit it or not. If he admitted it, Caroline would tell his lie to Michelle. But if he didn't admit it, Caroline would probably think too much when he saw the person who looked like Michelle.

Women couldn't be too smart.
