

A Contract Marriage With My Boss by Anna Shannel Lin Chapter 43

As a matter of fact, although the decoration of their wedding hall was westernized, all the process was basically in accordance with Eastern customs. There was a tradition where people celebrated the wedding in the bridal chamber. One person hung a red jujube in the middle of the room and then asked the bride and groom to eat it together at the same time. Sarah and Charles tried many times, but they still couldn't bite the jujube, and only hit each other's mouths several times. Seeing that they failed to eat the jujube, everyone burst into laughter. In front of so many people, both Sarah and Charles felt so embarrassed.

Finally, they succeeded in biting the jujube together, each eating half. Then, the people were deprived of their fun, so they coaxed them into kissing each other. Sarah's face was all red, and she was so shy. When she was about to refuse, Charles hugged her, without saying a word, and kissed her.

The kiss was so stirring that everyone around them was excited—they clapped and cheered. Sarah and Charles were embracing and kissing each other in the midst of the blessings of the people. In the beginning, Sarah felt embarrassed, but then she gradually accepted it. At last, she felt the kiss to be romantic and incredible. Of course, thanks to Charles, who was a great kisser, Sarah stopped feeling frightened.

Finally, after more than one minute, Charles let go of her, and let go of her tongue. Sarah's face was red, like a drunken shrimp. Then, she caught a glimpse of Emma accidentally. She was standing in the corner of the room and left in the midst of the applause. It seemed that she couldn't bear to see the scene just now.

Sarah felt sorry for Emma's sadness. However, it took two people to make or break a relationship. It was Emma who first proposed to Charles to break up, and very firmly. Now Charles had already found his love, but Emma still couldn't let it go. And then, the one who got hurt was just Emma.

Even so, Sarah felt a little guilty because she could not bear to see Emma's sadness, but the only thing she could do was to pray for Emma to cheer up quickly and find her true love soon.

Finally, the activities were over, and all of Charles's friends left, leaving them alone in the room. Sarah was too tired to move, so she lay down on the bed and closed her eyes.

Charles seemed to have drunk a lot of wine, and he had been excited that day. Sarah squinted her eyes and saw him standing beside the bed, taking his suit off and pulling his tie off. Seeing his actions, Sarah thought that Charles was about to have a bath, so she closed her eyes to sleep and let him go to take a bath first.

After a while, Sarah suddenly felt Charles on her body. He hugged her and began to kiss her.

At that moment, Sarah was about to fall asleep. When she felt Charles kissing her, she sobbed, pushed away from him, and then said, “Charles, what are you doing? Why don’t you go to take a bath?”

Charles was drunk, looked at her with his bright eyes, and said, “You forget tonight is our wedding night.” After saying these words, he began to kiss her again, and mumbled, “I have been waiting for this day for so long.”

Sarah kept struggling, pushing him away, and said, “But don’t you feel tired? It’s been a busy day, and you’ve drunk so much.”

Charles answered, “I’m not tired. Even if I were tired, I’d still have the strength to spend our wedding night together.” When he said those words, he began to pull her cheongsam away, as if he had vowed to take her cheongsam off.

Sarah had no strength to struggle against him. Charles was also very firm and didn’t give her any chance to refuse. During the struggle, Sarah felt her cheongsam had almost been taken off. She felt a little unwilling because she was sweaty, and Charles was full of the smell of wine. Thus, she shouted, “Charles, Charles, I’m all sweaty, and I feel so uncomfortable. You let me take a bath first.”

However, Charles didn’t stop his actions and began to kiss her body. Thus, Sarah shouted, “Charles! Let me go. We need to take a bath first! You are so smelly. I’m not happy right now!”

Hearing her complaints, Charles seemed to be awakened. Then he looked at her, finally said in a low voice, “Take a bath? Ok, we take a bath together.” After saying this, he held Sarah and took her to the bathroom, regardless of her struggle.
