Chapter 511 Explanation

Vivian smiled and said, "Let's leave aside the argument whether I make it up. But the truth will finally come out. And I hope you are well by then."

When she was about to leave, she stood up, and said, "By the way, I have heard that the test report is going to come out tomorrow. Don't hurry when you leave and I will see you off."

Angie sneered, "I really hope that you have the chance to see me off at that time." Vivian skipped a beat for a moment and squinted fiercely at Angie with a tumbling heart.

Angie's enchanting smile showed eye-catching brightness.

Vivian went back.

With a clear mind now, Vivian associated Daniel's transaction and the punishment that he had said with Angie's appearance, and she easily found some signs.

The fact was simple. However, Vivian had been in the middle of the issue, so she couldn't figure it out. Now that the uncertain factor, William, was excluded, she thought it was easier to find out the truth.

But again, she fell into a question that had perplexed William, too.

That was why Angie lied to them, and the lie could only last for two days.

Yes, she was definitely sure that the baby in Angie's belly was not William's. As for whether he still loved her, it was out of her concern.

The most important thing for her now was to give Roe and the baby in her belly a proper identity.

"Vivian, why are you here?" Owen said.

One must pass by the main building in the front yard if he wanted to go back to the garden in the back yard from the guest room.

At that moment, Vivian was preoccupied with her thoughts. But she saw Oven scratching his ears and cheeks and cringingly looking at the guest room in the main building. She had no idea what he was doing.

Oven saw Vivian and greeted her at once.

Vivian slightly frowned and asked, "Why are you here? Don't you come in?" "I am afraid of being driven out because I have annoyed my grandfather," Oven said, scratching his head and grinning.

Vivian didn't believe his words. It seemed that William and Oven had different personality. The former was reserved and calm while the later was a playboy. But most of the time, they acted in the same manner. When Vivian knew it was Oven who brought Angie here, she just had a different feeling about him.

Although she just lived in his house for several days, she still recognized from the fact that he didn't applaud the relationship between William and her, and he, like others, looked down on her too.

Perhaps the relationship between him and his grandfather was not as bad as others thought. Vivian couldn't tell whether the news Daniel provided was true or false, but there was a common understanding: that was, Oven didn't like her as much as he pretended to be.

Vivian gave a forced smile and said, "Hamilton is wise and certainly won't rough you up. You'd better put things bluntly."

Oven held his head up and said, "No, he hits me so hard."

Soon, his eyes flashed and asked, "Vivian, could you please do me a favor?" Vivian raised her eyebrow and listened.

"Vivian, you may not experience grandfather's fury. It's scary and he beats me to death!" Oven continued to say, "I need you to see whether grandpa is on the second floor or in the guest room. And I need to fetch something."

Without doubt, Vivian did go to the main building and took a look.

The building was large and well furnished. As a whole, it was splendid. And only one glimpse was enough to judge if there are people in the guest room on the first floor.

Vivian casted a glimpse at the room and found nobody was there. Then she subconsciously looked up and saw the door of study on the second floor was open. She thought Hamilton was in the study.

“Miss Vivian, do you come to Hamilton?” Edward’s voice appeared suddenly behind her.

Vivian was startled, but she turned around and greeted Edward.

“Hamilton is used to read books on the second floor and don’t want to be disturbed. If you need to talk to him, I’ll ask him,” Edward said. Vivian’s eyes twinkled and said, “The habit is good.”

“It is formed day by day. And it’s never too old to learn. Although Hamilton is stubborn, he has many good habits.” Maybe Edward had a good impression on Vivian, so he talked to her without stingy.

Vivian nodded and went outside. Oven was still waiting there.

“Hamilton is in the study on the second floor. You can go if you have something to fetch”, she said.

Oven expressed thanks to her and then scurried into the main building. Vivian turned to look at his back with shadows in her eyes.

When William went back with crispy durian pies, Vivian was in the back yard. But he still knew at first time that Vivian went to see Angie. He placed the crispy durian pies on the table and looked at Vivian, who was staring at the ipad, watching video.

He approached her and said, “You are pregnant and should spend less time on computers to avoid radiation.”

"I am too bored. And I must find something to do to kill time. Or I will go moldy," she stretched herself to relax his body. William smiled and said, "You went to the front yard."

"Yeah, with a lot of gains", Vivian said indifferently. William moved his fingers and raised his eyes, and said, "Gains?"

Suddenly, he held her face with both hands and kept a close watch on her eyes, and said, "Vivian, tell me with honesty what you are thinking actually. Do not tell me that you are planning to leave me again. You have promised not to be unreasonable and stand together with me."

"Do you really mind this?" she said without much warmth in her eyes.

William lowered his eyes and tightened his chin, and said, "You are clear about my status. If every time in the future a random woman comes to you and says she is pregnant with my baby, then you must be annoyed and go crazy. Vivian, I would definitely die at an early age." "You can let me go", she said with calmness.

William sighed deeply and felt a strong flow of anger rushing into his throat, and finally he quieted it down. He was no longer the lawyer named William in Jin'an City, who was sure that Vivian would stay for him.

Here was J City which was filled with contend for power and complexity, and even a tiny factor may contribute to her leave.

To ensure his future life, at least, he must make sure they stood on the same side before all was down and dusted.

Therefore, William said with patience, "Vivian, you said that you had been in love with me for many years, but ask yourself the question, what did you bring to me besides the spoken love and forbearance? If there was no basic trust between you and me, and I was the only one to maintain our relationship, things would go wrong soon. Do you understand?"

Vivian's mind went blank for a moment. Was it her fault? Was it because she did not give him enough trust and love? Was she mistaken about what he did?

Chapter 512 Confession

Be aware of Vivian's silence, William felt kind of soft-hearted. After sighing in his heart, he said, "I'm not asking much from you.

Even if you do not fight for us, you should do what I ask and trust me. Please tell me in time what's bothering you when you feel sad. Perhaps I cannot give you much comfort right away, but later on, you can be mad at me or make a fuss. And I will be patient enough to comfort you then. Ok?"

Vivian turned her head around and stared at William. He had never said so warm words to her before.

When they were in Jin'an City A, he was a taciturn and dominant man, who was always condescending for her to look up. He tightly held various rights in his hand and could knock her down easily.

But it seemed that the moment they stepped into J City, his temper was refrained a lot. He was more patient with her. What surprised her most was that he could say sweet words to her.

"William, why..." her lips quivered.

William's black eyes were occupied by her figure. With his fingers gently stroking her lips, he said with a hoarse voice, "Your EQ is apprehensively low, Vivian. Many years ago, I agreed to live with you. From then on, you were destined to be my wife."

Her heart was in shock and her brain was dizzy. As if she was hit by something, she lost her voice, and looked at William with misty eyes.

William smiled, watching her black eyes with satisfaction. He came closer to her and kissed her sweet lips. He said with rough voice, "So, I love you all the time and only you. Do you understand?"

"So, you and Angie..." her said with a dry throat.

William smiled slightly and said, "Weren't you the one who moved away immediately when she was back? Vivian, you felt self- contemptuous but blamed me for everything. It was unfair. I have never wanted to have any relationship with her again. All is owed to your imagination. You even cut me off from all contacts. So I participated in all the activities in which she would show up along with you. I did this to see you, cooperate with you and annoy you. What's a pity. You are so blind."

Vivian lowered her eyes and thought back with patience. In fact, to the end, no matter how much William had hurt her, what she minded was nothing but Angie. If those were all fake, the things that she minded and her grievance all turned to be meaningless.

She should have been happy and relieved, but she did not know why her heart was aggrieved and even more aggrieved now than ever.

Without any omen, her tears ran down.

William halted and said, "Why are you crying?"

There were worries in his eyes.

Vivian didn't answer him but just shed her tears alone. She looked so aggrieved.

Thinking for a moment, his eyes turned dark. He came close to her and swallowed her tears one by one. Gradually, her sob got weaker.

With his forehead against her forehead, William said, "Do you have any other grievance? Speak it out. Next time, I will introduce all relatives of my family to you. At that time, no matter what happens, I won't let you cry."

Vivian was suddenly motionless. One thing occurred to her.

Soa, she held William's hands with trembles and said, "William, I have something to tell you." He looked at her with patience and was ready to listen. Vivian moved her lips and breathed, "I met Daniel."

"What?" His pupils narrowed sharply and his face changed.

Vivian twisted her lips and had no idea of his change. But she still felt a little uneasy because of her speculation this afternoon and the last words by Angie.

Soa, she was in sore need of talking to William. If there was any real danger...

After all, no one knew the purpose of Angie's sudden visit.

"What did he tell you? Were you hurt?" William shrank his chin tightly. And there was a little anger on his face.

Daniel fled easily from Jin'an City. And after he went back to J City, it was the first time for him to hear the name again.

Of course, he didn't come across the name firstly from Vivian but from a back list. Behind the name, there was a spate of notes and materials, which made Daniel the one that must be arrested. Many people thought so, including William.

It was a pity that he didn't engage in these affairs due to family affairs these days. In addition, the task of arresting Daniel was not his. He had known for a long time that Daniel was cunning. But to his surprise, Daniel had come to J City and even contacted Vivian in public.

Was it a provocation? William squinted his eyes and asked inwardly.

Vivian shook her head and said, "William, he wants something from your family. And I doubt that Angie's visiting was arranged by him. He said..."

She roughly told William what she and Daniel had said when they met. Then by the way, she also told him the words she and Angie had said today.

William's face changed all of a sudden and said, "Why didn't you tell me earlier?"

After a pause, Vivian said, "When I saw you along with Angie in the garden, I thought you took her here. My mind was messy then and couldn't figure out what he was planning at all. Later on, I was overwhelmed by the pregnancy. I wouldn't have guessed it if Angie hadn't suddenly arrived and I went to talk to her for a while this afternoon."

Thinking about the garden encounter, William relaxed a little and said, "That's an accident. She appeared and swooped down on me suddenly. And I quickly pushed her away. I guess you just had a glimpse and went away then. I am really sorry and I will make sure that such thing will never happen again." "Well, yeah", Vivian responded.

William stood up and said, "Have a rest first. Don't worry about the matter. Please leave it to me." Vivian nodded. William kissed her on her face and left.

When he was out of the door, Vivian's heart had a hard jump. She was flustered as if something bad would happen. At that moment, in the guest room, Hamilton was furious, because he lost something in his study.

With anger filled in his heart, he looked at several servants seriously and depressively. His sharp eyes ranged over everyone's face. Those were all servants who had been serving here for many years. But they still felt cowered when facing Hamilton's eyes.

Edward said, "Anyone who has entered the second floor and the study today stands out."

Several servants looked at each other and stepped forward. Hamilton disliked too many people around, so the servants serving in the main building were only a few. But when his sons and daughters went back home, they all came to the guest room on the first floor. So sometimes, more servants were arranged for the main building.

However, the second floor and the study were Hamilton's personal places, so the number of servants serving here was limited and it was easy to screen them.

Chapter 513 Helpless

Mr. Hamilton's eyes swept over several people with a grim face, and nodded to Edward.

After years of getting along with each other, the tacit understanding between Edward and Mr. Hamilton made Edward understand Mr. Hamilton's intention immediately.

Edward waved at those who were standing up. "You guys come with me."

Those people shivered unconsciously with fear, but they still followed Edward towards a hidden room.

Mr. Hamilton took a little breath and went to his study. Suddenly, as if something occurred to him, his face suddenly changed.

But after a second thought, he thought it was impossible. He waited for Edward for a while patiently before he came out.

Mr. Hamilton looked at Edward with a glimmer of hope in his eyes. Edward shook his head calmly, "It cannot be them."

Since these people had served the family throughout their lifetime, he was reluctant to suspect them. But this was a big deal. His reaction gave him a slight relief. However, Mr. Hamilton got tense again soon after.

He did not want to doubt those men working for his family, much less did he want to suspect his own family members.

It was just...

"Let someone check the Pine garden to see what's been Mr. Hamilton there today." Mr. Hamilton said with his solemn face. It sounded like he was about to lose his temper.

Edward was stunned by his words, was Mr. Hamilton suspicious of Vivian? But today other than the cleaning people, it was only Vivian who went into Mr. Hamilton's study.

Then he suddenly recalled that she did have come into the front hall for the second time in the afternoon, and it seemed that she was looking around for some reason. At that time, he thought she just came back from the guest room. But what if she did something in the front hall?

“Are you suspecting Vivian?” “He asked with a confirmed tone.

Mr. Hamilton’s face blackened, and there was a bit of coldness in his eyes which resembled William’s.

“Anyone can be suspected.”

Edward paused, “But Vivian hasn’t been out all day long. She only talked with Miss Angie in the guest room. If this is really stolen by Vivian, then that thing should still be here, I could ask someone to check.”

Edward meant to search Vivian’s room.

But it was Mr. Hamilton who personally invited her to come back, searching her room right now was not only the disrespect for William, but also a slap in Mr. Hamilton’s face.

Mr. Hamilton hesitated and slightly inclined his head.

Edward thought about yesterday, as Vivian just went to Angie and made a scene with her. And today she was threatened by Mr.

Hamilton. Even if she did do something bad, it could be understood.

Edward worried this could be true. So he went to the Green Pine Garden with some people in a grim face.

At night, Roe held a small pillow and went to Vivian’s room to sleep. William knew Daniel was in J city, so he went out to investigate him.

Vivian finally could enjoy Roe’s company.

“Mom, you haven’t read me anything for a long time.” Roe’s little chubby arms held Vivian, with dissatisfaction in his face. Vivian paused. Yes, it was true.

After she found out she was pregnant, she had been resting a lot. Apart from that, she was always depressed by her problems with William. She felt she did owe Roe a lot.

She opened the story book in her hand only to find the book was written in both Chinese and English language, and the Lu's family collection of book was marvelous indeed.

"This story is about..."

"Vivian, the housekeeper Edward is here." Vivian was interrupted by a knock on the door outside.

Vivian was surprised. Why Edward come here now? Vivian opened the door in doubt.

"Sorry, Miss Vivian. Sorry to disturb your sleep. Mr. Hamilton worried those insects in your room, so he asked someone to come over to clean the room." Edward uttered a reason that sounded not that true with a hidden tone that everyone understood. Vivian slightly frowned upon that strange reason and said,

"Uncle Edward, we don't need cleaning in a hurry and it is so late.

"Vivian, please be relaxed. They won't take you too much time. These persons are very quick." Edward wore a faint smile on his face, but his smile did not look very authentic.

Vivian seemed understand his intension: Mr. Hamilton was trying to rummage through the pine garden.

He lost something, so he doubted her?

It was ridiculous!

She went up, took Roe in her arms, and headed toward the living room downstairs, waiting for Edward to finish the search.

Vivian affirmed that there was nothing and their searching team would get nothing.

But half an hour later, Edward threw a file bag in front of her with a serious face. She felt she was hopeless.

The whole room was silent. People looked at each other in shock and looked into Vivian with indifferent eyes.

Vivian's face turned pale and two sentences occurred to her.

One was said by Daniel at the beginning and another was said by Angie yesterday.

Everyone knew the importance of Mr. Hamilton's study, as he was an elder statesman. Everyone knew the importance of the documents he read, and everyone knew the potential turmoil his loss could cause.

"Edward, I really don't know where does it come from, I haven't seen it before, I..." Vivian explained it anxiously, knowing that this explanation might not work.

Edward set his face, "Sorry, Vivian, you might need to talk to Mr. Hamilton." Edward wore a stern face, with no kindness at all.

Vivian felt helplessness.

"Mom, are you going to talk to great grandpa?" Roe asked her rubbing his eyes. Vivian did not answer, just bent over and kissed Roe on his cheek.

Edward adjusted his expression quickly and said, "Little master are sleepy? I let an aunt read you to sleep. Kids can grow tall if sleeping early and getting up early."

Roe stared at Vivian worriedly. He was still waiting for Vivian's answer.

In a terrible mood, she was uncertain about her future, not knowing what would happen in the face of Mr. Hamilton.

After all, they thought they caught me with the missing files.

Vivian faked a smile, and leaned over to hug Roe, "Roe, mom will come back later. You go sleep first and warm my bed for me, OK?"

Roe nodded and kissed her back.

Vivian gave a sigh of relief and left with Edward.

Roe watched those people leave, tears swirling in his eyes.

"Little master, it's time to sleep." A servant came forward told him.

Roe shook his head, "I can sleep by myself."

Without waiting for her to react, he walked towards the room.

After closing the door of his room, Roe quickly rummaged out Vivian's mobile phone. Roe swiped up the phone to dial a number.

Before the call was through, the little boy was so anxious that he cried out to the other end, "Daddy, something bad happened to mom." William was at the other end, and his face changed suddenly.

Chapter 514 I Trust Her

"Mr. Williams?" People nearby all looked at William in doubt, as his face changed suddenly.

William's mind went blank and after a moment of suffocating, he soon thought of Vivian in the old house, Mr. Hamilton's place where no outsider can enter.

So she should be safe.

William stepped aside, "Roe, please explain clearly, what's wrong with your mother?" "Edward took a lot of people to come over and searched our room finding something, which mom said she didn't know. But he still took my mother away, because he said it belonged to great grandpa. Dad, mom can't steal great grandpa's things right?" Roe was clever as he articulated what he saw.

His words were easy for William to understand, so it let him figure it out quickly.

"Roe, you are a good boy. It should be a mistake. I will go back right now, but you need to go to sleep. Don't think too much, okay?" Although William was extremely anxious, he still talked to Roe patiently.

Just when William wanted to hang up the phone, Roe's naive voice said worriedly, "Dad, I can't stop thinking about mom. I want to go find grandma." His Adam's apple moved, kids have the most accurate sixth sense, could Roe also sense that something big was coming? William's said gently, "OK, go find grandma." After hanging up the phone, he sent orders to someone nearby, "Find the whereabouts of Daniel! At whatever cost! Report to me if there is any resistance, and make sure to let me see the result before six o'clock tomorrow morning!"

There was a marked stillness in the atmosphere. As a wanted man on several target lists, Daniel could stay safely in the city of Jin'an for so many years. Now his coming to the J city was still invisible. Everyone knew Daniel's sharp mind, how can such a cunning man be tracked in just a few hours? Instantly, everyone felt they were under great pressure. Soon after, William's car rushed towards home.

The hall of the house was now ablaze with lights.

His parents and Owen who was rarely home were all at the spot.

Vivian, as the center of the storm, was questioned coldly by Mr. Hamilton.

"Vivian, where is the other half?" Mr. Hamilton's eyes were frizzling cold as ice. Vivian's was frightened to the extreme.

She used to think Mr. Hamilton had been treating her in a coldest way. But now, she understood that he had been kind to her actually. It was a combative stare from a man tempered by real battles. The stares were chilling enough to make her wonder why she still existed in the world.

Vivian fell into silence.

Mr. Hamilton didn't believe a word of her, no matter how many times she repeated. She had a sudden feeling that she might get herself killed here.

What was so important to a man who were in such a high position and had lived through all the ups and downs of life? It must be something crucial to the Lu family or something of national importance.

"Father, there must be a mistake, she..." Mrs. Lucia couldn't bear the terrible atmosphere, intending to stop the questioning.

"You take care of Roe, he is afraid to sleep alone." William's father said to Mrs. Lucia.

He was a man, and he knew his father very well. Judging from his father's appearance, he was afraid that it must be a big deal.

Whether it was true or not, it was not something that can be explained in a word right now.

Mrs. Lucia knew she had made a mistake, so she took a sigh and looked at Vivian with encouragement and sympathy, then left.

"Vivian, regardless of whether you did it or not, the fact is it was found in your room." William's father intended to degrade the fight, picking up the conversation.

Vivian suddenly chuckled, "Uncle Sam, the Garden is huge. I have only lived here for few days." Mr. Hamilton was surprised.

Implication was that she did not even know the garden very well, how could she find a spot to hide such a document? Besides, many people were taking care of the pine Garden. It would be an easy task to incriminate her.

Mr. Hamilton was still wrathful. It seemed he was sure that it must be Vivian.

“You have made up your mind not admitting it, right?”

“What’s the point of admitting something I haven’t done, Mr. Hamilton? You have been battling throughout your lifetime, and you must have seen countless people committing a crime. Is it really possible that someone stole something and left the rest of it in his room, only to be found by you?” Vivian looked a little sarcastic. Mr. Hamilton narrowed his eyes and looked at her with sharp eyes.

Certainly He was not stupid. Naturally, he knew there was something fishy in it.

“But you’re the only person who’s ever been in my study today. You’ve only been here for a short time, as you just said. So maybe you’ve put it to a place where you think is safe.”

Vivian smiled, “Then why should I split it into halves?”

“To please the man behind you?” Mr. Hamilton finally said this in a trembling voice after a long pause.

William’s father frowned in doubt when looking at Mr. Hamilton.

Vivian was full of anger and sorrow, and sneered “If you think so, I have nothing else to say. I have no regrets convicted by Mr.

Hamilton.”

The crowd was stunned by her words.

It was as if she had pleaded guilty.

Oven narrowed his eyes, casted a glance at Vivian and whispered to Mr. Hamilton, “Grandpa, this matter has not been investigated clearly. Your conviction might be arbitrary. Aren’t you afraid of my eldest brother making a scene with you when he comes back? Elder brother do not have a good temper like me.”

Mr. Hamilton was unhappy, casting a glance at Oven in a way that he couldn’t understand.

"I am not arbitrary, since the evidence is confirmed. It is important. Our family's living rests upon that. There cannot be any mistake. Moreover, even if someone said it is not her, who buy it?" Mr. Hamilton said indifferently.

"I do!" The crowd looked sideways, as William walked in with the moonlight, and the sound of his leather shoes beating on the floor was a little noisy.

He did not look at Vivian, but directly stared at Mr. Hamilton, and said, "Grandpa, I believe her."

Mr. Hamilton turned furious "William, do you know what did you say? Do you know what she stole today?" "I don't know, but I believe my wife will never do such a thing." William tilted his head willfully.

"You!" Mr. Hamilton got more furious, throwing the file bag to him.

An envelope in soil color flew out before his eyes and landed in his hands.

Chapter 515 Who do you want to protect

William pursed his lips, took the file bag, and opened it suspiciously. Vivian had been staring at him with her eyes since he entered the door.

It was undeniable that she was happy when he said he trusted her.

But when she saw Mr. Hamilton throw something over, her heart was nervous for no reason.

Was that file so important that it would puncture the shaky trust between them at once? Vivian bit her lips, and her palms were filled with sweats.

When William saw the thing inside, his face changed suddenly for a moment. But he quickly calmed down and sealed the document bag again as usual.

“Grandpa, I trust Vivian. I will investigate into this matter personally.” He said firmly.

The stirring words did not ease the tension in Vivian’s heart at all. Because of his tone, she knew the seriousness of the situation from his word. This document was important.

“William! I think you are crazy!” Mr. Hamilton slapped the table fiercely in anger.

William’s eyes swept over the group of people in the room.

He saw Mr. Hamilton was angry, his father looked serious, his younger brother was frowning and a bit annoyed, and his wife was trying hard to calm herself down but still could not hide her nervousness.

William walked to Vivian and held her hand. “Is everything okay? I’m sorry I am late.” “William!” Mr. Hamilton yelled.

William lowered his eyes, “Grandpa, the Lu family does not rely on those vain things, but on excellent descendants.”

“The impact of this thing can be big or small. I will take care of it. I will find out who is behind it and I will make him pay for it!” William’s figure was extraordinarily tall at this moment.

Mr. Hamilton’s eyes were hale and hearty with a bit of coldness. And his lips pursed with a little white.

William did not care about his expression, got up, and took Vivian away.

Mr. Hamilton’s face was gloomy.

Oven got up and stretched his arms. “Grandpa, William is right. You are old, so you should do what you should do as soon as possible. Although William is not in J city, he will never let you feel disappointed in taking up the responsibility of the Lu family. It is getting late, let us go to bed.”

Mr. Hamilton’s face was even uglier, and he looked at Oven with a cool look like a dead man, which made Oven’s heart slightly shocked.

But he was used to his temper, so his face did not change at all. He quickly got up and walked away.

“Edward, you should search for Pine Garden carefully. From today onwards, no one is allowed to visit her.” Mr. Hamilton said loudly.

“Dad, you are going to ...” William’s father stared at him with wide eyes.

Mr. Hamilton put his hands behind his back, “Didn’t he say he wanted to clear the woman’s name? So before his so-called truth is found, Vivian must be closely guarded. I’d like to see how capable this brat really is.”

William’s father pondered for a while and did not know what came to his mind, but he soon acquiesced to Mr. Hamilton’s approach in silence.

And at this time, Vivian had been brought to Pine Garden by William.

“William ...” Vivian felt like a cold sweat all over her body, so when the wind was blowing, her whole body was cold.

William shook his head and held her even tighter, “It is very late, and it is too cold outside, you should go back to rest.”

“William, I know you believe me, but now I also want to help you. There is something fishy about this matter, I just thought of something, so I must tell you.” Vivian anxiously grabbed William’s arm.

William looked at her suspiciously.

Then she said, “There was another person besides me who had been to Mr. Hamilton’s study today.”

William narrowed his eyes, and his expression became a little cold.

“It ... is Oven! And he has also come to the Pine Garden.” Vivian hesitated for a second and then told what happened in the front yard in the afternoon.

William looked stunned and uncertain, and it could not tell whether he believed it or not.

Vivian's expression was apprehensive, and she looked at William with a somewhat excited expression.

She just suspected and was not sure whether it was Owen or not. But since Mr. Hamilton had checked her place, it meant that their people had been checked and excluded from suspicion.

So Owen's suspicion became even bigger.

Vivian's eyes were full of hope. She knew Owen was his brother, and the two were very close. She did not know how much she weighed in his heart, but she had to gamble once.

William's eyes were darkened and she couldn't tell what he was thinking.

Vivian's heart gradually sank.

Finally, when the bright light in her eyes was about to disappear, William spoke. "Were there other people there?" William said in a warm tone.

Vivian gave an awkward smile, and the corners of her mouth were a little ugly, "You don't believe it, right?"

Before William said anything, she added, "No, there was no one else there, only me, so my words can not be proven." She almost thought he was certain that she was lying.

William felt depressed as he hugged her in his arms, "I believe you, don't be anxious and don't be afraid."

He kissed her forehead, "Wait for me, I will definitely give you justice."

"William..." she pulled at the corner of his coat.

William's expression was gentle, "Go to sleep, the baby also needs to rest."

Vivian let him go and could only watch him leave.

The room was silent, and the cold made her shiver a little. Lying in bed, she could not fall asleep.

A sleepless night.

In order to protect privacy, there was monitoring in the Old House, but there were many dead ends. But the place Vivian said was in front of the main building, so there should be some.

However, the most important thing right now was to find the remaining half of the document.

The Lu family had many enemies, but who would try to bring down the Lu family intentionally?

When he was waiting for people to assemble the monitoring videos, he went to Mr. Hamilton's study.

"Edward said you were looking for surveillance?" Mr. Hamilton took a sip of tea.

In the middle of the night, he drank tea to sober his mind, so it seemed that he made up his mind to be deadly consumed.

William responded, "Vivian said there were some doubtful points. And although the study does not have a monitor, people who enter and exit the main building still could be found."

Mr. Hamilton stopped before he said, "Don't waste your time. All monitors were under inspection and maintenance this afternoon, so they were off."

William looked up suddenly, "Grandpa, really?"

“William, you are presumptuous! Do you suspect me of making fun of the Lu family’s fortune?” Mr. Hamilton became angry and fierce.

William narrowed his eyes, “I just wonder if grandpa is trying to protect someone?” Mr. Hamilton’s pupils shrank, but his expression remained unchanged.

But that momentary change was still caught by William’s eyes.

Sure enough, he guessed right!

Chapter 516 Murderer Behind the Scenes

William’s Adam’s apple moved lightly, “Why?”

Why did he say it was Vivian who did it? Why would he help the bad guys frame a pregnant woman? And that woman was his.

wife.

Although Mr. Hamilton had some disciplinary views of family background, he had never cared to do something to a woman, let alone a woman who was pregnant.

But now he had to sacrifice his wife and unborn child to protect a wrongdoer, how could he be willing to do that? Why? Mr. Hamilton was also in a trance for a moment.

“Grandpa, is the well-matched marriage so important in your eyes? After what happened to Oven’s wife and child at that time, do you still want to see the old thing happen again?” William’s eyes were a little red and he stared at Mr. Hamilton fiercely.

Mr. Hamilton’s face changed instantly. There was a flash of pain, regret, and reflection.

For a long time, just when he thought he would not answer, he heard Mr. Hamilton sigh.

“William, he hates me!” In just one sentence, it was clear who the real culprit was.

William’s lips were pursed into a straight line.

“Do you know what kind of situation our Lu family will be in if that document is taken by someone with an intention to do something about it? I do not want to see those old things happen again, that’s why I want her to leave as soon as possible.

William, you are not married yet. Whether it’s Vivian or that child, there is no need for them to follow us and get involved in the tisk.” Mr. Hamilton sighed, and he had made his intentions clear.

William looked a bit dazed, his eyes clear and cold, and he looked outside, “Is he thinking the same ...”

“Maybe. He has been unhappy all these years and would have wished me to die. But he made all people in the Lu family involved, and he is just too ruthless, too ruthless!” Mr. Hamilton said, his eyes red, the wolfishness and fierceness that had not yet disappeared.

William suddenly got up.

“William!”

“Grandpa, no one has to pay for his faults, at least, the Lu family shouldn’t!” William stopped and said in a gruff voice.

Mr. Hamilton’s face was depressed and sighed deadly.

When Owen heard the knock on the door, he grinned and drank his glass of red wine.

He opened the door, “William, are you looking for me to talk about the old days at this time?” William responded to him with a fierce fist. With a bang sound, Owen fell to the ground.

Getting up and wiping a handful of blood from the corner of his mouth, Owen smiled, “William, it’s late at night, and this gift is a bit too much, right?”

William narrowed his eyes, which were full of ruthlessness, “Where is the other half of the document?” “What are you talking about? I can’t understand it.”

“Cut the crap, let me ask you, who did you give the other half of the document to?” He stepped forward, strangled his neck, and said viciously.

Oven laughed, “It seems that I really have to be more careful next time. There is no other way. Vivian came at the right time, so I can only let her take the blame. I am really sorry, William.”

What Oven said had not a bit of sincerity, and William could not help but want to whack him twice.

Letting go of his hands, William looked at him coldly, “Say, what do you really want to do?” “I don’t want to do anything, but I’m just bored and looking for some fun in life.” Oven was still smiling.

However, his smile slightly disappeared, “Grandpa has lived too well in these years, so it is necessary to find something for him to do. The reason he could stand high above the masses relies on the century-old foundation of the Lu family. So I want to see how noble he can be without these gaps between him and the commoners.”

“William, are you not tired of watching him looking for things to do with you and Vivian every day? I am also helping you out!” Oven laughed again.

William stood up straight, “The hundred-year foundation of the Lu family is not something that can be destroyed by virtue of that, and the thing about Vivian and I do NOT need you to care about. As for grandfather, he is your elder; no matter what he has done, he is still your elder.”

“William, we are both adults, why do you need to speak to me in such a lecturing tone? I’m not a three-year-old child!” Oven grinned, “As for the hundred-year foundation of the Lu family, that depends on whether you can keep it or not!”

William gave him a meaningful look, “Good!”

Suddenly, William turned around and wanted to leave.

Oven shouted, “William, you understand how many enemies the Lu family has, do you want me to help you to take care of Vivian?”

“No need!” His voice sounded like it was squeezed out from his teeth.

However, the next day, Vivian almost had an accident.

William did not sleep all night. As soon as he got the news of Daniel, he hurriedly ran home.

As soon as he entered the door, he pulled Vivian and said, “Are you okay? What happened in the end?”

Vivian shook her head, “I’m fine, Auntie saved me, and now ... she is still being treated.” Mr. Hamilton ordered no one should visit her, one reason was to ensure her safety, but to prevent her from thinking wildly, William asked them to withdraw this order.

As a result, Auntie knew the incident last night in the morning, rushed over, and just in time for breakfast with Vivian.

Vivian did not have any appetite, so she did not eat much, but Auntie ate a lot.

The accident happened within half an hour after breakfast.

When William heard servants said the whole thing again, his face turned black.

Vivian touched his hand, “Don’t worry, it’s an accident, Auntie will be fine.”

William let go of her hand and turned his head towards the outside.

The place where Auntie was now being treated was a separate building for the medical staff.

Oven was also on guard outside at this time.

Seeing William coming over and his eyes looking at him critically, he stood up straight the first time. And his face was serious, and he said earnestly, “It’s not me!”

He only had a grudge against Mr. Hamilton, not against his mother.

And the scene of Vivian was too similar to the scene of his girlfriend back then, so he would not poison Vivian.

On the contrary, he wanted to help her by the hand of Mr. Hamilton, so she could escape from the Lu family when the danger approached.

William said in low voice, "Who else can I suspect now but you?" Oven fixed his mind, and his eyelids flashed.

Was he threatening him?

Just letting the Lu family encounter a disaster, perhaps his parents could understand him. But if he poisoned people, this would let him be utterly isolated.

Finally, he smiled lightly, "Well, I gave that thing to Daniel. As for who he is, I believe you know better than me. As for the matter of poisoning ... I will deal with it!"

No matter who that person was trying to deal with, it was his mother who was suffering now.

So he had to step in.

William was silent for a moment, searching for an answer.

As for the person behind Daniel, he narrowed his eyes with a chill in his heart.

When someone stood high, they turned a blind eye to the immensity of heaven and earth.

Chapter 517 Put in Jail

As expected, William did not care about his Auntie being poisoned. But on his first day back, he heard from Vivian that Angie had been sent away.

An hour before being sent away, she planned to escape. In the end, she was caught, the baby was aborted, and blood stained the bench.

Also, the inspection report came out, and the child really had nothing to do with the Lu family.

Vivian didn't know how she felt, especially when she hadn't completely cleared her suspicion yet.

There were too many people coming in and out of the Lu family's old house recently, and no one seemed to care about her.

Even Roe could feel the strange atmosphere. Vivian was always nervous and almost miscarried.

William was fairly frightened. He was busy these days and had no time to come back to sleep.

Hearing the doctor said that she tended to have a slight miscarriage, he was worried and went home.

"It's okay. I know you are busy, and you can go on with your work. I just haven't slept well recently, and will make adjustments.

later." She gently soothed.

William nodded. He really had no time to care about her, and he knew what was in her mind.

Mr. Hamilton brushed all things aside and didn't go out every day. He looked as if he was expiating. The other people in the Lu family who held important positions did not dare to move at will, lest they be caught tripping, and they contacted with each other by phone. He held on alone, and had to find a way to get the opponent to act as soon as possible, so he was almost exhausted.

But now, all the precautions were done, and they just wait to draw the snake out of its hole.

After lunch, it was rare to rest at home for a while, so William intended to accompany her to take a nap.

Vivian was very delighted and immediately let servants change a new quilt cover.

“Stay with me, okay?” He asked softly, clasping her around the waist.

Vivian nodded and lay down obediently. She stroked his chin, which was a little stubbly.

William usually paid great attention to his image, so it showed how tight the time was to let him be so unkempt.

“William, is it because of the document?” Was that why he was so tired? Was that why the Lu family had been so strange recently?

William turned his head and put his hand to cover her eyes, “Don’t think about it. Can’t you hear that my daughter is going to bed?”

His other hand consciously touched her stomach. Vivian opened her mouth and then closed, giving up asking.

They woke up at three o’clock in the afternoon.

They got up and went outside. Several men in uniform stood up, “Captain William, are you up?”

William’s eyes swept over them, and his expression remained unchanged even after he clearly recognized which department those uniforms belonged to.

“Yes.” He replied gently.

They looked at each other, thinking it was rare to see someone who didn’t fear them at all.

That was because few people could come out well after the disciplinary inspections.

“Comrade William, we are from the discipline inspection division. Recently we have received a report about you, so please come with us and help us with the investigation.” The man held out his work permit and said in a strong voice.

William nodded and said nothing more, but Vivian’s eyes widened. Everyone knew what those two words meant and what those who go in would experience.

There used to be a lot of big trees’, but after the baptism of discipline inspection, they all ‘withered’.

“William...” She bit her lip and looked worried.

William smiled lightly, turned around and kissed her on the cheek, and said softly, “Trust me, and take care of our daughter and son at home.”

Several disciplinary inspectors glanced at each other. They were used to seeing resistance and hysteria, and it was the first time they saw such a calm scene.

But they did give a light cough to signal that it was time to go.

So, Vivian helplessly watched him being taken away.

Was that the power of that document? She covered her mouth in an effort not to cry.

The eldest grandson of the Lu family was taken away, which seemed to be just the beginning. In the next few days, William’s father, aunt and uncle were taken away one after another. Several relatives who did business outside the Lu family regime began to suffer in their business.

The servants would tell Vivian the news every day, and she didn’t know who arranged these people. But hearing this news at this time always made her frightened.

But thinking of William’s words before leaving and her children, she could only force herself to take a good rest. However, the pain of the soul could not be relieved with reasoning.

Then, her lower body was bleeding again.

This time William was absent and the doctor’s advice was invalid. Mrs. Lucia could only move over to live with her, and let Roe sleep with her at night, trying to relieve her tension.

“Mom, will it be all right?” Vivian grasped Mrs. Lucia’s arm anxiously.

Today, one of the elder members of the Lu family was ousted.

Mrs. Lucia patted her hand, "Vivian, you know what our Lu family does. Some things look terrifying to others, but they are actually nothing. The Lu family is not as fragile as you think, although there is indeed a crisis this time, but you can rest assured."

How could Vivian rest assured?

Seeing her like this, Mrs. Lucia could only say quietly, "Mr. Hamilton takes the Lu family's century-old estate more important than anything else, but now he doesn't care about it and leaves it alone. Don't you think it's strange? Mr. Hamilton's comrades in arms have all passed away, and he is the only one alive. He is a person who stomped to cause an 'earthquake'. How could he be easily overthrown? These men have their plans, but they are afraid that we are worried, so they didn't say anything. You can rest assured."

Vivian thought carefully and felt what Mrs. Lucia said was reasonable. So she felt better at last, just a little, of course.

Since the Lu family's accident began, there have been few visitors. Everyone seemed to avoid the Lu family.

Until the fifth day.

Finally, a few people quietly came to Lu family to find Mr. Hamilton.

Mr. Hamilton looked at the young man's energetic face and sighed inwardly, "The young men really have great ambitions." "You have worked hard," Mr. Hamilton said first.

Joe waved his hand, "We have been brothers with William for many years. This time we're not here for the Lu family, but for him.

Mr. Hamilton, this is what he asked us to give you. Now that the task is complete, please act quickly. It won't be so easy when they're ready!"

"Okay!" Mr. Hamilton was not long-winded.

When Mr. Hamilton finally sent Joe out, he looked at the clouds and slowly said, "I'm old, and in the future, the world will belong to your young people!"

Joe smiled, waving his hands and walked away rakishly.

Chapter 518 She Missed Him (The Finale)

After Joe left, Mr. Hamilton finally took action, risking his identity. He had resigned long ago, but attended the meeting and vindicated personally.

A pile of crimes were presented. The alternation of power caused turmoil for the entire J city's top officials.

Of course, the effect was also very obvious.

The first day, William's aunt was set free.

Then, William's father went home.

After that, several people from the Lu family, who had been taken away for investigation but had no news before, came out.

Finally, it was William.

On the day William was released, Vivian got the news in advance. She dressed up and waited for a long time.

Finally, she was told that he had an emergency and couldn't come back.

Her eyes grew pale. Mrs. Lucia couldn't bear it.

“Vivian, the Lu family’s turmoil has just ended. William has a lot of work to do, and it is normal for him not to come back at this time. By the way, we haven’t been out for a long time. You are ready today, so let’s go shopping. We can buy some necessities for the baby in your belly.” Mrs. Lucia tried to persuade her.

Vivian didn’t have much interest in shopping, but Mrs. Lucia was very happy. So she finally followed her. She didn’t come to J City for shopping very often, so she relied on Mrs. Lucia to give directions. However, the location where the car stopped at the end did not seem to be a shopping mall.

Vivian looked around doubtfully, “Mom, do you want to buy anything here?”

“I don’t want to buy anything, but you want!” Mrs. Lucia laughed.

Before Vivian reacted, she was taken off the car.

As soon as Vivian got off, she turned her head and was stunned.

Not far away stood a man in a black windbreaker, slightly stubbly, with a tired look on his face.

It was only half a month since she had seen him, but he seemed to be mature.

Vivian’s eyes were red. She missed him.

William smiled and held her with open arms.

Vivian said in a sobbing tone, “Why don’t you go home after coming out? I’m so worried. What on earth do you want?”

“It’s my fault. It’s my fault!” He said in a tolerant tone, and then his voice was serious, “Vivian, I think a lot in the jail. I wonder if the Lu family can survive this crisis, how we can win Grandpa’s approval, and how I can convince you that I love you so much.

But finally, I think about how to make your identity right and proper.”

Vivian was struck dumb.

William bent down and knelt on one knee, “Vivian, don’t you think we also need a marriage certificate?”
Vivian covered her mouth.

She was touched, tongue-tied, and at a loss whether to cry or to laugh.

“William, you’re crazy!” She laughed with tears as she said, “No one will propose on a desolate road, with no flowers or diamond ring.”

William glanced at Mrs. Lucia, who was watching.

“Of course, we have fresh flowers and diamond ring!” Mrs. Lucia understood immediately, took out a handful of red roses from the trunk and handed to William with a small box.

William opened the box, took Vivian’s hand and put on the pink diamond ring, “I started to arrange for it the first day we came to J City. It was lucky to be in time for the proposal.”

Hearing this, Vivian felt warm in her heart. She soon realized that he had put the ring on her finger.

“I haven’t promised you yet,” she minced. “Why did you put the ring on?” “Do you still want to refuse?”
William raised his eyebrows and stood up.

Vivian opened her mouth, but did not dare to say no.

He nodded with satisfaction, took her hand and walked forward. “Come on!” “Wait, where else?” Vivian was confused.

William had no choice but to pull her head and look to another place, “Vivian, do you really think my choice of this place to propose marriage is not meaningful?”

A few big words were popping in front of Vivian, Marriage Office.

So, his intention was to get a marriage license right away?

William took Vivian into the office, and she had no idea where he got her household registry. Before she could get her head around it, they had already collected the marriage license.

The speed was astonishing.

Thus, Vivian officially became the real Mrs. Lu.

Mr. Hamilton did not oppose it, and William's parents were happy to see it.

After the turmoil, the Lu family's power rose to a new level.

None of those who knew what Owen had done in it blamed him. But he left a letter to his parents and went away.

No one knew where he had gone.

Roe's operation was done within three days after William came back. The operation was successful. Roe would be able to run and jump like an ordinary child.

The moment she got the news, Vivian cried like a child. Regardless of the fact that she was pregnant, she cried heartily at the door of the ward.

William, with tears in his eyes, held her in his arms and felt moved.

Vivian gave birth to a daughter in the winter, who William had been longing for.

During her confinement period, William handled all matters of the baby. By the time Vivian finished a month of confinement, he was even more skilled than her in holding the baby. He coaxed the baby patiently every day, so that Vivian was a little jealous.

The baby's birthday fell on Valentine's Day, which led William to say proudly that his daughter was his sweetheart in a previous life, so she chose to be born on Valentine's Day.

Of course, the words unavoidably made Roe unhappy. Roe always felt that his status was threatened, especially when grandparents and great grandfather were apparently fond of his little sister.

So he became more attached to Vivian. But for William, a man who abstained from sex for 10 months, it was a tragedy.

In the meantime, William, who was a daughter fan, naturally became the object that Joe and other friends pushed aside.

James, in particular, wanted to steal his daughter away every time he showed off.

Both Grace and Selina remained single, so they were very jealous of William with both a son and a daughter. Grace also wanted to join James to steal the baby.

William almost refused to associate with them.

June, in Jin'an City.

William lovingly held his daughter in his arms. The combination of a black suit and the adorable baby in his arms was really eye-catching. Vivian was in a dress and stood next to him. She looked as young as a college graduate, and really didn't look like the mother of a four-year-old son.

They shut their eyes to envious glances around them. Vivian looked at the familiar city and smiled.

William turned his head, and the sun sprinkled on her head and warmed his heart.

The end.
