Chapter 761

$15,000,000 was very tempting.

Who would not be tempted by that amount of money?

Quintin did all this for the money. He might have lost $7,500,000 in the process, but getting $15,000,000 in return made everything worthwhile.

Nolan took out his cell phone, contacted Quincy, and got him to inform the bank to prepare $15,000,000 in cash.

Quincy knew that something must have happened to Nolan, so he dispatched some men to Winston Island while getting the bank to prepare the money.

Quintin was by Nolan's side while he was on the phone. Seeing that he did not play any tricks, he said with a smirk, "You're prepared to give out $15,000,000 like it's nothing. You're really something, aren't you? By the way. I haven't asked you for your name."

Nolan smiled. "I'm from Bassburgh, and I own a company in Bassburgh. You can call me Mr. Yates."

The middle-aged man thought it made sense. “Mr. Quintin, $15,000,000 isn’t a small amount.”
However, Quintin ignored him and glared at Nolan. “I’m curious. Since you can come up with $15,000,000, why don’t you transfer it directly instead of bringing it to us in cash?”

Nolan’s eyelids twitched. “I told you that I’ll be paying you the $15,000,000 in cash, and you’ve agreed to it too, haven’t you?”

Quintin thought of something all of a sudden and got up abruptly with a gloomy expression. “Are you trying to buy time?” Nolan neither denied nor admitted it. At that moment, someone hurried in from outside and shouted, “Mr. Quintin!” He approached Quintin, leaned over, and whispered something into his ear. Quintin then smashed the wine glass in his hand to the ground.

“You’ve played me again!”

Quintin’s subordinates approached the exit in an orderly manner and blocked it.

The police broke in through the door at this moment, and those who reacted to it fled, while those who got shot fell to the ground and were subdued. The scene was chaotic for a couple of minutes.

Quintin was pressed against the ground, detained, and then taken away in handcuffs by two police officers.

Nolan's vision turned blurry, and he vaguely heard someone shouting at him.

'It sounds like Helios, and...'

"Nolan!" Maisie burst into tears, knelt beside him, and hugged him in her arms as warm tears dripped onto his blood-stained cheeks.

Nolan saw Maisie, who was weeping before his eyes, and moved his lips before completely losing consciousness.

Nolan was carried onto the ambulance and taken to the hospital. Maisie was always by his side, grabbing onto his hand, which was getting colder and colder.

The doctor put a mask onto Nolan's face to supply him with oxygen and performed cardiopulmonary resuscitation on him.

Chapter 764

Nolan had been in a coma for four days when Nicholas sent a private jet to Winston Island to transport him back to Bassburgh Hospital. Quincy stayed back on the island to deal with the developers and Quintin. It was obvious that the incident had enraged Nicholas.

And because of the injury that Helios had suffered, Yael did everything in his power to impeach the upper management of the Winston Island jurisdiction,

All the hot spring businesses on Winston Island involved in violent crime and investment frauds were closed down. Even the directors of the development companies had to abandon their righthand men to protect their reputations as they tried their best to cut ties with any hot spring businesses that Quintin owned.

They even submitted a list of Quintin's accomplices to the police anonymously and the evidence of illegal activities he was involved in over the years.

Even though the Goldmanns and the Bouchers could not infiltrate Winston Island with their influence, this was the first time both families had their eyes fixed on the same goal for the sake of their son, and that was to demolish the fraud syndicates that existed on Winston Island

The elders of the Bouchers had never taken a liking to Nolan as a kid, and neither did Helios' grandfather.

Still, Helios knew very clearly that it was because he had met Nolan when he was a child that he knew what kind of person he wanted to be, what kind of life he wanted to live, and how he could choose a path in life that would not make him regret.

He then added, "I wouldn't have grown up to be the Helios that you know today if I hadn't met Nolan back then."

Richard's expression looked cold and stern. He got up and left with a sullen face in the end. Yael stopped in front of his son, raised his hand, and placed it on his shoulder. "Just do whatever that you want to do."

Helios froze in place and looked up." Father..."

Yael's grasp intensified before he retracted his hand, turned around, and went upstairs.

Helios walked out of the villa while Francisco was leaning against the wall, with his arms crossed. "Helios, I've regarded you as an idol ever since I was a boy because you excel in so many aspects of life when compared to me. Not to mention that you've always been the grandson that our grandfather valued and appreciated more."

He faced Helios and grinned after saying that. "But I now realize that I seem to have lived a much happier life, so it turns out that I'm also a man that you would envy."

Helios scoffed. "You're now the only hope the Bouchers have left, so don't learn from me."

Before Maisie could do anything, Nolan's thumb lightly touched her finger.

Ryleigh laughed, and her shoulders shook." I didn't lie. Mr. Goldmann is conscious!"

Maisie got up, sat on the edge of the bed, and bent down to look at him. She put his hand to her face and cried happy tears." Nolan, you can feel this, right? You can hear me too?"

But after a long time, Nolan didn't respond, nor did he wake up.

Still, it was good enough that he was conscious.

Helios heaved a sigh of relief and rubbed his forehead. "Thanks for helping me get out of this."

"I'm here with my cousin."

Francisco rushed over right after Helios said that. "Hels, didn't I tell you not to walk around?" Francisco finally found him, then looked over to Barbara. "Who are you?"

Barbara was silent.

The car parked nearby hadn't driven away. Helios watched the scene unfold and felt complicated.

He was really too careless.

Francisco asked, "Hels, are we leaving?"

He looked back and rubbed between his brows. "Let's go home."

One week later, at Soul Jewelry...

"Uncle Kennedy, why don't you rest a little longer?" Maisie saw that he was already in his office and was worried about his injury.

Kennedy raised his arm and smiled. "It's almost back to normal now. It's fine, don't worry."

Maisie sat on the couch and flipped through a magazine. Ryleigh put one dress on and walked out. The

She changed into another one, but the color was too bright. It wasn't suitable.

Ryleigh changed a few times, but Maisie shook her head every time. She asked the shopkeeper to bring the one that she had looked at just now to her and sent Ryleigh back into the fitting room.

It looked a lot better than the few before that.

After trying on a few more, Ryleigh leaned on the wall, exhausted. "Zee, I'm going to die from trying.'

Maisie thought with a hand under her chin and pointed at the one that the shopkeeper was wearing.
"Try that one."

"Another one?"

Ryleigh and Maisie left the salon. Maisie saw how Ryleigh hung her head and looked lazy, so she put a hand behind her back and tapped it. "Stand straight, be confident."

Ryleigh didn't know if she should laugh or cry. "I'm just going for an interview. Is this necessary?"

Maisie said in a serious tone, "Of course, think about it. A lot of professors at the music academy are young. You should focus on your presentation. You can't attend an interview without being serious."

Ryleigh thought what Maisie said made sense, so she nodded. "You're right. I'll stand straight."

She stood straight.

Maisie chuckled and poked her waist. "Be more natural."

Ryleigh avoided it out of reflex and covered her waist. Maisie wasn't happy, so she tickled her.
